FIVE KILLED, OHIO INTERURBAN HITS WORK CAR HEAD-ON

Crash Occurs on Turn Near Springfield and Passenger Carrier Is Telescoped—22 Persons Injured.

STORM AND TRAFFIC JAM DELAY RESCUE

Superintendent Says Line Car Motorman Had Right of Way, Other One Had Orders to Go on Siding.

By the Associated Press.
SPRINGFIELD, O., Aug. 10.—
Trapped in a telescoped interurban passenger car, five persons were killed today and 22 injured, several seriously.

A northbound work car of the Cincinnati & Lake Erie Traction
Co. collided head-on with the southbound passenger coach near here today.

The two cars came together on a curve during a rain storm. The old-fashioned, high-built work car enveloped the passenger car a third of its length.

The dead:
Charles Murray of Urbana.
Roy Zimmerman of Springfield, motorman of the passenger car.

Miss Ruth Gibson, 25 years old, of Westerville, identified by a cher's certificate.

An unidentified woman.
Miss Helen Wingfield of Bellefontaine, who succumbed several hours after the accident.

Ran Past Switch.
Superintendent Curtis of the C.
& L. E. Line, said Zimmerman ran past a switch where he had orders to go on the siding and let the line car pass.

He said Zimmerman was "an old and trusted employee" of the company.

A. N. Allen of Bellefontaine, motorman of the work car, told an ambulance driver that he had the right-of-way and that the passenger coach should have taken a side track.

He later told Curtis his car was going about 20 miles an hour when the accident occurred. He said he could not judge the speed of the other car. Curtis said the passenger coach probably was moving between 50 and 55 miles an hour.

Traffic Jam Hampers Rescue.
Every ambulance in Springfield and Urbana responded to the calls for help. Doctors and nurses forced their way to the scene through a traffic blockade that extended a mile.

Volunteer rescue workers and company employees dug into the wreckage quickly with axes.

Witnesses said the two cars came together with a loud crash.
The passenger coach, a light, low car, literally was sheared in two.
Deputy Sheriff Ben Holley, en route to the scene of an automobile wreck, was the first to report the collision.

"I was driving along the road when I saw the wreck," he said.
"The work car had telescoped the passenger car and the injured were piled all around. The storm that had just passed had crippled telephone service in this district and I drove into town."

YOUNGEST ROOSEVELT JOINS FATHER ON FISHING TRIP

Shouts 'No' to Photographers as He Comes From Job in Tennessee Valley.

By the Associated Press.
ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 10.—John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, joined his father's fishing party late today. He came from his job in the Tennessee Valley and waited in the Washington station until a White House chauffeur found him.

He then hurried up a stairway, shouting "no, no, no" to reporters and photographers. To the reporters he said "one thing I know how to do is to keep quiet." To the photographers he said: "Franklin has given a pretty good demonstration of what we can do." His brother, Franklin Jr., once smashed a camera.

Young Roosevelt flew to Chesapeake Bay, where his father was fishing with Senators Bayley (Dem.), Kentucky, and Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, and Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator. Other guests included Mrs. Byrnes, Miss Marguerite Lehman, a secretary, and Capt. Wilson Brown, navy aid.

63 KILLED WHEN LANDSLIDE HITS VILLAGE IN PHILIPPINES

10 Injured, 30 Houses Buried at Balangon; 200 Deaths in Floods on Luzon.

By the Associated Press.
MANILA, Aug. 10.—Sixty-three villagers were killed at Balangon by a landslide caused by torrential rains, the Bureau of Non-Christian Tribes was informed today.

More than two hundred deaths have resulted from rains and floods in various parts of the island of Luzon this week.

The landslide hit Balangon Tuesday night, buried 30 native houses, seriously injured 10 persons and equalled 70 homeless. Gov. William E. Dwyer of Bontoc subprovince reported. Nineteen bodies have been recovered by natives.

Kingsford-Smith Pays Claim at San Pedro, Cal.

By the Associated Press.
SAN PEDRO, Cal., Aug. 10.—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian flyer, arrived here today aboard the liner Monterey and redeemed his plane, "Lady Southern Cross," which had been attached by a San Pedro court.

Sir Charles said his financial difficulties had been settled by the Australian Government's purchase for $15,000 of the original "Southern Cross," first plane to fly from America to Australia. The plane is now in the Commonwealth Museum at Canberra. He said he had settled all claims against him, including the one which led to attachment of the ship.

79 Equals Heat Record in Frisco.

By the Associated Press.
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 10.—No body but the U. S. Weather Bureau was particularly conscious of it, but a 49-year-old heat record was equalled today when the mercury touched 79 degrees at 1 p. m. The last time it was that warm in San Francisco on Aug. 10 was in 1886, the bureau reported. The average maximum temperature for August is 65.2 degrees.

HOPE IN CONGRESS FOR ADJOURNMENT WITHIN TWO WEEKS

Possibility Session May Close by Saturday but Leaders Say 'Sometime
Before Aug. 25'

SENATE AGREEMENT TO CURTAIL DEBATE

Tax Bill Expected to Reach Floor in Day or Two—Three Measures Held Up in Conferences.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—With the social security bill out of the way and the new tax bill scheduled to reach the Senate early next week, leaders tonight were hoping adjournment of Congress could be arranged by next Saturday, but were more confident that they could wrap up the session the following week. Veteran leaders predicted the end would be reached "some time before Aug. 25."

Senator McNary (Rep., Oregon), said that as soon as the tax bill was out of the way leaders would have difficulty holding a quorum. Chairman Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, agreed there was "strong sentiment" for adjournment next week, but said Congress would "have to move awfully fast" to do it. He said adjournment Aug. 20 or a few days later was more likely.

80 For Prolonging Session.

More than 80 members of the House had signed a petition urging Congress to stay in session until the inflationary Finance-Lend Lease $3,000,000,000, far refinancing bill and rail pension measures have been acted upon.

In the Senate, Senator Long of Louisiana intends to offer his "Share-the-Wealth" program as an amendment to the tax bill. There is a "gentlemen's agreement" among most other Senators to cut short debate.

Aside from the tax bill, the chief obstacles to adjournment are conference differences between the two houses on the utility holding company bill, the banking bill and the TVA amendments.

President Roosevelt is reported to have told Chairman Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, of the Conference Committee on the utility measure, that he wanted a bill at this session even if a compromise was necessary on the disputed section calling for compulsory dissolution of "unnecessary" holding companies.

The Guffey coal bill has not passed either house, but Chairman Doughton (Dem.), North Carolina, forecast the House Ways and Means committee would act Monday and the measure would be sent to the Senate before the end of the week. There is some sentiment in the Senate to let it die, rather than delay adjournment.

Congressman Suffers Collapse.

One Congressman's collapse and another's death have increased demands for early adjournment.

"I believe at least 100 members of the House could be classified as ill," said Representative Maverick (Dem.), Texas. "We are being maimed politically and shot in health."

Following the death of Representative Truax (Dem.), Ohio, yesterday, it was learned that Representative Sutphin (Dem.), New Jersey, was in a hospital following a physical collapse.

Truax died of heart disease in his apartment four hours after leaving the floor of the House.

Acting Majority Leader Taylor of Colorado said he felt Congress should go home "as soon as the tax bill is passed."

"The quicker we get out the better," agreed Minority Leader Snell of New York.

Maverick said that "the mental processes of more than two-thirds of the members have become tired and befuddled and unable to understand the reasonable application of legislation."

FARLEY SPEAKS IN HAWAII

BENEDICT ARNOLD'S SLOOP, SUNK IN 1776, IS RAISED

Bones of Crew and Cannon Balls Found by Salvagers on Lake Champlain.

By the Associated Press.
BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 10.—The battle-scarred sloop Philadelphia lay in shallow water near here today after resting nearly 160 years at the bottom of Lake Champlain. A part of Benedict Arnold's fleet, the Philadelphia went down in defeat at the Battle of Valcour Island Oct. 11, 1776, in a fight with British men-o-war.

The sloop was raised yesterday by a derrick aboard a lighter. As its mast, still proudly erect, showed above water the salvage crew halted operations to tie a Colonial flag back at its top.

Searchers found in the ship bones of the men who had manned it. They also saw three holes in the hull below the water line, mute testimonials to the fire of a British crew. Several cannon balls also were found. The sloop's gun platform was just as it had been when the ship sank and the gun carriage was in position on its 15-foot runway. The boat measures about 45 feet in length.

Although Arnold was defeated, historians say he delayed the British advance from Canada toward the Hudson River and the expedition was postponed until the following year, thus giving the Colonists time to make better preparations and defeat the British in the Battle of Saratoga.

6 NEW YORKERS BAIL AN HOUR TO KEEP BOAT FROM SINKING

Rescued After Small Cruiser Hits Submerged Wreckage on Fishing Trip.

By the Associated Press.
MANASQUAN, N. J., Aug. 10.—Six New Yorkers and the crew of the 45-foot cruiser Aphrodite bailed water for an hour late today to keep the craft from sinking after it had struck a submerged piece of wreckage. They were rescued 12 miles off Manasquan inlet.

The cruiser, owned by John Vaneck of New York, had on board Vaneck and his wife, Craig Vaneck, New York architect; William de Mille, brother of Cecil de Mille, the motion picture director, and Mrs. de Mille, John Lewis Hay and two seamen.

The party was 23 miles out on a tuna fishing expedition when the accident occurred. The automatic pump was unable to throw out the water fast enough and every one seized gaily utensils and buckets, and bailed.

The cruiser Blow Me Down, owned by Ferdinand Roebeling Jr. of Spring Lake, finally took them off. The Aphrodite was taken in tow.

WEDDING IS PREVENTED BY IMMIGRATION OFFICERS

Refuse at Niagara Falls to Let Bride Enter Canada or Bridegroom Cross to New York.

By the Associated Press.
NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 10.—Mary McCormack of Niagara Falls, N. Y., and John De Flice of Niagara Falls, Ont., were to have been married here today. The Rev. H. A. Waited at St. Anne's Church for the bride party. At the home of De Flice, 23 chickens were roasted and bowls of spaghetti were ready for the tables.

In her wedding gown, Mary McCormack went to the lower bridge. At the other end of the span she could see her future husband and his attendants waving bright ribbons.

But immigration officials refused to permit her to enter Canada. They gave no reason. Nor would the Canadian officials let the bridegroom cross into the United States. They said he had once been deported.

For an hour the two parties tried to straighten out the tangle. It was no use.

Finally the bride-elect went back to her home and the bridegroom went back to his.

LAVAL CALLS ON ALL FORCES TO UPHOLD DECREES

REPUBLIC'S LIFE AT STAKE, HE SAYS

Situation Quiet at Ports Where 4 Were Killed in Riots Over Government Pay Cuts

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Aug. 10.—Premier Pierre Laval, asserting that the republic's life was "at stake," appealed today to all forces for support of his emergency recovery program. He told the people, through the prefects, they must discipline themselves or else drastic measures would be used to enforce the decrees.

Deaths in port riots of the last few days reached four when a worker succumbed to injuries suffered at Brest. Left-wing leaders advised their followers against further disorders over government pay cuts.

Prefects, who were told yesterday they would have plenty of "worries" if they failed to get busy and make the government decrees work, were back at their posts today with a program of action. Laval summoned the prefects to organize them in the campaign to see that living costs are reduced in line with wage cuts. A committee was appointed to set the tariffs, much in the manner of Great Britain.

Laval, when he got the decrees powers, promised to be "equally unpopular" with everyone. His 41 recent decrees hit many who escaped wage and pension cuts. These are intended to balance the others by reducing costs, stimulating business and hoarding savings from business corruption.

Toulon will bury its two riot dead tomorrow with troops and police in the background, but ready for action.

Although disorders apparently are at an end for the time being, posters urged workers to prepare themselves for a fight for their demands. War veterans were forbidden to hold a scheduled meeting in Toulon tomorrow to protest pension cuts.

Police announced tonight they were holding 36 of the approximately 80 persons arrested during the Toulon rioting, the others being freed after brief hearings. One worker pleaded guilty to a charge of rioting and was sentenced to 25 days in prison and fined 50 francs.

At Brest today a sergeant of Colonial Infantry on duty at the dockyard drew his revolver and seriously wounded one of a group of assailants.

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 10.—Charles F. Urshel, Oklahoma oil man, filed suit for $12,000 today against Ben B. Laska, Denver attorney convicted of conspiracy in the kidnaping of Urshel in July, 1933. The suit charges Laska received $12,000 of the $200,000 ransom as a fee from Albert L. Bates, one of the kidnapers now serving a life sentence for the abduction.

Mother, Child She Seeks to Recover

THEODORA ANNETTE NEALON.

WIDOW SUES TO REGAIN CUSTODY OF DAUGHTER

Mrs. Beatrice Nealon Says She Permitted Adoption, Believing
She Was Fatally Ill.

Suit was filed at Clayton yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Nealon, a widow, 5024 Raymond avenue, to recover custody of her daughter, Theodora Annette, 6 years old, who was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Farris, 807 Bemiston avenue, Clayton.

The petition explained that the question of adoption was raised in November, 1933, when Mrs. Nealon and her late husband, Thady Nealon, were critically ill with tuberculosis in a hospital at Deming, N. Mex.

"The plaintiff was led to believe that her case was hopeless and that she would never leave her bed," the suit stated. The adoption, "arranged by a Catholic nun, who is a sister of Mrs. Nealon's, was recorded Jan. 12, 1934, with the consent of the parents."

A condition of adoption, Mrs. Nealon said, was a promise by Mr. and Mrs. Farris that they "would keep sacred" the memory of Theodora Annette's parents, and that the child would retain her family name. The suit stated that, to the best of Mrs. Nealon's belief, her daughter is known under the name of Farris.

The mother also alleged that she has been denied permission to communicate with or see her child. Mrs. Nealon, 32 years old, asserted that she was now physically and financially able to take care of her daughter, and she asked the Court to set aside the decree of adoption.

Farris, district manager here for the General American Life Insurance Co., said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he intended to contest the suit. Asked if he and his wife had grown to regard the child as their own, he replied: "Of course, that is why we will contest."

FIVE REPORTED HELD IN PLOT TO KILL PRESIDENT OF MEXICO

Resident of Cardenas' Home Town
Said to Have Confessed; Found With Pistol.

By the Associated Press.
MEXICO CITY, Aug. 10.—An attempt to assassinate President Lazaro Cardenas is reported to have been frustrated by the arrest of five men, who are being held incommunicado at police headquarters.

It was learned from military sources that one of those held, Reuben Gomez Prado, a native of Jiquilpan, State of Michoacan, which is Cardenas' home town, was carrying a pistol and 11 cartridges when seized at Uruapan after he is said to have followed the President there.

Prado is said to have confessed he intended to kill the President. He is quoted as saying, "They sent me here to kill Cardenas."

Cardenas is at present in Patzcuaro, Michoacan. Police continued to deny tonight that they had arrested Prado or anyone else, or that they knew of any assassination plot.

EFFORT TO KILL BILL, SOME THINK

Changes to Increase Estimated Revenue From $250,000,000 to $400,-
000,000 Likely to Meet Opposition on Floor.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—A Progressive-Conservative coalition in the Senate Finance Committee today voted to increase income taxes, beginning at a new low level of $800 a year. The committee voted to reduce the income tax exemption for a single person from $1000 to $800 and for a married person from $2500 to $2000 a year.

Also they substituted higher estate taxes for Mr. Roosevelt's requested inheritance taxes and made other changes in the new tax bill estimated to increase its revenue-raising power from $250,000,000 to the amount estimated when it passed the House—to more than $400,000,000.

Estimate of Revenue.
The estimates of the revenue that would be produced by the bill, as revised in committee, follow: Increased estate and gift taxes, $86,000,000; higher income and surtaxes, $220,000,000; higher excess profits taxes, $78,000,000; increased capital stock tax, $45,000,000; higher tax on large corporations, $15,000,000. Total, $444,000,000.

The committee completed revision of the bill but postponed a final vote until Monday so that drafting experts would have tonight and tomorrow to write the measure.

One of the last actions was approval of the House provision exempting from corporation income tax donations to charity up to 5 per cent of the net income. President Roosevelt had opposed this exemption.

In Senate Wednesday, Perhaps.
Chairman Harrison (Dem.) Mississippi, said he hoped to report the measure Monday or Tuesday, with consideration by the Senate starting Wednesday. Night sessions might be held, he said, to "speed it along."

He added that he voted for the income tax schedule adopted in committee and would vote for it on the floor, but could not predict what others would do.

He thought the Senate would approve the income tax schedules unless the President "raised his voice against them." He did not look for Administration objections, he said, in view of Secretary Morgenthau's statement that the Administration would not attempt to write the rates.

UTILITY LEADERS 'WELCOME' POWER AS ISSUE IN 1936

P. H. Gadsden Says 2,000,000 Stockholders Have Been Tabulated by Congressional Districts.

THINKS THERE ARE 3,000,000 MORE

This Is What Roosevelt Will Be Up Against in Campaign, Executives' Spokesman Asserts.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The power industry tonight challenged President Roosevelt to make a 1936 campaign issue of the utilities bill and holding company abolition.

"We'd welcome it," said Philip H. Gadsden, who as chairman of the committee of public utility executives directed the recent intensive campaign against such legislation.

Companies represented by his organization, he told newsmen, have 5,000,000 stockholders and "each one has two or more votes in his house for an average." That, he added, "would give us some 10,000,000 votes on that issue alone."

Tabulation of Investors.
Gadsden, asserting his organization came to Washington prepared to spend whatever amount might be needed to defeat the utilities legislation by legal methods, said the first undertaking was tabulation of 2,000,000 stockholders by congressional districts.

Members of the House were informed of the number of stockholders among their constituents, he said, and were told that names and addresses would be furnished if requested.

"That is the thing President Roosevelt is going to run up against in the next campaign, especially if he makes an issue of the holding companies," Gadsden said. "We wish he would."

Otherwise, Gadsden reiterated his assertions in a statement issued last night, that the activities of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee constituted a "wicked example of Government terrorism," and that Chairman Black (Dem., Ala.), was wrong in contending that the consumers of gas and electricity must, in the long run, pay the cost of the campaign against the utilities bill.

Burden of Expense.
"It isn't so—or at least not all," Gadsden said. "The very large part is being borne by the holding companies which get their revenues out of dividends so it must come from the stockholders of the holding companies."

"And the small proportion of the cost borne by the operating companies is only just, because section two of the bill would subject them to the expense that experience and delay of going to Washington instead of their State commissions every time they wanted to build a line extension."

"I'm sure the State commissions will allow these items as operating expenses."

Asked about Black's prediction that the total cost of the campaign would run to $5,000,000, Gadsden declined to make an estimate.

"There was $12,000,000 worth of property at stake," he said. "Each group that spent money is accounting for it in questionnaires sent out by the Black committee. Of course, it will run into a considerable amount of money."

Gadsden asserted that Black "is not an investigator into facts, but a prosecutor who attempts to misstate and insinuation to blacken the character of any witnesses testifying before him."

The Black committee, the House Rules Committee, also investigating lobbying on the utilities bill, and the Senate-House Conference Committee on the measure are all in recess. Each, however, planned to resume its activities Monday or Tuesday.

River Victim Had $4000 in Gold.
Special to the Post-Dispatch.
DENVER, Aug. 10.—The safety deposit box of Jasper S. Raymond, oil man who was drowned in the Platte River near Saratoga, Wyo., in July, was found to contain nearly $4000 in United States gold coins, possession of which was outlawed more than two years ago by the President's gold order, when it was opened today by an inheritance tax examiner. United States Attorney Thomas J. Morrissey said the coins would be turned in at the Federal Reserve Bank in exchange for currency.

Telescoped Traction Cars After Crash

wish to be quoted, said: "The Senate's changes might be designed for the simple purpose of killing the bill. Some members of that committee didn't want the bill passed anyhow."

President Roosevelt had confined his recent tax message proposals for a "wider distribution of wealth" by higher levies on big income, big corporations and large inheritances, but the Finance Committee approved an amendment by Senator LaFollette (Prog., Wis.), to reduce exemptions. As a partial offset for the lower exemption to married persons, it permitted an exemption of $400 each for children up to 20 instead of 18 years as at present.

The LaFollette amendment also increased income surtaxes, starting at 4 per cent on the first $1000 above $3000 of net income and running to 75 per cent on the excess above $5,000,000.

The normal tax of 4 per cent would begin in a statement issued last night, that the activities of the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee constituted a "wicked example of Government terrorism," and that Chairman Black (Dem., Ala.), was wrong in contending that the consumers of gas and electricity must, in the long run, pay the cost of the campaign against the utilities bill.

The present surtax rates start at 4 per cent on the first bracket above $4000 and mount to 59 per cent on that above $1,000,000. The House increased surtaxes only on incomes over $50,000.

Vote Against Inheritance Tax.
The House inheritance tax proposals were rejected by the committee by a vote of 11 to 8.

The following Senators voted against them: King, George, Walsh, Gore, Bailey, Byrd, Lonerger and Gerry. Democrats: Keyes, Metcalf and Hastings. Republicans.

These Senators favored them: Harrison, Barkley, Connally, Coston, Black and Guffey. Democrats: LaFollette, Progressive, and Capper, Republican.

Higher Estate Levies.
In lieu of the inheritance taxes ranging from 4 to 75 per cent approved by the House to be superimposed on existing estate rates, the committee increased the estate taxes to provide a range of rates from 2 per cent on the first $10,000 to 70 per cent on all above $50,000,000, with an exemption of $40,000 instead of $50,000 as at present.

Existing estate taxes, applying only to estates before they pass to heirs, are levied under two schedules. The first, under the 1926 law, starts at 1 per cent and runs to 20 per cent, and the second ranges from 1 to 60 per cent. Both maximums up at $10,000,000 and under the latter scale a credit of 50 per cent is allowed for State taxes, in paying the Federal levy.

The committee also defeated a proposal for a graduated corporation income tax more in line with the President's scale and accepted the narrower range approved by the House.

Harrison Beaten, 7 to 6.
The House corporation income taxes of 13 1/2 per cent on $15,000 and less and 14 1/2 per cent on more than $15,000, were accepted in lieu of Chairman Harrison's amendment proposing rates of 12 1/2 to 15 per cent and those proposed by the President of 10 1/2 to 16 1/2 per cent.

The existing corporation tax is a flat 13 1/2 with 2 per cent added for the privilege of filing consolidated returns.

The committee reduced the House excess profits tax rates to provide a tax of 5 per cent on profits between 10 and 15 per cent of a corporation's adjusted declared value, and a rate of 12 per cent on profits above 15 per cent.

The House scale ran: 5 per cent on the excess profit between 8 to 12 per cent; 10 per cent on that between 12 and 16; 15 per cent on that between 16 and 20; and 20 per cent on profits above 20 per cent.

To make up for the reductions in this schedule the committee increased the existing capital stock tax from $1 to $1.50 a $1000 and provided that a corporation might fix new valuations annually.

Harrison said the inheritance tax question was the "most delicate" faced by the committee. He recalled the vigorous opposition to

GERARD AND MUSSOLINI IN HALF-HOUR CONVERSATION

Former U. S. Ambassador to Germany Denies He Is On Official Mission.

By the Associated Press.
ROME, Aug. 10.—James W. Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany, was received today by Premier Mussolini in a half-hour audience after which Gerard said, "He treated me with the utmost cordiality."

Gerard said they talked freely but "you can absolutely knock down any report I am here on a mission for the United States Government."

"He is a man I always wanted to meet," said Gerard. "I held great admiration for him in the past and hold still greater admiration for him now."

CLARK M'ADAMS UNDERGOES OPERATION; DOING WELL

Contributing Editor of Post-Dispatch Taken Ill Suddenly; Is At St. Luke's Hospital.

Clark McAdams, contributing editor of the Post-Dispatch, successfully underwent a preliminary intestinal operation yesterday at St. Luke's Hospital, and was reported by the attending physician as comfortable and doing well.

The principal operation will follow in a few days or as soon as the patient's condition will permit.

Mr. McAdams, who resides at 6041 West Cabanne place, has been under medical care for some time, but has been at his desk from day to day and became seriously ill only Friday.

POST AND ROGERS AT DAWSON

Hundreds of Miners Greet Flyer and Humorist.

By the Associated Press.
JUNEAU, Alaska, Aug. 10.—A special dispatch to the Juneau Empire tonight said that hundreds of miners had swarmed into Dawson, Y. T., to greet Wiley Post, round-the-world flyer, and Will Rogers, screen star and humorist, there on a flying vacation.

It added that Post might take Rogers to Akavik, N. W. T., to visit Nicholas Sokoloff, agent of the Soviet, who has established headquarters there to give weather data to the Russian flyers who plan a flight across the North Pole to San Francisco. Dawson's famous visitors spent today visiting mines and creeks in the Klondike area.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES BREAK DUE TO HOG CHOLERA REPORTS

Infected Herds Discovered in Northern and Eastern Iowa and Western Illinois.

By the Associated Press.
DES MOINES, Ia., Aug. 10.—Danger of further curtailment of pork supplies by cholera in two Midwestern states caused a 2-cent break in Chicago grain prices today. Corn, weakening on the prospect of a reduced outlet for hog feeding, pulled wheat down with it.

Infected herds are reported in Northern and Eastern Iowa and Western Illinois. Hormel Packing Co. officers denied infected animals had been found in their runs at Austin, Minn.

Dr. H. S. Seidell, Iowa veterinarian, said many hogs in this State were infected by diseased animals "bootlegged" into Iowa.

Outbreaks in 10 Iowa counties were reported by the Eastern Iowa Veterinary Association, but Dr. Seidell asserted the cholera was no worse than in ordinary years.

NEW YORK RELIEF STRIKE SHOWDOWN DUE TOMORROW

Johnson Orders Men to Return Then or He Will Hire Other Workers to Take Their Places.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Both sides are preparing for a showdown Monday in the work relief wage dispute between labor unions and the Government.

Work relief officials refused to recognize the existence of a "strike" and prepared to hire replacements as rapidly as men walked out.

George Meany, president of the State Federation of Labor, said that by Monday the city's 36 building trade unions will have stopped their workers on "all the jobs we haven't yet reached." They were determined to hold their ground, he said, despite President Roosevelt's warning that those who turned down relief jobs would be out of the dole.

Test to Come Monday.
Approximately 2000 of the 10,000 to 15,000 union men employed on Works Progress Administration projects had answered the strike call up until last night. Today was a holiday, but Administrator Hugh S. Johnson ordered all men to be back at work Monday, if they wanted to keep their jobs.

Tenement House Commissioner Langdon W. Post directed that work be resumed Monday on the only project halted by the strike, regardless of whether the men hired for the job returned or not.

If they do not, he said, workers would be recruited from the National Re-employment Service.

The project, a slum clearance job on the lower East Side, employs 362 men, of whom 170, including most of the skilled workers, have walked out. Post, citing President Roosevelt's assertion that refusal to accept relief work could not be called a strike, said it followed that replacement of the men could not be construed as strikebreaking.

Commenting on the Government's position, Meany said: "I think that Hugh Johnson would like to be convinced by the President that it isn't a strike."

Cause of the Strike.
The walkout was voted Thursday night as a protest against the Government's security wage scale, which in New York ranges between $55 and $93.50 a month for 120 hours work. The unions want the prevailing hourly scale, which in the case of carpenters, for example, is $1.40 an hour. Under the Government scale, they contend, carpenters receive only 73 cents an hour, and they demand that, regardless of how many hours are worked, the union scale be adhered to.

Gen. Johnson told them that they could earn more under the security wage over a long period, as they were assured of six months' work, than they could in private employment, where he said they "never were sure of a job."

Union leaders replied that they were fighting more for the principle than the money involved.

Asked what the strikers would do when their jobs were filled by other men, Meany replied, "wait until it happens." The Strike Committee intends to establish picket lines Monday.

Two hundred white-collar demonstrators called at Gen. Johnson's office today with a set of demands not directly related to the strike. The General was out of town.

The Worcester (Mass.) Building Trades Council, with 13,000 members, has indicated a strike call on PWA-WPA projects, beginning Sept. 1.

American Federation of Labor executives expressed divided sentiment on the dispute, with Vice-President George L. Berry siding with Gen. Johnson and J. W. Williams, head of the building trades department, blaming the "brain trust" for the strike.

PWA ENGINEERS STUDYING ST. LOUIS RIVERFRONT PLAN

Neither Ickes Nor Hopkins, Though Tentatively Pledging Federal Aid, Is Familiar With It.

HARD FIGHT TO GET THAT FAR WITH THEM

How "Lost" Memorandum Was Found, and Mayor's Delegation Finally Got an Audience.

MAYOR COINS SLOGAN, PUTS CITY WORKERS INTO BOND ISSUE CAMPAIGN

Mayor Dickmann announced yesterday that all city employees will be required to assist in the campaign for the $7,500,000 bond issue for the city's share of the cost of the proposed $30,000,000 river-front memorial to Thomas Jefferson and the development of the West. The election will be Sept. 10.

The campaign will be started this week, the Mayor said.

"Let's go back where we belong," was suggested by the Mayor as a slogan for the bond campaign. He said he had in mind restoration of St. Louis to the place as fourth largest city in the United States, which it held in 1910. It is now seventh.

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Although Harold L. Ickes, PWA chief, and Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, have tentatively agreed to advance work relief and PWA funds sufficient to finance the first year's work, which will be chiefly raising of buildings on the proposed riverfront Jefferson memorial in St. Louis, neither is familiar with the plan except in general outline.

Subordinates speaking for them—both had joined the rush of officials seeking a cool refuge from the heat of Washington today—said that the plan had received virtually no study. It has, of course, been called to the attention of Ickes, Hopkins and Frank C. Walker of the National Emergency Council several times, but only in general form and not from an engineering point of view.

It might be necessary, a PWA official said, to hold public hearings on the project. Since Ickes and Hopkins gave the tentative approval to the project, several PWA engineers have been put to work studying the proposal as submitted by the St. Louis Memorial Association. Before it is finally approved, Ickes would insist, one of his subordinates said, on a thorough examination. This is the procedure he has followed in the past.

No Promise, Ickes Said.

At his press conference on Thursday Ickes made it plain that he had "promised" nothing. He expressed himself as hopeful that an agreement for the St. Louis project could be worked out.

At Hopkins' office it was said that the allotment committee, of which Hopkins is chairman, had never considered the proposal. It will of necessity come before this committee for approval.

The only official who has any working knowledge of the project whatsoever, is Col. Horatio B. Hackett, assistant PWA administrator. An outline of the project has for some time been on Hackett's desk although he has given comparatively little study to it. Hackett is still in the West on a tour of inspection of PWA projects. When in St. Louis a week ago he pointed out that railroad tracks would run through the proposed national park and raised the question whether St. Louis would tolerate the presence of the elevated tracks in the proposed memorial.

"Lost" Memorandum Found.

The way in which the St. Louis delegation, headed by Mayor Dickmann and Luther Ely Smith, chairman of the Memorial Association, finally obtained tentative approval for the proposal is illustrative of how much of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund is being spent. A detailed outline of the proposal was first submitted May 3. The St. Louis group fostering the project spent several days here then. Hackett, its members caught the attention of Walker and Ickes and got what they regarded as an "encouraging" reaction from both men. Then for several weeks there was considerable confusion as to whether Ickes or Hopkins should get the detailed memorandum submitted by the St. Louis group. A factor seriously considered by the sponsors was the known jealousy between Ickes and Hopkins over authority and prestige in administering the works program. For a time the memorandum was definitely "lost." It finally required a telephone call to find it on Col. Hackett's desk.

Again several St. Louisans visited Washington and Russell Murphy, executive secretary of the Memorial Association, spent a considerable part of his time for weeks going from office to office. It was found difficult or impossible to bring Ickes and Hopkins together. Both men are constantly under tremendous pressure, not only from special groups for special projects with special political backing, such as the St. Louis project, but from various interests with regard to the broad outlines of the work relief program.

Getting an Audience.

Finally, last Monday, Dickmann and the other sponsors of the project realized that something must be done at Washington, with the bond issue election scarcely more than a month away. The enabling act had been passed and a considerable sum had been spent in preparation for the election. The Mayor, Smith, Murphy and Gale F. Johnston came by plane to Washington.

They went directly from the air field to the Capitol to see Senator Barkley. Barkley, after some difficulty, got in touch with Ickes' secretary, who said that Ickes would be unable to see the St. Louis delegation before the following morning. It must be understood that Ickes' calendar of appointments is filled solidly days in advance from 8:30 a. m. until almost 7 p. m., with a stream of Mayors, Congressmen, Senators and every kind of public and private official.

The St. Louis delegation was unable to get in touch with Hopkins and it was necessary to see both men if an agreement that meant anything was to be obtained. Late that evening Senator Clark succeeded in getting a tentative promise from Hopkins that he would go to Ickes' office to confer with the St. Louis delegation in the morning. Hopkins arrived after the St. Louis delegation had been with Ickes for nearly half an hour. He indicated that he would go along with Ickes on the project, so that it would be possible to get Federal money from the old PWA fund and from the new $4,000,000,000 Works Relief fund if it proved necessary to handle the financing in that way.

It is problematical whether either Ickes or Hopkins has more than glanced at the detailed outline of the memorial as submitted by the St. Louis association.

Those most familiar with the confusion prevailing over allotment of works relief funds give the St. Louis group a large measure of credit for extracting the agreement from both Ickes and Hopkins.

Limitation on Bond Issue.

The attention of several officials who have taken an interest in the project was called to the fact that the enabling act, which grants the Federal Government permission to acquire the site and authorize the city bond issue, limits the bond issue to one-fourth of the total amount to be expended by the Federal Government or an authority to be created by the Federal Government. They were asked whether failure of the Federal Gov-

WOMAN CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLING INSURANCE FUNDS

Mrs. Wilhelmine Meyer, 61, Ex-Collector of Assurance Society, Held in $1280 Shortage.

A charge of embezzling $1280 was made against Mrs. Wilhelmine Meyer, 61 years old, a former collector for the North American Union Life Assurance Society, Sylvan Council, in a warrant issued yesterday by Assistant Circuit Attorney Ollan.

The shortage was discovered last March and covered a 3-year period, according to information furnished the Circuit Attorney.

Complaint against Mrs. Meyer was filed by Dr. P. P. Lobig, a dentist, 3854 Fairview avenue, a collector for the society, and Joseph Koepfer, auditor. Sylvan Council has its headquarters at 3631 Salena street.

Mrs. Meyer, residing at 2300A South Twelfth street, was arrested last Thursday at the Campbell Paint Co., 108 Gratiot street, where she was regularly employed as a clerk. Policemen reported she told them that she had been making restitution, but had not completed the payments. She was a collector and bookkeeper for the society since 1912 at the nominal salary of $60 a year, doing the work in addition to her regular employment.

Asked about memoranda of horse race bets found in her purse, Mrs. Meyer admitted betting, but said gambling was not responsible for the shortage. She has not furnished bond, and is in custody at police headquarters, where she refused to discuss her case with reporters. The case will be presented to the grand jury.

GALLI CURCI SINGS AS GOITER IS REMOVED BY SURGEONS

Operation May Improve Doctor Says, Local Anesthetic Used.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Mme. Amelita Galli-Curci, famous operatic soprano, sang in the operating room of Hennepin Hospital today while surgeons successfully removed a six and a quarter ounce goiter.

Carefully, as she sang, Dr. Arnold Kegel, former City Health Commissioner, cut away the growth which was pushing against her trachea. Near by an anatomical artist sketched the various stages of the operation so each may be studied later.

While Drs. Kegel and G. Raphael Dunley would make no definite comment on the final outcome of the operation, they indicated they thought the quality of her tones would not be impaired.

"Madame Galli-Curci will only have to adjust her voice to 50 per cent increase in air volume she now will have," said Dr. Kegel.

For 15 years presence of the goiter on the right side of her throat had been known to Galli-Curci. Five years ago it began to bother her. Only by sheer will power, however, was she able to achieve maximum volume.

"Grand" was the term Dr. Kegel used to describe the operation. He said it might even result in improvement of her voice.

Recovery of the growth, he said, created a deviation, pushing out one of the trachea, to 75 per cent of its extent, one and three-quarters inches. A local anesthetic was used.

ernment to live up to this condition, after the city had expended its share, $7,500,000, to acquire the site from the present owners, might raise a question as to the city's obligation under the bonds. The officials declined to comment.

One official, who has been especially active in co-operating with the committee, suggested that the whole situation was at present so "delicate" that he felt he could say nothing for publication. He said, however, that that very problem had been discussed at length by "eminent counsel" and that a satisfactory conclusion had been reached.

LIGHTNER AND BECKER WIN ZEDTOWITZ BRIDGE TROPHY

They Defeat Chicago Pair by Two and One-Half Match Points for Master's Championship.

By the Associated Press.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 10.—Theodore A. Lightner, of New York, and B. Jay Becker of Philadelphia, the favorite partners of Ely Culbertson and P. Hal Sims, tonight won one of the outstanding titles in contract bridge—the master's pair championship.

The winners scored 625½ match points, with the runners-up getting 623. In third place was the New York pair of Wademar Von Zedtwitz and Louis Watson, with 607, and fourth were Oswald Jacoby and David Burnstone, also of New York, with 599.

The play was unusually tense, and Jacoby, in chagrin, hit his head against the wall when he pulled a boner in play that meant the difference between a "top" and a "bottom" score on a hand.

150 JOBLESS IN CITY TO MAKE FEDERAL INCOME TAX SURVEY

List to Be Drafted, Consisting Only of Persons From Families On Relief.

Under the Treasury Department's proposal to expend $120,000 of work relief funds for a statistical compilation and analysis of Federal income tax returns, notably of persons with moderate incomes, 150 such examiners will be employed in the Eastern District of Missouri. All such employees must come from families on relief rolls.

On receiving notice of the number to be employed in this district, which embraces the City of St. Louis, the local Collector of Internal Revenue requested Mrs. Mary Cruzen, head of the Missouri Employment Bureau, and E. S. Stephens of the Missouri State Re-Employment Bureau, to submit a list of qualified persons from which selections could be made. Mrs. Cruzen in turn referred the matter to Dr. Russell Bader and C. O. Kette of the Missouri Employment Service office, 1806 Washington avenue, and they will compile a list of persons for the jobs.

GRANITE CITY THEATER MAN ROBBED OF $120 IN OFFICE

"Sorry to Have to Do This," Says Holdup Man on Leaving With Money.

After pacing back and forth in front of the cashier's cage at the Washington Theater, Granite City, last night, a man about 35 years old with his coat thrown over his arm, walked into the office of Manager Harry C. Swan, sat down, and began to read a newspaper.

Swan looked up and the man, putting his paper down, said, "I believe in laying my cards on the table, don't you?" "Sure," Swan said. "Well, there's my card," the man, laying a revolver down on the desk, "let's have your bucks."

Swan took a tin box from the edge of the desk and handed over $120.50, part of the night's receipts. "I'm sorry I have to do this," the robber said, "but circumstances sometimes make it necessary. I might be able to return it some day."

President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Interior Ickes will send the society greetings on Monday.

NATIONAL LEAD CO. IS BEARING BRUNT OF TIFF STRIKE

Pigments Firm Operating in Washington County, Mo., Is Subsidiary of $88,000,000 Concern.

The National Lead Co., which is bearing the brunt of the strike of Washington County tiff miners because a subsidiary, the National Pigments & Chemical Co., employs about 25 per cent of the miners and is dominant in the fields, is a New Jersey Corporation with subsidiaries and holdings both in this country and abroad.

The company's balance sheet, last Dec. 31, showed a total of about $88,000,000 in capital stock and surplus. Cash assets were listed at $5,387,000 with total current assets of more than $40,000,000. It employs more than 2500 persons in its plants and offices.

The stock, as in the case of many big corporations, is widely distributed among many of the smaller shareholders being employees. Only 25 individuals own as much as 1000 shares of a stock issue which includes more than 300,000 shares of common, 103,000 of Class B preferred and 243,000 of Class A preferred.

James A. Casleton, a director of the lead company and vice-president of the National Pigments & Chemical Co., with offices in the International Office Building, said yesterday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that all the directors were employees and that the company was free of "banker control."

Income Rose Last Year.

In the report for last year, presented to the forty-third annual meeting of stockholders of the National Lead Co., a net income of more than $4,200,000 was recorded. After paying dividends on both classes of preferred stock outstanding, totaling about $1,926,000, earnings applicable to common stock amounted to about $2,273,000, equal to $8.37 on 271,500 shares outstanding. Both sales and net income showed substantial increases over the preceding year.

Discussing Government bonds and other marketable securities held by the company, the report appraised them at more than $13,000,000, observing that their market value was about $720,000 in excess of book value. The marketable securities, it was pointed out, "largely represent investments where the company's best interest is fostered through business affiliation."

Products manufactured in the company's plants range from castor oil to stearic acid. The company produces painters' materials, bearing metals, plumbers' materials, printers' materials, canners' supplies, lead oxides, and miscellaneous metal products.

Corporations in which the lead company is interested through ownership of all or part of the capital stock include: the United States Cartridge Co., ammunition makers; the Virginia Lead Smelting Corporation; the Titanium Pigment Co.; and the Titan Co., Inc., manufacturers of titanium oxide pigments with holdings in Germany, France and England.

It is interested also in titanium oxide plants in Norway. It is represented in Canada by the National Lead Co. of Canada, Ltd., and makes anti-friction metals through the Hoyt Metal Co. of Great Britain, Ltd.

In the domestic field it is interested also in the Baker Castor Oil Co., the American Lead Corporation, the Midwest Carbide Corporation, and other concerns. It acquired the National Pigments & Chemical Co., a St. Louis concern, in 1923, buying all of its capital stock. It also controls the St. Louis Smelting & Refining Co.

WASHINGTON U. PAIR'S ELOPEMENT DISCLOSED

Miss C. Inez Wilson Wed Secretly to Frederick L. Deming Feb. 4.

Miss C. Inez Wilson, daughter of former Mayor Edward F. Wilson of Webster Groves, and Frederick L. Deming, son of F. K. Deming, a history teacher at Cleveland High School, were secretly married last Feb. 4, their friends learned on receipt of formal announcements yesterday.

The marriage took place at Waterloo, Ill., as an elopement. Announcements were issued following departure Thursday night of Mrs. Deming and members of her family for a vacation near Grand Haven, Mich.

Deming expects to receive a position as a history teacher out of the city next month, when he and his wife will make their home wherever he may be employed.

In June, subsequent to the marriage, Mrs. Deming was graduated from the liberal arts college of Washington University and Deming received his master's degree in history. He received his bachelor's degree at the university a year previously. She is 21 years old and he 23.

She is a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority and in college took part in various campus activities, including Theta, the dramatic society, and work on three publications, Student Life, the Hatchet and the Dirge. Deming, a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, engaged in debating in college. His family home is at 5400 South Thirty-seventh street. Wilson, a real estate dealer, resides at 225 South Elm avenue, Webster Groves.

BRIGGSDALE, Colo., Aug. 10.—Tom Everett reported a meteor narrowly missed his head as he was hoeing today. He said he heard it whizz by and saw a cloud of dust where it struck. He found a molten mass so hot he had to let it cool before he could pick it up. Egg-shaped, it weighed half a pound.

NEW ATHENS WOMAN KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Car of Miss Minnie Holst Sideswiped Near Belleville—Mother, 75, Injured.

Miss Minnie Holst, 46 years old, of New Athens, Ill., assistant cashier of the First National Bank at Freeburg, was killed at 6:30 p. m. yesterday when an automobile she was driving was sideswiped by another on State Route 13, 20 miles south of Belleville.

Her mother, Mrs. Gustave Holst, 75, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Belleville, suffering from cuts and bruises. Both women were thrown out of the car. The driver of the other car, Clyde Zoller, New Athens filling station attendant, and his two passengers were treated at New Athens for cuts and bruises.

In addition to her mother, Miss Holst is survived by a brother, Fred, of 4633 Vernon avenue, St. Louis.

Driver Loses Life When Auto Hits Bridge Partition.

Charles Stege, a laborer, was killed at 2:30 a. m. yesterday when his automobile hit the steel partition dividing traffic lanes on the bridge in Natural Bridge avenue, west of Clara avenue. The bridge, crossing railroad tracks, has been the scene of other accidents.

Stege, 48 years old and residing at 1716 Grove street, Wellston, was driving west when his car crashed into the partition, which is about six feet high and equipped with reflectors. He was dead when taken from the wreckage. The body was taken to the morgue, where it was identified by his wife, Mary.

PRICES ASKED FOR ON LARGE SHIPMENT OF MULES TO ITALY

East St. Louis Dealer Tells of Recent Inquiry for 2000

East St. Louis mule dealers and commission houses have been receiving inquiries on the prices of large shipment of mules from Italian dealers, it was learned yesterday.

J. J. Searcy, president of the St. Louis Horse and Mule Commission Co., said he had received an inquiry for 2000 pack mules of a type described as follows: 14.2 to 15 hands high, heavy boned, and with a thick mane. He said that that type of mule was not plentiful enough in the United States now to fill an order of that size, if it came.

It is the same type of mule his company has been shipping to Italy for the last 11 years, sometimes as many as 1000 a year. Searcy said any deal would be on a cash basis. He said he thought the inquiry for the larger number was because of the Italian army mobilization.

ITALO-ETHIOPIAN ARBITERS TO MEET AGAIN THIS WEEK

Conciliation Commission, Which Quit in Deadlock, Is Due to Get Together in Paris.

3-POWER PARLEY ALSO SCHEDULED

Rome's Delegates to Negotiate With French and British Under League
Council Formula.

By the Associated Press.
GENEVA, Aug. 10.—A conciliation commission on the Italian-Ethiopian dispute, deadlocked once, will make a fresh start next week in its effort to keep Italy and Ethiopia from war.

Prof. Pitman B. Potter of the United States, one of Ethiopia's two representatives on the body, disclosed today the Italian delegates had agreed to resume the conversations next Friday in Paris.
At the same time and in the same city will be held the tri-Power conference of Italy, France and Great Britain. This conference probably will start Thursday.

Action of the League of Nations Council at its recent session made possible a resumption of the deliberations of the conciliation commission, whose meetings in the Netherlands broke up.
A fifth member of umpire has not been chosen by the commission.
The body now apparently is in deadlock, until the umpire is named, since it has two Italian and two Ethiopian representatives.
The League today convoked a meeting of the Council Sept. 4, when the Italian-Ethiopian dispute is to be examined from all angles.
Hope was expressed in League circles for a peaceful settlement of the problem if Ethiopia would accept economic assistance from the League. Italy, it was said, might be appointed to carry out this economic development. Such aid has been given in the past to Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria.

decks of the flag cruiser Zara watched tactical maneuvers of the first naval squadron.

Military maneuvers which will employ more than 500,000 men, began Thursday in Northern Italy with a mock air battle in which five squadrons were engaged, an official communique said.

A royal decree ordered subalterns and technicians of the air force classes of 1909 and 1910 recalled from the military reserves for an indefinite time.

The bitter press campaign against England, which has brought representations from that country, continued, with charges of British "hypocrisy."

Newspapers said that while England sought to withhold Italy from Ethiopia, it was "orientating" itself to a policy of collaboration with Japan at the expense of China.

This interpretation was given reports that Sir Frederick Leithrope, British financial expert, would confer with Japanese economists this autumn.

After recalling English opposition to Italy's East African program and with sarcasm the failure of the Lytton Commission to halt Japanese advances in Manchuria, La Tri-buna said:
"London begins to pay court to Tokio. It is true the morality of this capital from the viewpoint of the league covenant is rather dubious, but when the question of a 'good marriage' is under consideration, London seems disposed to close not only one but both eyes."

Gaetano Polverelli, former press spokesman for Mussolini, wrote in Mussolini's d'Italia against the threat of sanctions against Italy implied in some British newspapers, asserting sanctions were not employed against Japan or against Paraguay or Bolivia.

A Government spokesman denied Athens reports that the island of Rhodes had been made into a hospital camp for soldiers returned from East Africa.

Ethiopia Said to Have 250,000 Men Under Arms.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, Aug. 10.—Ethiopia intends to throw an army of 600,000 men into the field if war comes with Italy, said a report today from Addis Ababa.

A Reuters (British) news agency dispatch said Emperor Haile Selassie had already armed 250,000 men and named six divisional commanders, one of them his son, 10-

TESTIMONY ENDS IN TRIAL OF 4 FOR DETROIT MURDER

Prosecutor, Closing Argument, Says Man Who Shot Lawyer Was 'Worse Than Rattlesnake.'

By the Associated Press.
DETROIT, Aug. 10.—Prosecutor
Duncan C. McCrea described William Lee Ferris as "worse than a rattlesnake" today in his closing argument at the trial of Ferris and three women for the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney.

Testimony was completed today, and there were indications the case would go to the jury Tuesday.

"A rattlesnake at least rattles before it strikes," McCrea told the jury, referring to the defendants' statements that they feigned friendship with Dickinson and then plotted during a drinking party to kill him to obtain money to finance a tent show.

Ferris and three former burlesque house dancers have repudiated their confessions, charging they were made under duress.

In Detroit on Business.
Dickinson, in Detroit in connection with a claim against the $40-000,000 estate of William H. Yawkey, was shot to death the night of June 26 and his body left in a deserted section of Rouge Park.

The four said they struck up an acquaintance with him when the women "gave him the eye" as he sat in the barroom of his hotel.
"You intended to take his life," McCrea accused Ferris. "You intended to kill him."

Turning to the women defendants, the prosecutor pointed an accusing finger at each.
"And you, Florence Jackson, and you, Loretta Jackson, and you, Jean Miller, your finger was on that trigger, too, when the gun was fired that killed Dickinson."

McCrea told the jury that the sole contention of the prosecution is that Dickinson was murdered for the purpose of robbery, and that all four defendants were equally guilty and should be sentenced to life imprisonment, the maximum penalty in Michigan.

McCrea said the Yawkey estate had no relation to the death of the attorney. Florence and Loretta Jackson had said in their testimony that Ferris was looking for
"some papers."

Rebuttal Witnesses.
Prosecution rebuttal witnesses denied statements by Ferris that he was beaten and kicked before he signed a statement that he killed Dickinson. Physicians who examined him after his confession testified he showed no marks of violence.

McCrea concluded his argument by pointing again at the three women.

"You can cry at the trial," he said, "but you were not crying when your fingers were on the trigger of the murder gun with Ferris.
You weren't crying when you sat in a hotel room and said, 'Let's take him out and hit him on the head.' On those occasions you neglected to cry."

Judge John A. Boyle recessed the trial until Monday morning, when Ralph B. Guy, attorney for Ferris, will present his final argument.

COTTON MORE PROFITABLE THAN COFFEE IN BRAZIL

Sao Paulo Report for June Shows Staple Leading Country's Main

By the Associated Press.
SAO PAULO, Brazil, Aug. 10.—
The State Department of Agricul-put would exceed 3000 United States bales, 500 pounds each, and would bring in about 70,000 contos ($5,600-month would bring in no more than 85,000 contos ($5,200,000).

The report was viewed as indicat-

For August, Madam, something new!

The Cold-meat Board

Selected by the DeMilles, of Hollywood

... Summer eating at its best ... and a kitchen holiday, too

THE DeMilles, of Hollywood, selected it. Marie Gifford, of Armour's, planned it cleverly to take you away from the hot stove. And now Armour presents it as the MEAL OF THE MONTH for August. It's a meal to cheer for. You prepare it in a jiffy—then serve it gaily in the kitchen, on the porch, or even in the garden. Here, Madam, is perfect summer eating for your family—and a kitchen holiday for you!

Wholesomeness and economy in Armour's Ready-to-Serve meats

A marvelous variety of Armour Ready-to-Serve meats is available for your Cold-meat Board*—many kinds of savory Armour sausage meats, dainty spreads and spiced meats... each with its own fine flavor, enriched and sealed in by Armour's carefully controlled methods.

Be sure you get Armour's meats. The success of your Cold-meat Board depends on the natural meat juices, the delicate spicing, the absolute purity and wholesomeness for which these Armour products are famous. They're made in spotless Armour kitchens, by expert food-makers, who guard every step of the process. "Armour quality must be there," they say. And always, the delicious Armour flavor.

Choose an assortment of Armour meats and Cloverbloom Cheese at your dealer's. You'll find them utterly appetizing... and so economical you'll want to keep a supply in your pantry or refrigerator, all summer long.

A new favorite meal each month

Each month, a new Armour MEAL OF THE MONTH is displayed in your neighborhood food store. You buy all the items at one time and also get Marie Gifford's book of recipes for the complete meal. Thousands of women have welcomed this new buying service because it answers that bothersome question. "What shall I serve today?"... If you haven't already served the Armour meals, why not begin with this delicious choice for August?

Your family will love the Cold-meat Board—and the flavor and richness of Armour's quality products.

BANKRUPTCY PETITION BY HUGUES BRUSSEL

Second Partner of Construction Engineering Firm Goes Into Federal Court.

Hughes Brussel, 4472 Maryland avenue, construction engineer, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in Federal Court yesterday, listing liabilities of $718,599 and assets of $379.

The liabilities set forth were identical with those of his business associate, Lionel R. Viterbo, who filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy last January. They were due to the fact, both petitions set forth, that the partners were guarantors, with other contractors, of two bond issues on deeds of trust on the Parkview Apartment Hotel, Memphis, Tenn.

Listed as unsecured assets in both petitions were judgments obtained by the Vanhook Realty Co., for $3006, and by Charles Schaffner, Merchants Laclede Building, for $1290. They used the guarantors to recover losses on the hotel bonds.

Brussel listed his assets as $379 cash equity in insurance policies, an automobile valued at $25, household goods, $50, and cash, $57.

EX-MISSIONARY DEAD

THE REV. AUGUST LANGHORST

THE REV. AUGUST LANGHORST, EX-MISSIONARY, DIES AT 92

Evangelical Minister Served in Africa After Ordination in 1877; Retired in 1929.

The Rev. August Langhorst, retired Evangelical minister and former missionary in Africa, died of infirmities of age yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Henry Schaub, 4710 Farlin avenue, where he has lived for about five years. He was 92 years old.

The Rev. Mr. Langhorst, born in Germany, left with his wife for the African gold coast, then known as "the missionary's graveyard," shortly after his ordination in 1877 at Basel, Switzerland, where he prepared for the ministry. His first child, born in Africa, died before the missionary and his wife, ill with tropical fever, came in 1880 to the United States.

He served from 1880 to 1916 as pastor for various congregations in Ohio towns, and was minister at Quincy, Ill., from 1916 until 1929, when he retired. Funeral services will be at Prevoist chapel, 3710 North Grand boulevard and Salem Evangelical Church, at 10 a. m. Tuesday with burial at St. Lucas cemetery, Sappington. His wife, five daughters, three sons and 18 grandchildren survive.

DEMAND SENT TO PRESIDENT TO REMOVE CHICAGO OFFICIAL

Robert J. Dunham Denounced in Connection With Soldier Field and the Rev. C. E. Coughlin.

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—The Chicago Federation of Labor's demand that Robert J. Dunham be removed from all public offices was on its way today to President Roosevelt, Gov. Henry Horner, Mayor Edward J. Kelly and Illinois members of Congress.

The union group's request charged Dunham with a "domineering, harsh and unreasoning attitude" in reference to his position as chairman of the Chicago Park District Commission. Dunham also is Works Progress Administrator for Illinois and a member of the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission, from which he resigned as chairman to become WPA leader.

A letter was sent yesterday to the various officials. The request quoted a resolution adopted by representatives of 500 labor unions attacking Dunham for the Park Commission's refusal to permit the Federation to use Soldier Field for a Labor day celebration unless it guaranteed that the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit would not appear on the program.

Calling it a "despotic order," the resolution said compliance would "constitute an act of self-stultification and an abject surrender of freedom of thought."

ESCAPED MISSOURI CONVICT CAUGHT IN LEMMON, S. D.

Steve Edgar Fled in 1934; He Was Serving Life Term for St. Louis Murder.

By the Associated Press.
LEMMON, S. D., Aug. 10.—Steve Edgar of St. Louis, who escaped from the Missouri State Penitentiary July 27, 1934, where he was serving a life term for murder, was arrested here yesterday.

A picture and description of Edgar in a magazine led to his recognition by an amateur detective, who informed police. Edgar had been working in a pool room.

Edgar was sentenced in 1919 for the fatal shooting of John J. Haddon, bartender in a saloon at 3811 North Broadway, when the latter refused to serve him a drink and ordered him out of the saloon. He escaped in 1924 from a guard, who had taken him to St. Louis to visit his mother, and was arrested three years later in Milwaukee.

Hoover, 61, Visits Omaha.

By the Associated Press.
OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 10.—Former President Herbert Hoover, 61 years old today, passed through Omaha tonight on his way to Chicago and New York to attend meetings of several life insurance companies, and charitable and benevolent societies of which he is a director. Hoover refused to discuss politics and dismissed the Republican victory in Rhode Island by saying: "If I got started, I'd never stop." The former President conferred here with Robert G. Simmons of Lincoln, who has been mentioned as a potential candidate for Vice-President in 1936.

WITNESS ALLEGES THREATS BY WOMAN

Intimidation Charge in Case Involving Ex-convict's Arrest for Possessing Bomb.

Fay Parker, 41-year-old Negro, was charged with intimidation of a State witness in a criminal case, in a warrant issued by the Circuit Attorney's office yesterday.

The case was that of John H. Jones, former convict charged with possession of a bomb in the first arrest here under a new law, which made it a felony to have a bomb with intent to use it unlawfully. Jones was arrested near the Strand Theater, 2000 Market street, one of three movie theaters patronized by Negroes, which have figured in a recent controversy over proposed substitution of Negro film operators for white men.

Sinclair Welch, Negro, 2035 Walnut street, was the complainant against Fay Parker, who resides at the Grand Central Hotel, Jefferson avenue and Pine street. The warrant alleged that he said to him Friday in an alley back of the hotel: "If you appear in court, you'll get your brains blown out." Welch called police. He had told police when Jones was arrested Tuesday that he had seen Jones near the Strand Theater. The arrest was made when a policeman noticed Jones deposit a bundle of dynamite and a fuse in a lot near the theater.

Frank Lewis, Negro, 3137 Lawton boulevard, related, according to police, that the woman told him she would "get" Welch if he appeared in court.

Mayor Dickmann appointed an arbitration committee yesterday to attempt settlement of the dispute between the motion picture operators' union and the Urban League, a social service organization for Negroes. Members of the committee are: Mgr. Timothy Dempsey, pastor of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, Sixth and Biddle streets; Mrs. George Gellhorn and Prof. Ralph Fuchs of Washington University. Emmett Canty, chief city parole officer and a former labor leader, will assist the committee, which will meet representatives of both factions at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Parish House of St. Patrick's Church.

The controversy followed refusal of the white operators' union to accede to the Urban League's request to employ Negro operators at the Strand, Criterion and Star theaters. The union said that to grant the request would mean that white operators, who had worked at these houses for the last 12 years, would be thrown out of employment.

BLACK WIDOW SPIDER BITES GUARD OFFICER IN CAMP

Captain Schweikart, St. Louis, Recovered; M. N. G. Air Squadron Starts Home.

By the Associated Press.
NEVADA, Mo., Aug. 10.—Captain W. F. Schweikart of 4353 Penrose street, St. Louis, commanding a Company of the 138th Infantry, Missouri National Guard, in summer training at Camp Clark here, has recovered from the effects of a black widow spider bite.

The spider bit Captain Schweikart yesterday morning. Three hours later he suffered intense pain in the abdomen, back and chest. Emergency treatment was given and he was taken to State Hospital No. 3, but he was able to report for duty today.

The Thirty-fifth Division Air Squadron of St. Louis, commanded by Major Phil Love, wound up its two-weeks' training period today and started home.

This Healing Powder is fine for SUNBURN!

When your skin is blistered or raw after being sunburnt, just sprinkle a little MEXICAN HEAT POWDER over the tender parts. You will be amazed at how quickly the fiery, smarting redness disappears the instant MEXICAN HEAT POWDER is applied. Soothing and cooling, it has been the South's favorite skin powder for years. Use it for all skin irritations, such as Prickly Heat, Summer Rash, chafed and tender skin. Many use it before exposure to the hot sun, as it helps to prevent sunburn. But be sure you get the genuine MEXICAN HEAT POWDER in handy metal cans with sifter top. Remember, no sticky cream or messy grease. A POWDER! At all drug stores.

New Zenith Radio Sets Have Special Features.

A COMPLETE line of new 1935-1936 Zenith radio sets was shown to dealers by the Electric Lamp & Supply Co., distributor, at a series of daily "open house" meetings the past week. Every model uses a new Zenith meta-glass tube, which has the characteristics of metal tubes and is used in the regular metal tube circuits, but has a glass envelope. So even the smallest Zenith has the benefits of the metal tubes. Three leading tube factories are making these meta-glass tubes, but Zenith is using them exclusively in sets.

The smallest of the new Zeniths are four-tube superheterodynes, in table and console models, with automatic volume control. The five-tube sets are of the all-wave type, with split second tuning and coverage including the 16-meter short wave band.

The six-tube console set has a concave grill, seven-inch color tuning dial, tuning ratio of 100 to 1 for fine tuning. The seven-tube sets have an extra pre-selector stage from the Westminster Choir. Summer School Festival. Dr. John Finley Williamson will be the director, and the choir of 70 voices will be augmented by 500 voices.

There are two nine-tube consoles and a table model, one being a deluxe set with special audio amplifier, sounding board and large speaker.

The two 12-tube console models have the features that have made the 25-tube Zenith Stratosphere model noteworthy, including 14-inch speaker, nine-inch color band dial, shadow tuning, all-wave coverage and dimensional tone. A deluxe 12-tube model has a special audio chamber and dimensional speakers, curved speaker grill, open audio chamber and dimensional tone, the tone range being from 40 to 6500 cycles.

Also in the Stratosphere Zenith line are two 16-tube sets with two speakers, dimensional tone and tone range up to 8000 to 8200 cycles. All the Stratosphere line has over-tone emphasis.

The 25-tube Stratosphere set has a tone range of 40 to 11,500 cycles, three speakers and an audio system for up to 43 watts output.

A feature of the Stratosphere line is that all of the sets in it can tune to 7 meters.

All models in the entire line have triple filtering, designed to exclude noise and interference and thereby clarify reception of distant broadcast and short wave stations.

Still another feature is several "free-power" battery sets, for which B batteries are required. All power is taken from the A battery, which may be kept up by ordinary charging or with the "Wincharger," a device with airplane propeller which can be installed on any house, to be driven by the breeze and keep the A battery charged.

MORE TIME ON SEED LOANS

Early House Consideration on Proposal Is Predicted.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Early House consideration was predicted today for the Norbeck-Bulow bill authorizing the Governor of the Farm Credit Administration to grant an extension of time for repayment of government seed loans. The measure, introduced jointly by the South Dakota Senators, passed the Senate Thursday. It empowers the FCA Governor to permit, under regulations prescribed by him, extension by a 10-year amortization plan or any other method. The bill applies to loans made under the seed loan and other crop loan acts.

The first presentation of the State-wide beauty contest will be made Sunday night. The winner will be designated "Miss Missouri" and will be crowned Monday night. Night horse shows will be given, starting Monday.

AMERICAN IMPORTS OF PORK GAIN HEAVILY IN JUNE

Canada Chief Source of Supply, with Some Coming from Germany and Poland.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Commerce Department figures showed a fivefold increase in value of pork imports in June over those in the corresponding month last year, although the total in dollars involved was small compared with the amount of home production.

The June imports increased to $2,404, valued at $166,037, against $7,178 worth $32,396 in June, 1934, the department said. For the first six months of the year imports amounted to $3,077,934 pounds valued at $646,635 against 733,600 worth $230,786 in the similar 1934 period.

Canada was the chief source of foreign supply. Some imports came also from Germany and Poland.

American exports of pork products in June were the smallest for the month in many years.

RAIN CAUSES SECOND FLOODING OF STREETS AT MASSILLON, O.

Downpour Comes on Heels of Clean-up Work After Damage Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

MASSILLON, O., Aug. 10.—A severe rain storm hit Massillon, filling streets with water and swelling streams that had subsided somewhat after the flood in Muskingum Valley Tuesday.

Basements of downtown stores, which had been drained of overflow waters, were filled again as sewers clogged. The rain lasted 40 minutes.

A five-year-old girl died at Dover from pneumonia, which her parents said she contracted during Tuesday's flood. Relief officials estimated the flood Tuesday had done $5,000,000 damage.

At Marietta, the Muskingum River continued to pour into the Ohio River, but no particular damage was reported. At Zanesville, people began to return to their flood-damaged homes. The State Health Department sent 1000 vaccine units to Coshocton.

29 Fined for Speeding.
 Twenty-nine persons were fined in police courts yesterday for speeding from 35 to 55 miles per hour. Police Judge Vest assessed fines of $5 in 12 cases and $7 in one case. Police Judge Simpson levied 13 fines of $5 and three of $10. Six cases were continued.

CHARGES SERGT. ALVIN YORK DIDN'T CAPTURE 50 GERMANS

Connecticut Legion Resolution Says He Got Credit for Heroism of Another.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 10.—The Connecticut Department of the American Legion, in a resolution adopted today, asserted that credit given Sergt. Alvin York for the capture of 50 Germans rightfully belonged to Sergt. Bernard J. Early of New Haven.

The resolution requested Congress to award the Congressional Medal of Honor to Early.

It was set forth that the capture of the Germans at Chateau Thierry was effected by Early, who turned them over to York, then his corporal, to take back to the lines. The resolution was introduced by the New Haven post.

Other than to say "all this is old," Sergt. Alvin C. York declined to comment today on the action of the Connecticut American Legion. York, described by Gen. Pershing as "the greatest civilian soldier of the war," and decorated by Marshal Foch with the Croix de Guerre, was credited officially with killing at least 25 Germans and leading back 132 prisoners on Oct. 8, 1918. He operates a school in his native hill country.

CHARLES A. LEE JOINS
WASHINGTON U. STAFF

Former State Superintendent of Schools Appointed Professor of Education.

Charles A. Lee, who was State Superintendent of Schools from 1923 to 1934, has been appointed professor of education and director of educational service at Washington University, Chancellor Throop announced yesterday.

Much of Lee's time will be spent off the campus conferring with school principals and superintendents throughout the State, Dr. Throop said. He will also keep in touch with Washington University graduates who are teaching and will visit junior and senior colleges. Lee, as director of educational service, will inform schools of the State what the university can offer them, such as speakers for assemblies, debates, musical programs, plays and the use of university facilities for contests and club meetings.

He will be associated both with the department of education and with University College. In his latter capacity he will be engaged in developing the university's program of adult education.

Commenting on the appointment of Lee, Dr. Throop said, "This appointment marks the beginning of a program for rendering increasing service to the public schools and to projects in adult education."

Lee has had wide experience in education in Missouri. After graduating from the Warrensburg Teachers College and the University of Missouri, he taught in rural schools in Phelps County and in the Lamar, Mo., high school. He became superintendent of schools in Lamar, then in Butler, Mo., and state superintendent in 1923. He was the youngest man ever elected to the state office, being 31 years old. He has had graduate work in education at the University of Missouri and this summer is completing his work for a doctorate in education at Columbia University.

He will assume his new duties at Washington University Sept. 1.

OUSTED TABASCO DICTATOR LEAVES FOR PUERTO RICO

Tomas Garrido y Canabal Intends to Live on Island in Exile from Mexico.

VILLA HERMOSA, Mexico, Aug. 10.—Tomas Garrido y Canabal, his 15-year-old dictatorship of Tabasco State definite, at an end, left today by airplane for Guatemala en route to Puerto Rico, where he intends to live permanently in exile.

His party included his wife and three children and Senator Auscencio Cruz. They left in two private airplanes, planning to pass through Central America in easy stages, then across the West Indies to San Juan, near where Garrido owns properties.

Garrido y Canabal lost his power recently after several of his student opponents were shot to death on the streets of Villahermosa. The Governor, said to be under his control, was removed from office.

The former dictator was a member of the cabinet of President Lázaro Cárdenas for four months as Secretary of Agriculture. A descendant of a New England ship captain named Brown, it was once his boast that "not a saloon or a church remains open in Tabasco." Immediately after the ex-dictator's departure, State officials announced several of his decrees had been nullified, including those prohibiting the display of crosses in cemeteries, the wearing of mourning veils, dancing and the playing of jazz music.

GARMENT WORKERS' STRIKE

Walkout Called at Hercules Clothing Co., Columbus, O.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 10.—The United Garment Workers' Union called its members at the Hercules Clothing Co. out on strike today.

J.S. Resler, secretary of the company, said he could not say definitely how many men responded. The plant, which employs 700 persons, is idle on Saturdays.

Mrs. G. S. Starrett, Columbus, Dies.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 10.—Mrs. George S. Starrett, 55 years old, wife of the Boone County Probate Judge, died at a hospital here today of a lung infection.

GOEBBELS RENEWS NAZI ATTACK ON JEWISH BUSINESS

Propaganda Minister's Newspaper Assails Firms It Accuses of 'Parading as Aryans.'

By the Associated Press. BERLIN, Aug. 10.—A hint that the "housecleaning" Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels threatened a week ago may start soon against Jewish business was given today by the propaganda minister's mouthpiece, Der Angriff.

The newspaper editorially assailed Jewish firms it accused of "parading as Aryans." "What is Jewish is not to be represented as Aryan," was the slogan it suggested in "beginning the attack."

Reports of strife in the provinces continued with both Jews and Catholics suffering from the attacks and restrictions.

Nazi Jew-Baiter to Speak.

Foreign correspondents were told no seats were available for the speech here next Thursday of Julius Streicher, leading Nazi Jew-baiter. He will speak in the large sports palace, which accommodates 18,000. Foreign newspaper men who asked for tickets were told only standing room was left and intimated that even if seats were available, they would not be given to the correspondents.

This will be the second invasion of Berlin by Streicher, publisher of the relentlessly anti-Semitic newspaper, Der Stürmer. He is understood to be eager to establish himself here where most of the Jews live, publishing his paper in Berlin instead of in Nuremberg.

On his previous visit he spoke to a small gathering on the outskirts. His remarks at that time foreshadowed the adoption of the later stringent laws governing the Jews.

Attack by Der Angriff.

Discussing cases of Jews disguising themselves as Aryans, Der Angriff said "national socialism cannot tolerate that true facts should be withheld from the people by swindle and deceit." Even the most astute attempts at disguising, under the cover of foreign influence, is bound to be laid bare sometime. For this course, the co-operation of all citizens is necessary. Of them, we are sure we will do our part in uncovering typical cases."

The newspaper did not specify whether this means an intensification of the anti-Jewish boycott and further scrutiny of Berlin's large department stores, or a clear-cut segregation of Jewish stores for Jews.

Reports abroad of discrimination against Jews in the selection of Germany's 1936 Olympic teams were denied by the German press. It reported statements from foreign sports leaders on the fairness of the German committee. The Hamburg Fremdenblatt asserted a foreign "wave of hate" is trying to make out of the "great and good subjects of sports a political spectacle."

Clergymen Urged to Fight.

The Council of Brethren, a group of clergymen opposed to the Nazi Protestant Church program, advised all Protestant ministers today that a "new and possibly the most severe struggle yet experienced lies ahead."

A letter admonished the clergymen to remain firm and not to compromise with Hans Kerrl, head of the Department of Church Affairs. It was signed by a number of confessional (opposition) synod leaders, despite warnings received by them that their signatures might land them in jail.

"Recent measures," said the letter, "such as the creation of a finance department, the installation of a church arbitration office, appointment of a ministry for church affairs and continuation of the same time limitations in suspensions cannot be viewed by us otherwise than indicating the church question is to be solved differently from what we decided in our synods."

"In waiting for recognition of the confessional church by the state we have proceeded from one disappointment to another. Let us confess that it was our lack of faith which misled us to place our hopes in men."

The demand of the hour is clear and uncompromising—"no" to every attempt to solve the church question contrary to the decisions of our synods. May God help us unanimously and joyfully to pronounce this 'no' when the clash comes."

Goebbels removed Dr. Otto Leers from membership in the Theater Chamber Council for an unannounced reason. This is the fourth recent Chamber shakeup. Leers has been managing director of the German Theater Society since 1931.

Attacks on Foreign Newspapers. Attacks on foreign newspapers continued in the Provincial Press. The newspaper Karlsruher, discussing America, said "in Germany there are neither slums nor lynch justice."

A Nurnberg paper remarked, "One can even notice that certain of the Jewish press takes cognizance of the shameful events in Dallas with a definite smirk."

In Rothburg a priest was arrested because during a sermon he tore up a copy of "Der Stürmer," Storm Troop publication. A demonstration followed his action.

Trucks full of Nazi Storm Troopers cruised about Berlin tonight, some with signs, "State enemies beware, the Storm Troop is on guard."

At Kiel seven communists were sentenced to terms ranging from a year and a half to eight years in prison for helping a man awaiting trial to escape. The bread supply of the German people is safe at least until next year's harvest, a second official crop estimate showed today. The estimate, in thousands of tons, placed the cereal harvest at approximately 22,410 as compared with 21,600 in 1934. Of this 12,640 was breadstuff cereals and 1000 mixed grains. Barley was 3380 as compared with 3200 in 1934 and oats 5390 as compared with 5450.

Law Passed Against Greek Strike. ATHENS, Aug. 10.—The Government took steps tonight to keep public services operating in the face of a general strike called for Tuesday by the Greek Federation of Labor. A law was passed making arbitration of labor differences compulsory. Strikers at Patras and Piraeus are demanding new social legislation. The conservative labor wing of the Federation demands the release of strike leaders and the punishment of police at Crete and indemnities for families of victims in the latest rebellion there.

"Dead heat." Scratched—Blue Train, Clocks, Orca, Sanerent. Red Rain returned to the races in splendid form, broke fast, was taken to the outside all the way, closed with a rush and got up to make it a dead heat. Coldstream came with a rush, took lead in last sixteenth but hung right at end. Bien Joli broke slow, worked his way up and finished gamely. Delphinium was placed on the outside, broke well in motion, showed good speed, but tired. Tintagel displayed a high turn of speed, but stopped to a "clunk." Delirator had speed for three furlongs. Postage Due, a stout factor to the stretch, where he weakened. Galak was outgun.

By the Associated Press. SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Discovery, fighting a tight rein and carrying the heavy impost of 139 pounds, came through with his eighth straight victory in taking the Merchants and Citizens Handicap today but was forced to share honors with a pair of two-year-olds as C. V. Whitney's Red Rain and E. D. Shaffer's Coldstream ran a dead heat in the Saratoga Special Sweepstakes.

BOSTON TRACK'S 70,000 CROWD BETS $721,565

By the Associated Press. BOSTON, Aug. 10.—A tremendous crowd, estimated by officials at 70,000, today helped lower the curtain on this track's inaugural 28-day meeting.

This huge throng, which shattered all horse racing attendance records for this section, poured $721,565 through the mutual windows.

William H. Gallagher's three-year-old Candidate romped to a half-length victory over Mrs. W. R. Fleming's consistent Hardware in the $3000 added Lexington-Concord feature over the mile and a sixteenth turn.

The New York horseman's entry, which had won but three of his previous starts this year and last, took command at the half-mile post and was never challenged, as he came under the wire in 1:44.5.

Percy M. Pike's Red Ensign trailed Hardware by a length to gain the show position by a head from J. U. Gratton's Jubilaro.

Candidate, a 6-1 shot, earned $3850 by leading the nine-horse race, more than doubling his previous prize winnings. His mutual payoffs were $14.40, $5.40 and $4.

The 2-1 favorite, Hardware, received the $1000 place award.

Today's handle, which set a 1935 record for New England, boosted the 28-day total to $10,843,004.

Along came Joe Louis. Now look at the situation!

The next big fight is expected to attract three-quarters of a million dollars, a sum which, considering the times, is a splendid approach toward record promotion peaks. That will happen—so they say—when Baer and JOE LOUIS fight next Sept. 26.

Not So Incandescent. A GREAT many persons have the idea that promotion of big fights is just a matter of moving pawns and raking in the shekels. As a matter of fact, even with a Joe Louis to drag them out, the promoter's lot is not all that bright.

Clift's Homer in Ninth Ties Score, Browns Beat Indians in 10th, 6 to 5

Hornsby's Men Twice Come From Behind—Manager O'Neill's Strategy in Late Innings Fails—Coleman Also Hits Four-Bagger.

By James M. Gould.

Coming from behind twice, the Browns yesterday afternoon evened the series with the Cleveland Indians at two games apiece by defeating Steve O'Neill's tribe, 6 to 5, in 10 innings. Paul Andrews went the full distance for Hornsby and thoroughly deserved the decision over four Cleveland hurlers—Pearson, Winegarner, Stewart and Lloyd Brown.

There might be an argument as to Manager O'Neill's strategy in the eighth. Pearson, his starting pitcher, was leading, 5 to 2, when the Browns came in for their half. Pearson walked Lary as a starter and was promptly removed. Stewart, his second relief, let only Lary score in that inning but, in the ninth, issued a pass to Hemsley and permitted Clift to hit a homer to tie the score. Lloyd Brown replaced Stewart after Andrews singled and Brown was the loser in the tenth and quickly, too.

Pepper Bats in Winning Run.

Solters hitless in four previous times up, opened with a fly to short right which was good for a double. Brown put over two strikes on Pepper but Ray then plastered a single to left and Solters counted with the winner.

There were three homers in the game hit by Averill, Coleman and Clift. The only other extra base hits were a triple by Averill and Solters' pop-double.

The Browns played errorlessly behind Andrews and again out-hit the Indians, this time 11 to 9. The Indians began as though to

AMERICAN HANOVER IS HARNESS RACE WINNER

By the Associated Press. SALEM, N. H., Aug. 10.—The defeat of Angel Child, heavily played favorite in the featured 2:13 trot, by American Hanover, the second choice, marked the closing day's racing at the Grand Circuit meeting today.

It was the second victory of the meeting for American Hanover, which is owned by the Lincroft Stable of Red Bank, N. J., and was driven by Will Hodson.

Hodson's Blue Beard also annexed the 2:23 trot, capturing the first two heats from Calumet Edge. Not more than a neck separated the pair in each trip.

Henry Thomas drove H. M. Parshall's McWin and carried off the honors handsily in the 2:12 pace.

Soccer League to Increase Size From Four to Eight Teams

By Dent McSkimming.

The first radical change in the local professional soccer picture that has been attempted in 15 years is promised for this fall, it became known yesterday. Instead of the four-club league plan which has been in vogue for the past generation, there will be eight clubs playing for the St. Louis Soccer League championship, games being played each Sunday at two parks.

St. Louis Soccer League officials are reluctant to discuss the new plan until such time as they are certain of its success but it is known that two of the clubs that have been invited to join the league are the German Sport Club and the Spanish Sport Club. Both organizations now have the matter before their membership for a decision

Other Clubs. Overtures have been made by Phil A. Riley, president of the St. Louis Soccer League, to two other clubs but he declined yesterday to give their names. It is understood that an effort will be made to have CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—Larry French and Bill Lee held the Cardinals to six hits this afternoon, but the world champions made the most of their opportunities, took full advantage of three Chicago errors and scored their eighth straight victory, their seventh in succession over the Cubs, 4 to 2.

The Cardinals gained a half game on the Giants, v.o. broke even in a doubleheader with the Phils. The Redbirds now are three games behind the league leaders. The victory increased the world champions' second-place margin over the Cubs to a half game.

Jerome Herman Dean, who did the pitching for the Redbirds, was not in his best form, as the Bruins whacked him for 10 safeties, including a home run by Billy Herman, but Dizzy had enough in the pinches to weather all storms and a double play, rapidly executed, squelched a ninth inning Chicago rally that had 14,000 spectators cheering lustily. The victory was the nineteenth of the season for Jerome Herman.

It was a bitter defeat for Lefty French. He retired after seven innings, during which the Cardinals made only three hits, but the count was 3 to 1 against him when a pinch-hitter batted for him.

Gelbert Starts Rally. Charley Gelbert, who has performed steadily since replacing the sore-armed Pepper Martin at third base, started the big third inning for the Cardinals with a single to center. Durocher sacrificed and Dizzy then hit to Jurgess, who threw a yard over Cavarretta's outstretched hands. Dizzy reaching second, and Gelbert third, Terry Moore followed with a single to center, scoring Gelbert, and when Demaree's throw to third hit Dizzy on the leg and bounced into the grandstand, Dizzy also scored and Moore reached third, whence he tallied the third run of the inning after Rothrock's fly to Galan.

Herman hit his homer into the right field bleachers in the first inning and the Cubs registered their other run in the seventh. With two out Hack walked and Jurgess moved him to second with a single to left. Stainback then batted for French and lined a single to left, scoring Hack.

Medwick's Throw Helps Dizzy. Dizzy can thank Joe Medwick for taking him out of that inning with no further damage. Stainback's single sent Jurgess to third and when Medwick broke into the big league he would have made a futile throw to third, which would have permitted Stainback to take second. But Joe has learned to throw to the right base. He rifled a perfect throw, to Frisch at second.

BABE RUTH ALL-AMERICA TEAM COMPETITION STARTS TODAY

79 Cash Prizes Will Be Awarded Fans for All-Star Team Lists

By Damon Kerby.

Babe Ruth can't keep his mind off baseball! George Herman Ruth, whose name will live as long as baseball is played, will again pick an All-America team for the Post-Dispatch!

Thus the tenth annual Post-Dispatch Babe Ruth All-America team competition gets under way today, in which awards totaling $700 will be made to baseball fans who come closest to selecting the Babe's batting order.

First prize is $150, second $100, third $75, and fourth $50. Other cash awards range downward to $1, with 79 cash prizes in all. In addition, the next 25 winners will receive baseball bats, autographed by Ruth, and the last 25 will receive official league baseballs, also autographed by the Babe.

Rules of the competition, published in detail elsewhere on this page, are not involved. A reading of them will show you how easy it will be to fulfill all requirements, submit a team and thus become eligible for one of the valuable prizes.

Briefly, draw up a batting order composed of players who, in your opinion, are the best in their positions in the two major leagues. Select two pitchers.

After your players are selected and placed in what you believe is the most effective batting order, write a short letter setting forth your reasons for naming the players you selected. Then mail the team and the explanation to the Babe Ruth Editor.

Ruth, with the assistance of 10 leading sports authorities who will act in an advisory capacity, will also select a team. All batting orders submitted by Post-Dispatch readers will be compared with Ruth's, and, as told, prizes will be given to those who come closest to naming the Babe's team and batting order.

The Post-Dispatch All-America team competition has long since become a fixture to baseball fans. It produces countless friendly arguments as to the relative ability of players, at the ball park, over the dinner table, and wherever else baseball is discussed. It also furnishes fans with a way to test their judgment against the Babe's, with a cash inducement in the offing.

Contentious will have to know their stuff and be up to date on major league performances to stand a good chance to win an award this year. Time has rolled along and some stars—a good many of them in fact—have slipped back into the shadows. Al Simmons, Lou Gehrig, the Gallant Pie Traynor, and Paul Waner, are cited as just a few who were outstanding players only yesterday, it seems, but who are having their troubles today.

New Stars.

The scales are balanced by an up-and-coming group of young players, some of whom are Stone of Washington, Moses and Cramer of the Athletics, Leiber of the Giants, Bonura of the White Sox, Billy Herman, Al Demaree, Stanley Hack and Augie Galan of the Cubs, and Linus Fry of the Dodgers.

Will players whose names are more widely known get the call over the heads of the youngsters? The question is in your lap.

As a means of getting their personal opinion of this year's leading players, J. Roy Stockton and James M. Gould, Post-Dispatch

Latest Averages Published Today For Contestants

THE latest major league batting and pitching averages, which include all games up to Friday, will be found on Page 5 of this section.

Prospective contestants in the tenth annual Post-Dispatch Babe Ruth All-America team competition are urged to study the averages before making up their all-star teams. The averages tell who's doing what in this year's play.

sport writers who have traveled with the Cardinals and the Browns all season, were asked to jot down their all-star selections from the leagues they are covering. The teams follow:

You, as an entrant in the competition, have to make up only one team from the two leagues, and place the players in what you believe would be the strongest possible batting order if you were sending the players to the plate. Give them the averages before making up your team, and, as told, prizes will be given to those who come closest to naming the Babe's team and batting order.

Post-Dispatch Babe Ruth All-America Contest Rules

The competition is open to everyone, except employees of the Post-Dispatch and their families.

Entries will close Aug. 31 at midnight, and letters bearing postmark up to that time will be considered eligible.

Babe Ruth will list his selections in the order in which he thinks they should go to the plate, and entrants must do likewise.

An explanatory letter of not more than 250 words must accompany each entry and will be passed upon by the judges. This is as important as selecting the players. Babe himself will write an explanation of his choices. In event of a tie, excellence of the compositions would determine the winner. (Write on one side of the paper only and make your selection on a separate sheet.)

Ten players will make up the team, two pitchers and eight other players, one for each position. Only one team may be submitted by each contestant.

No corrections will be accepted once an entry has been received and filed.

Players must be selected on the basis of their play in the 1935 season only. Performances of previous years do not count.

A player may be placed in a position other than the one he regularly occupies, provided he has played such position in one or more championship games. Otherwise regular positions must be rigidly adhered to. For instance, a regular left fielder may not be placed in right field unless he has played there at least once in 1935.

The prizes will be $150 cash for first, $100 second, $75 for third, $50 for fourth. Then will follow five prizes of $15 each, 10 of $10 each, 15 of $5 each, 20 of $2.50 each, and 25 of $1 each. The next 25 winners will receive baseball bats autographed by Babe Ruth, and the last 25 winners will be awarded league baseballs, autographed by Ruth.

Mail selections to the Babe Ruth Contest Editor, care of the Post-Dispatch.

First Prize $150.00
Second Prize 100.00
Third Prize 75.00
Fourth Prize 50.00
Five Prizes, each 15.00
Ten Prizes, each 10.00
Fifteen Prizes, each 5.00
Twenty Prizes, each 2.50
Twenty-five Prizes, each 1.00

79 Cash Prizes—Total $700.00

The next 25 winners will receive baseball bats, autographed by Babe Ruth.

The last 25 winners will receive league baseballs, autographed by Babe Ruth.

Mr. Hoxie Wins Title.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 10.—Louise Harding of Brookline, Mass., lost her Maine women's singles tennis crown today to Mrs. Jean Hoxie of Detroit, Mich., in a three set match that ended in complete rout of the defending champion. The scores were 7-9, 6-3, 6-0.

PEERLESS QUARTET?—St. Louis' "Hopes" for All-America Team

These four players are among the leading players on the Cardinals and Browns who will be considered by fans in making up their Babe Ruth All-America teams this year. The competition starts today. The players are: DIZZY DEAN and JOE MEDWICK (above), JULIUS SOLTERS (lower left) and ROLLIE HEMSLEY.

Clift's Homer Ties Score in Ninth, Browns Win in Tenth drive Andrews out quickly. Galatzter hit to left for a base and scored immediately when Averill tripled to center. Averill was over when Larry threw Vosmik out. Andrews then proceeded to reform and to pitch great ball.

But, Pearson was tough, too. Single hits by the Browns in each of the first three innings produced nothing.

In the fourth, though, Hornsby's men tied it up. Coleman started it with a homer which bounced off the pavilion roof. After West flew out, Homsley singled and went to second on Berger's wild throw to first. Clift shot a single to left to count Hemsley but was smothered off first when Carey lined straight to Berger.

So tight was the pitching that only one man of each club saw first in the course of the fifth, sixth and seventh innings. Phillips singled in the fifth and Clift walked in the seventh.

Pearson opened the eighth with an infield hit and beat Andrews' throw of Galatzter's sacrifice to second. Right here the tension dissolved, appeared, for Averill bounced a homer off the pavilion roof and the Indians were three runs to the good.

When Pearson walked Larry, first up in the Brown line, Manager O'Neill promptly took him out and substituted Winegarner. So Burns singled and sent Larry to third. Solters' short fly to Vosmik meant nothing, but Winegarner was relieved by Stewart. Hornsby substituted Pepper for Coleman at bat and Pepper's long drive to Vosmik scored Larry, but West took a third strike.

Then, in the ninth, Hemsley, first up, walked and Clift parked one, a home run, into the seats in left to tie it up. Carey flew out but Amper singled and Lloyd Brown relieved Stewart. Larry's grounder advanced Andrews to second, but Burns popped out.

Brownie Notes.

For the doubleheader today, the Browns' probable pitchers are Coffman and Walkup. Hudlin, right-hander, and Lee, southpaw, will work for Cleveland.

The attendance for the Saturday game, including women and girls who were club guests, was about 2800.

MISS MILEY BEATS MRS. ATWOOD FOR WESTERN GOLF TITLE

KENTUCKY GIRL SHOWS CLASS IN TAKING 36-HOLE FINAL, 6 AND 5

By the Associated Press.
CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 10.—Miss Marion Miley, 21-year-old Lexington (Ky.) girl, ascended the throne today as golfdom's "Queen of the West."

The pretty brunette from the Blue Grass, displaying all the skill of a master craftsman, carved out a 6 to 5 victory over Mrs. Phillip Atwood, 22-year-old Chicago blonde, in the 36-hole final over the grueling, water-logged Westwood Country Club course here today.

Already the owner of the trans-Mississippi championship, the Kentucky girl took no chances on today's match. Her tee shots were long and straight, her iron play magnificent, her putting outstanding until the last few holes, and her mistakes few.

Mrs. Atwood, the former June Beebe, one of the West's outstanding shot-makers, was slightly off her game at times, but proved a worthy foe. Miss Miley, daughter of Fred Miley professional at the Lexington Country Club, tossed pars and birdies galore at her opponent, leaving few loopholes through which the Illinois girl might break.

Miss Miley birdied seven of the 31 holes the match lasted, while her foe was able to get under even figures on five. In the morning's 18-hole round Miss Miley, playing spectacular golf at times, was even with par, going one over on the out-bound nine and one under coming home.

The girl from Kentucky displayed her superiority almost from the start. Mrs. Atwood started fast, scoring a birdie on the first hole, and a par on the second to win both, but Miss Miley took the next three in a row and was never headed from then on.

At the end of nine holes the Kentucky girl was two up. She was four up at the end of 18, and six ahead as they started the last nine. They halved the twenty-eighth, and then Miss Miley went seven up with seven to play with a birdie on the twenty-ninth.

Mrs. Atwood's final gesture, with the match dormie seven, was a birdie on the thirtieth hole for a win, extending the contest to the next hole where it ended as they halved in six.

Miss Miley, who because she held the Trans-Mississippi title, entered the Western event as one of the outstanding favorites, cut her way through a stellar field to reach the final.

In her first match she eliminated Dorothy Traugott of San Francisco, a year's runner-up in the National, 5 and 4. She disposed of Mrs. Lillian Zech of Chicago by the same score, and then met Peggy Wattles of Buffalo, who fell by 3 and 2. The toughest match of the tournament came yesterday when Margaret Russell, from Detroit, held a two-up edge on the new champion with only three holes to play.

Miss Miley, with Miss Russell slipping on the greens, won two of the last three holes, squaring the match on the eighteenth and then went on to win the first extra hole and the match.

Ozark Diving Nymphs—Standouts for the District Swimming Meet

Left to right—Lorraine Morrison, Westborough Country Club, municipal champion; June Koehr, Fairground Pool, runner-up for the Muni title; Vera Delaplaine, Forest Park Highlands, and Florence Hamlin of Belleville, Ill. The Ozark District meet will take place at Forest Park Highlands Pool, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Bobby Riggs New National Junior Tennis Champion

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CULVER, Ind., Aug. 10.—Bobby Riggs of Los Angeles captured the national junior singles tennis championship in a hard-fought match with his fellow-townsmen and doubles partner, Joe Hunt, here today.

Riggs' smashing net game took the fourth and fifth sets 6-0 and 6-4 after Hunt, boys' titlist last year, had taken the lead by winning the second and third. Scores were 6-3, 1-6, 4-6, 6-0 and 6-4.

It was the third successive year that Los Angeles stars have taken the title. Don Budge led the way in 1933, and Gene Mako followed him last year.

Leandro Bellis of Philadelphia won the national boys' championship with a straight-set defeat of Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, western titleholder, 7-5, 6-3.

Greenberg made a strong bid in the opener, smashing into a 5-3 lead, but tied before Bellis' adroitly-placed drives.

After whipping him in the singles final, Riggs paired with Hunt to defeat another Los Angeles team of Lawrence Nelson and Bob Underwood, topspeeded, 4-6, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, for the junior doubles championship.

The boys' doubles title, which was decided yesterday, went to Joe Fishback of New York and William Umstaedter, Milburn, N. J. They defeated Seymour Greenberg and Dick Hainline, Rock Island, Ill., 6-2, 6-2.

Rosalind Werner Finalist in Muni Women's Tennis

Miss Rosalind Werner reached the final round of the Municipal Class A women's tennis tournament yesterday afternoon by defeating Mrs. Gertrude Bell, 6-3, 6-2.

Werner will play the winner of the Melita Howard-Ruth Moehlenkamp contest, which probably will be played this morning. The final will be held this afternoon if the other match is decided.

The boys' and junior tennis tournaments started yesterday morning, also on the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park with Adrian Peolker advancing a round ahead by defeating Thomas Gibbons, 6-2, 6-3.

Both had drawn first-round byes.

The girls' singles and the boys' and junior doubles tournaments were held open until 11 o'clock. There were not enough entries received up to yesterday to warrant holding the meets, and unless sufficient entries are received this morning they will not be held.

Yesterday's results and today's pairings:

JUNIOR DIVISION
First round results—Joseph Blath defeated William Hayward, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2; Meyer Pankever defeated Albert Steck, 6-1, 6-0; Herbert Marquardt defeated Harold McElmurry, 6-1, 6-1; Henry Boelter defeated Monte Lopata, 6-2, 6-4; Sam Evans defeated Horace Schaefer, 6-0, 6-1.

Second round results—Adrian Peolker defeated Thomas Gibbons, 6-2, 6-3; Meyer Pankever vs. winner of William Blath vs. winner of William Blath; Rothweiler-Ewald Busse match; Herbert Marquardt vs. Henry Boelter; Sam Evans vs. Richard Wilhelm, and Harvey Uelk vs. David Choppin.

BOYS' DIVISION
First round results—Neal Crasnick defeated Walter Evans, 6-2, 6-1; Francis Poelker defeated W. McConnell, 6-3, 6-1; Robert Friedman defeated Beverly Braun, 6-2, 4-6, 6-2; Robert Nelson defeated Urban Faustick, 4-6, 6-2, 7-5; James Johnson defeated George Kinlay, 6-3, 6-3; James E. Bradley defeated Harry Hoch, 6-0, 6-3.

First round pairings—Joseph Mitchell vs. Harold Keene; Robert Metzger vs. Ed Juszczyk.
Second round pairings—Francis Poelker vs. Robert Friedman; James Johnson vs. James E. Bradley.

Carnera. Nor did King Levinsky seem to be much more than just a good-looking but badly-alarmed fish peddler, when he opposed the Negro.

But although Dempsey and Louis have progressed to some extent at the expense of weaklings, Jack the Mauler proved later that weak or strong, he was a match for the best, whether the going was easy or hard. And if he did not finally defeat Tunney to regain his title, we will have to refer to him as Dave Barry, referee for the answer.

If Louis defeats Max Baer decisively, and especially after having been hit hard by Max during the encounter, we may then be ready to classify him among the truly great. At present all anyone can say is that he looks as good as the best, as far as he has shown, to the present time.

But he hasn't faced any Knock-out Bill Brennans, any Gene Tunneys, no Jack Sharkeys (when Jack was good), nor any one of several fair fighters who flourished after Dempsey had reached the top.

Dempsey's Foes Weak.
ONCE they gained recognition the progress of the two fighters who nursed him carefully through came up over the opposition of weak opponents, winning by decisive knockouts. Dempsey bowled over all the Jim Flynns, Homer Smiths, Terry Kellers, Fred Fultons, and Porky Flynns of his day. And Louis has not had any better opposition in his climb, until recently.

Dempsey got his title by knocking over the 250-pound Willard, who had been out of the ring for four years, and, in this writer's opinion, not so much when he was at his best. Louis really crashed fame when he leveled another deflated giant, Primo

Red Sox Win from Senators, 9 to 8

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—The Red Sox climbed to within half a game of third place today by drubbing Washington, 9 to 8, in the series opener, while the White Sox were being shut out by Detroit.

In a free-hitting game in which each team made 14 hits, Manager Joe Cronin's outfit settled the issue by scoring two runs in the eighth, for a 9-7 lead.

Fred Schulte, Senators' batting star, hammered out a homer in the first half of the ninth but no one was on base, and Walberg quelled the brief uprising.

Ostermuller pitched the first seven innings for Boston, but after Kress opened the eighth with a single, he was relieved by Walberg, who yielded three hits and many runs in the remaining innings.

Griffith Orders Stars Not to Make Mexican Tour

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. EARL MACK, Philadelphia Athletics' coach, who is rounding up a team of major league baseball players to tour Mexico this fall, reckoned without Owner Clark Griffith when he signed up three Washington Senators for the trip.

So Mack now must do some more recruiting.

Griffith today laid the law down to Pitcher Earl Whitehill, Outfielder Heinie Manush and Infielder Ralph Kress, prohibiting them from making any off-season tours.

WOMAN SQUASH STAR IS VICTOR IN GRASS COURT TENNIS TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Agnes Sherwood Lamme, a squash racquets internationalist, climaxed a week of brilliant play in another sports field today by capturing the Eastern Grass Court tennis championship.

Unseeded and comparatively unknown nationally, the Rye matron upset Mrs. Mary Greet Harris of Kansas City, this country's eighth ranking player, in a hard-fought final round match at the Westchester Country Club in Rye, 4-6, 8-6, 6-3.

The result was a major shock to tennis experts even though Mrs. Lamme had eliminated two other seeded stars, Jane Sharp of Pasadena and Katherine Winthrop of Boston, in her march to the finals. She has been ranked among this country's "first ten" tennis players only once—in 1933 when she was listed at No. 10. Mrs. Harris has made that select group four times since 1929, ranking as high as No. 5 in 1931.

The Davis Cup doubles team of Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., and Johnny Van Ryn of Philadelphia fought its way into the finals along with Wilmer Hines of Columbia, S. C., and Henry M. Culley of Santa Barbara, Cal., in the men's doubles.

Allison and Van Ryn turned back Hal Surface of Kansas City and Wilbur Hesse of Fort Worth, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2, in their semifinal match, but Hines and Culley had a much harder time of it, defeating Frank X. Shields of New York and Frank A. Parker of Spring Lake, N. J., 6-4, 4-6, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.

CONSTABLES LOSE IN BRIEF FIGHT TO KEEP WINDSOR TRACK CLOSED
WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 10.—Employees of the Devonshire race track and 10 East Sandwich Township Constables fought briefly here today when the officers attempted to padlock the gates of the park to force payment of back taxes.

The track employees wrenched the padlocks off and the outnumbered Constables withdrew.

The start of the first race was delayed by the clash.

ST. LOUISANS IN STATE HORSESHOE TOURNEY
St. Louis players will depart Tuesday to compete in the Missouri state horseshoe pitching championships to be held in conjunction with the State Fair at Sedalia, Aug. 14 and 15. The meet will be conducted by the Missouri Horseshoe Pitchers Association, Jack H. Claves, president and superintendent of the tournament.

Those going to Sedalia are: Wilbur Stinkamp, Louisa Clark, champion and runner-up last year to C. C. Davis, Kansas City, former world's champion; "Lefty" Steinmann, 1931 State champion; Jim Denny, Gene Wors, last year's city champion; Joe Wors; Art Hoffman, and Emmett Dunn. Henry Kuhlman, secretary of the Missouri State Association, will also make the trip.

CLASSIC PIN LEAGUE WILL OPEN SEPT. 9
At a meeting of the newly organized Classic Bowling League, it was decided that the league shall officially open its 1935-36 season Monday, Sept. 9 at Rogers Recreation.

The league will be composed of eight teams and will bowl throughout the season twice weekly, appearing Monday nights at Rogers and Wednesday nights at Washington Bowling Alleys.

SOCER LEAGUE TO INCREASE SIZE FROM FOUR TO EIGHT TEAMS

two North Side teams in the league since both the German and Spanish clubs are supported by South St. Louis football fans. There is a possibility that one of the clubs will represent the Italian colony.

The Irish Village team, champions of the Municipal League and sponsored by Mickey Clawsey, is said to have been invited to become a member. Clawsey said yesterday that he might enter his club if the league would grant one or two requests he has made.

Arrangements have been made for the use of National Softball Association's park at Kingshighway and Arsenal street, Riley said.

"Our plan is working out nicely but there is much work to be done before we can make any very definite announcement," said Riley. "We intend to play a doubleheader at Sportsman's Park and another at National Park each Sunday afternoon, the eight teams to rotate in such a way as to play an equal number of games at each place. All games would count in the league standing and it is our intention to enter all eight clubs in the National Challenge Cup Competition. That would mean twice as many national cup matches for St. Louis as we have had in the past, perhaps more, since the four new teams would be forced to compete in the preliminary rounds in order to qualify for the competition proper."

Although no official confirmation could be obtained, it is understood that the Spanish Sport Club has made its entry into the league conditional upon obtaining the services of all the Spanish players now signed with three of the professional league clubs. Three are with Phil Kavanaugh's Hellrungs; three with the Ben Millers and two with the Marie club. All are rated among the stars of the league.

Chief reason for the change in form of the St. Louis Soccer League is said to be a desire on the part of the club owners to add a dash of novelty to their program which has become somewhat monotonous.

Harridge's Ruling Takes a Victory Away From Allen

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Aug. 10. JOHNNY ALLEN, Yankee hurler, today had his season's winning total pared a game, by an official ruling of the American League. Allen now has 10 victories.

Allen pitched two and one-third innings against the Senators, July 28, when a lame shoulder forced him out of the game, with the Yankees four runs ahead. Walter Brown, sent into the breach, was driven from the mound in a ninth-inning Washington rally. The official scorer gave the win to Allen.

President William Harridge of the American League transferred the victory to Brown, his only win of the season.

O'Brien Victor in 400-Meter Event Of Holland Meet

By the Associated Press.
AMSTERDAM, Aug. 10.—Ed O'Brien of Syracuse University today was an easy winner in the 400 meters final of an international meet in which American track stars competed with athletes from Northern European countries.

O'Brien covered the distance in 48 seconds flat, breaking the tape four meters in front of Johannesen of Norway who finished second. Kisters of Germany was third. This was the only final held on the first day of the two-day meet but Americans excelled in the trials of other events.

Foy Draper of the University of Southern California won his heats in both the 100 and 200 yard dashes, recording the best time in each event. He beat Pontow of Germany by two meters as he covered the 200 meters in 22.1. The Hollanders, Osendarp and Berger, won their heats in the dash events also. Osendarp covered the 200 meters in 22.2 seconds and Berger in 22.3.

Draper completed the 100 meters in 10.8 to be the only heat winner to break 11 seconds. He was not pressed as he defeated Theismar of Belgium by three meters.

Al Moreau of Marksville, La., continued his European winning streak, capturing his 110 meter dash heat in 15 seconds as he ran away from Karman of Holland.

How Reconditioning of Engines Is Done in Ford Co. Plant

Scientific Production Methods and Special Disassembly and Assembly Lines Used.

"Application of scientific production methods to engine reconditioning as practiced by the Ford Motor Co. is considered by experts the most notable advance in service technique of this decade. It produces something new in the automotive world—a reconditioned motor in every respect the equal of a new one. It is done with the hearty co-operation of the dealer, who is relieved of heavy investment for service equipment," a statement by the Ford Motor Co. says.

"In brief, the operation is complete disassembly of the motor and its components, followed by replacement or refinishing of all worn parts or surfaces. The operation is exactly the same as the building of a new motor. Every bearing surface is fitted to precisely the same limit of tolerance as a new motor. In part, the assembly operation is done on the new motor line, although, naturally, most of it is conducted on a special disassembly and assembly line.

Care as to Parts Used. "To provide sure control of the policy that every part must fit to the original tolerance limit, those parts which are to be used again are returned to the factory department in which they are first made, for gauging, either accepting or rejecting. There is thus no pressure on the reconditioning line to attempt a dangerously high level of parts recovery.

"What is new in the Ford V-8 reconditioned engine? Pistons, piston rings, cylinder head studs, nuts, valves, valve assemblies (except springs, many of which are O. K.), main bearings, connecting rod bearings, camshaft bearings, cam gears. In almost any given example a great many other parts will be new, as all those which fail to meet gauge and other tests are replaced.

"Engines are, boxed, in carload shipments from the company's branches. They are unloaded and brought by conveyor or truck to the start of the disassembly line. There they are disassembled on the moving line by men using power tools much the same as an engine is assembled, except that the process is reversed. As the motor is resolved into its original parts, these parts are either scrapped or set aside for cleaning and then go back to the department whence they came originally, for checking and refinishing. If cylinder heads are scrapped, carbon is removed by sand-blasting.

The Reconditioning Process. "The stripped cylinder block goes by conveyor from the motor building where it was disassembled, the foundry building just across the road. It is washed in a machine, then the camshaft bearings are bored and reamed for abutment in. In old style V-8 and 4-cylinder motors which did not have alloy steel valve seat inserts, these are installed. The cylinders are re-bored and polished exactly as a new motor's cylinders are done, except that the bore is larger. Main bearings are rebabbitted. Valve pusher holes are checked for size, the block is given a water pressure test and carefully inspected before leaving.

"The cylinder block, almost ready for assembly, is returned by conveyor to the motor building. There the final reconditioning operations are done, such as refinishing valve seats and finishing bearing surfaces, and assembly begins. "Camshafts have been reconditioned, and new cam gears attached. Connecting rod bearings of the floating copper-lead type, standardized by Ford this year, are used instead of the old type bearings. Crankshaft bearings have been refinished, usually by polishing on the same type of machine as that which finishes new crankshafts. An occasional crankshaft will require grinding. Valve pushers of modern design only are installed, the type used on early V-8s being scrapped.

"When the block assembly is complete it is run by an electric motor to make sure everything is in line and properly assembled. Valve fittings and clearances are checked as on a new motor. Another water pressure test is made. Pistons of the latest type are in matched sets and are fitted to the same clearances as on a new motor.

"It will be seen that the entire Ford operation is comparable to that of building new units."

Safe Driving Campaign Supported by Hudson, Terraplane Dealers

A campaign to supplement safe automobiles with safer drivers has been started by the Hudson Motor Car Co. and is being carried on by its distributors and dealers. Hudson and Terraplane dealers generally have agreed to center their activities throughout August on preaching and teaching safe driving to every driver, regardless of the make of car he owns.

They are making free safety first inspections in which an owner can have every part of his car on which safety depends inspected free of charge and get a report on its condition.

They also are featuring exhibits giving the answers to a long list of questions on how to drive safely under general and specific conditions.

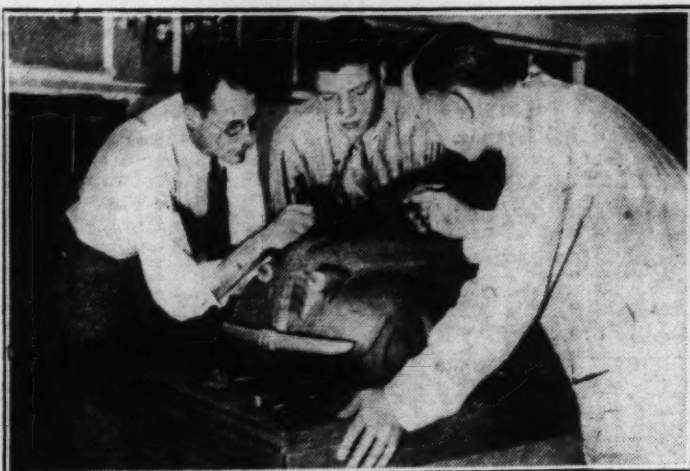

Free safety driving demonstrations are offered free to any driver of any car.

Buick Co. Spending $14,500,000 Expanding Facilities, Curtice Says

Complete Revamping of Plants to Be Finished Within the Next Few Weeks.

By the Associated Press. FLINT, Mich., Aug. 10.—The Buick Motor Co. is spending $14,500,000 for expansion and rehabilitation of its manufacturing facilities, Harlow H. Curtice, president and general manager, announced today.

"This large expenditure represents a complete revamping of the Buick plants that began 18 months ago, and will be completed within the next few weeks," Curtice said. "The changes, additions and improvements are greater than have been made in any similar period in the last 10 years."

New machinery, tools and equipment are being installed, he said, and plant facilities are being rearranged "in preparation for a substantially increased production in 1936."

Almost every one of the 30 Buick manufacturing divisions has been included in the expansion program, Curtice said, with the largest expenditures going into the foundry, forge, sheet metal, axle, differential, transmission, motor and final assembly plants.

The announcement said that part of the program was made necessary by increased production of parts made in Buick plants for other divisions of General Motors.

More than 500 separate items of machinery, and a total of 11,290 separate tool items, ranging from cutting devices to forging dies are involved in the program, he said.

Two-Door Sedan Type Gaining in Popularity

John C. Chick Holds

"There is a renewal of popularity of the two-door sedan type of body this year that is unmistakable," says John C. Chick, general sales manager of Cadillac Motor Car Co. The long-distance driving season has served to emphasize its advantages.

"I base this assertion largely on the public approval that has been given the La Salle two-door touring sedan as indicated by our own sales records this year, and the popularity of that style of body in general.

"It is only necessary to observe the large number of new cars of the two-door type on the highways today to realize the truth of this statement.

"As far as all-around convenience goes, the two-door body type fills the bill better than most other types. However, until the present series of cars came along there were always certain drawbacks from the standpoint of appearance and interior arrangement.

"Now, streamlining has given to these cars an overall appearance that could not be achieved in the older body designs. Many LaSalle owners and other discriminating motorists contend that the two-door touring sedan is the best looking car in the entire line.

"Then, too, the more comfortable arrangement and the improved appearance of the front seat have converted many to this body style.

Chevrolet Dealers Attend Meeting On "Ride America" Drive

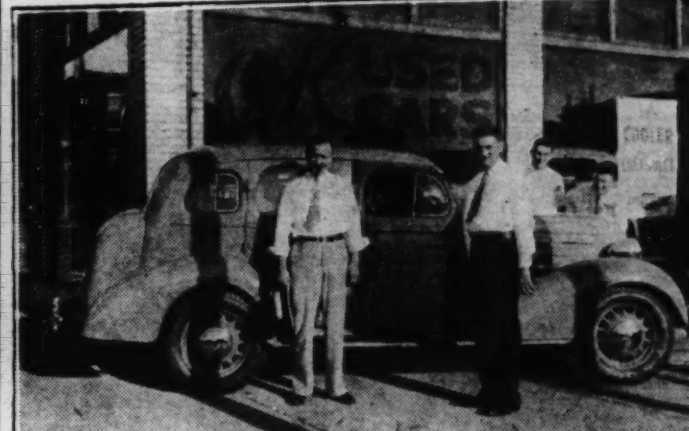

Two hundred Chevrolet dealers, retail sales managers and salesmen attended a meeting at Norwood Hills Country Club the past week in connection with the "Ride America" demonstration campaign which the Chevrolet Motor Co. is staging this month.

Plans for demonstrating the performance and riding qualities of the 1935 Chevrolet to millions of potential buyers were outlined at the meeting of F. X. Miller, assistant zone manager, and C. C. Schelp, retail city manager. By maintenance of peak production in the Chevrolet plants, deliveries can now be made more promptly than at any time heretofore this year, it was announced.

"The assurance of prompt deliveries," said one dealer, "was good news to us. As any model can now be obtained without delay, it is a logical time to put on a real demonstration drive. A ride in a Chevrolet is a revelation in smoothness, comfort and ease of control, and an experience which no one considering a car can afford to miss. Add to this the economy and durability which our owners find so gratifying this year, and you have the explanation of the shortage which is only now beginning to abate."

Schelp said that all local Chevrolet

Elmore Hupmobile Co. To Distribute Hupp Cars in St. Louis Area

The Hupp Motor Car Corporation has appointed the Elmore Hupmobile Co., 3000 Locust street, its distributor in St. Louis and the surrounding territory.

The firm is headed by F. L. Elmore, as president and J. D. Cook as vice-president. Elmore has been in the automobile business since 1912, and for the past two years was distributor for Hupp in Decatur, Ill.

Cook has been in automobile business for the past 18 years and was associated with Elmore in distributing Hupp in Decatur.

The salesroom the Elmore Hupmobile Co. has taken over in St. Louis has more than 30,000 square feet of floor space. New equipment has been installed in the service department to service Hupp cars together with a complete line of parts. The service department employees are men who have serviced Hupmobiles for a number of years in St. Louis and all have had factory training.

The location of Elmore Hupmobile Co. is convenient for downtown service. The firm has made arrangements whereby any Hupp owner driving his car in for service on his way to work will be assured of being taken to his office without inconvenience.

A complete line of new Hupp cars is now on display.

Chicago and Southern Air Lines Report July Record Month

Chicago and Southern Air Lines completed in July the most successful month in operations between Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans, according to Carleton Putnam, president.

July, compared with June, shows increase of 98 per cent in passengers carried by the line. The passenger revenue in July over the entire system, compared with June, shows an increase of 65 per cent.

The company operated a 100 per cent perfect schedule in July for the day trips and 98 1/2 per cent perfect for the night flights. Passengers carried from St. Louis in July, compared with those in June, showed an increase of 52 per cent and the revenue increased 55 per cent.

Goodyear Service to Add Maplewood and Wellston Stores

A. P. Bethel, general manager for the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., announces that two new Goodyear service stores will be opened in St. Louis, one at 7195 Manchester, Maplewood, the other at 5584 Easton, in the Wellston district.

The Maplewood store will be under the management of Martin W. Chamberlain, who has spent the last four years in the retail department of the Goodyear service store at Twenty-second and Locust. He is a graduate of the Goodyear Industrial School maintained by the factory at Akron, O.

The Wellston store will be in charge of Matt Habacher, who has been with the Goodyear Company for some time in the retail end of the business. He formerly was at Paducah, Ky.

Both new stores will have the latest tire service equipment and a complete line of tires, batteries, auto accessories and radio sets.

WE decided on Hupmobile

28 YEARS OF INTEGRITY CLAIM YOUR RESPECT

There's far more at stake in deciding the future of a business, than in purchasing a single car.

It was vital, therefore, that we have the good sense to investigate and consider thoroughly, before we selected the motor car to which this business would devote itself. Facts decided us on the Hupmobile—and here are some of the facts.

Because twenty-eight years of integrity have won universal respect for the Hupp institution and its products.

Because of the intense loyalty of Hupmobile owners.

Because of the incredibly widespread conviction that Hupp has always built a good car.

Because present Hupmobile models are the lowest-priced of the genuine streamlined cars—and distinctly the most highly refined and pleasing in appearance.

Because their performance is literally breath-taking—with more horsepower for their weight and wheelbase than any car of comparable price—and more speed than you'll need.

Because they are designed with the science born of experience—and built with a care, precision and quality that assures full value and lasting satisfaction.

Because they present the best features of the best cars—with numerous advantages and developments of their own.

Reasons like these were fully good enough to decide us. They are good enough, we believe, to justify our asking YOU to consider the Hupmobile before YOU decide.

ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 11, 1935.

LONG-TERM LEASES CONCLUDED ON WASHINGTON AVE.

Curlee Clothing Co. Renews Contract on 8-Story Building at the Corner of Tenth.

UNITED BANK
PLANS TO MOVE

Financial Institution to Occupy Two-Story Building at Broadway Intersection
Built in 1916.

By Berry Moore

Closing of negotiations for leases involving, notably, quarters on downtown Washington avenue was a distinct feature of the week in realty.

The Curlee Clothing Co. has renewed its lease on the eight-story building at the northwest corner of Washington avenue and Tenth streets for a term of 10 years. The total provisions in the new in-dure were not disclosed.

The property is owned by the John S. Sullivan estate. Comprising approximately 100,000 square feet of usable floor space, the slow combustion structure has a frontage of 54 feet on Washington and a depth of 150 feet on Tenth to an alley. It is one of the most substantial of its type on Washington avenue, east of Twelfth boulevard.

Negotiations were handled by Fred G. Zeibig, of Cornet & Zeibig, representing the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co., trustee for the Sullivan estate.

Negotiations are pending for a renewal of the lease of the Curlee Clothing Co. on the adjoining building, 1001-1013 Washington avenue.
The building, with 60,000 square feet floor space, is owned by Washington University, represented by Isaac A. Hedges.

Bank to Occupy New Quarters.

The United States Bank & Trust Co. has concluded negotiations for a lease on the two-story bank building at the northeast corner of Broadway and Washington avenue, formerly the home of the Franklin Bank, with plans to occupy following the completion of necessary alterations. Negotiations are being handled by Thomas F. Stephens of the First National Co. The bank now occupies the corner portion of the Missouri Athletic Club building at 401 Washington avenue, under a lease which will shortly expire.

The Broadway and Washington avenue building is a two-story terra cotta structure, enhanced by gold leaf dome and marble columns. It is a completely equipped bank building with a safe deposit vault in the basement. It was built in 1916 by the late Edward C. Simmons, founder of the Simmons
Hardware Co., for the Franklin Bank, which occupied it under a 25-year lease. The building has been practically vacant since 1928, when the Franklin Bank consolidated with the American Trust Co., as the Franklin-American Trust Co.

The 25-year lease, which calls for an annual rental of $18,000, and which has six years to run, was assumed by the Franklin-American Co., which is now being liquidated through the First National Bank.
The present negotiations provide for a new lease from the Simmons estate for a long term, effective at the expiration of the existing lease. The Simmons estate is represented in the negotiations by the St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustee.

Other Locations Considered.
Several other locations have been under consideration as quarters for
the United States Bank & Trust Co., including the ground floor of the National Bank of Commerce building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Olive street. The United States Bank has a large clientele, however, among commission merchants on North Third street, which probably was an influential factor in its remaining on Washington avenue.

The store room and basement in the six-story building at 517 Washington avenue has been leased to Peter Lazarus, retail dealer in ladies' hats and ready-to-wear apparel. The property is owned by the Missouri Baptist Orphan Home.

FHA MORTGAGE CLINICS
TO BE HELD HERE THIS WEEK

The Federal Housing Administration in co-operation with the Approved Mortgagees Association of St. Louis and St. Louis County, will hold a mortgage clinic in St. Louis on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 12, 13 and 14, for the purpose of explaining the buying, building and refinancing of homes under the National Housing Act.

The clinic, which will be held in the Franklin-American Bank building, at Seventh and Locust streets, will be open from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m.
The mortgage clinic is a method of educating the public in general and the lending institutions in a correct understanding of the National Housing Act. The Clinic in St. Louis will be under the personal direction of Richard S. Hawes, the district director, here.

There will also be an attractive architectural display at the Clinic of paper-mache models of the houses (some 24 in number) for which ground was broken May 25, which will not only show the type house to be had under the National Housing Act, but will show the lat-

HOUSE IN FAIR OAKS
FOR F. R. JACKES

English Residence Designed With Carved Stone Entrance
—Others Planned.

Construction has been started at 57 Fair Oaks in St. Louis County on a pretentious residence for Franklin R. Jackes, secretary of the Evans Manufacturing Co.

The house will be of modified English design, with carved stone entrance and entrance porch of carved wood. The first floor will contain living room, dining room, breakfast room, kitchen and pantry, and maid's room, with baths.
An attractive feature will be a large entrance hall with carved staircase. On the second floor there will be three large bedrooms, in addition to sleeping porch, and two baths. The basement will include a recreation room. The house will be air conditioned. There will be an attached garage.

Construction will be of hand-made sand moid brick, with stone trimmings. The first floor will be of reinforced concrete. The building was designed by Hugo K. Graf, architect. Construction contracts have been let to the Philippi-Wilking Construction Co.

Six acres of ground situated between Ballas road and Ennis avenue, just north of Country Life Avenue in St. Louis County, has been purchased by Charles Luke. Plans are being made for a handsome Colonial residence for this site. An adjoining acre-site has been purchased by Albert E. Cunliff, attorney, for a residence of English design. L. V. Freeman, architect, has two transactions. Construction is to be started when plans are completed.

Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, has plans for the erection of three more houses in Lake Forest, at the southwest corner of Clayton and Hanley roads, to cost $55,000 each, including the cost of the ground.
Two will be of Colonial and one of English design, and will occupy lots 100 by 175 feet. Bradshaw recently completed three houses in this addition, two of which, it is understood, have been sold. William L. Gourley is manager of the Lake Forest addition, with John P. Dolan Realty Co. sales agents for the new residences.

There have been 21 Lake Forest houses sold this year, according to Gourley.

Gilbert L. P. Strelinger has plans for a handsome residence, which will occupy a 16 1/2-acre site on the east side of Geyer road, south of the Clayton road. The site is adjacent to the new Colonial residence of Christopher E. Muckerman. It was recently acquired through Edward L. Bakewell.

Plans or other residences on an elaborate scale are in prospect for Geyer road between Clayton and Manchester roads. Renewed attention is focused on this section as offering eligible sites for high-class residential developments.

BOWDON COMPANY OWNER OF LINDBERGH BOUL. LAND

Davis Bungalow Was Built on Leased Ground That Reverted to Owner.

The tract of land on the west side of Lindbergh boulevard just north of Huntleigh Village, on 3.48 acres of which a bungalow, known as last week, is situated, belongs to the Bowden Company, Inc., of which David M. Donnan, president of the Electrical Engineering & Manufacturing Company of Pittsburgh, is president, according to a statement by the latter. In 1933 account of the sale of the property it was stated that the bungalow-site was part of a large tract owned by Dwight Davis.

"The present stockholders of The Bowden Company have owned this tract in fee simple since 1870," declared Donnan. "The Davis Bungalow was built by Dwight Davis on a leasehold, which in due course reverted back to the owners." The tract in question is a part of the Dr. William H. Bowles estate, containing approximately 165 acres and is located directly north of the Village of Huntleigh on Lindbergh boulevard on which it has a frontage of about one-half mile.

The Bowden Company was incorporated in 1932 with David M. Don-

ELEVENTH-OLIVE
FURNITURE HOUSE

Five-Story Building on Northwest Corner in Dorris Block to Be Occupied by Quality Company.

The five-story building at the northwest corner of Eleventh and Olive streets has been leased by the Quality Furniture Co. for a term of years. It will be remodeled for a furniture store on a comprehensive scale. The rental was not disclosed. Arthur S. Martin & Son arranged the lease.

The concern has a store on the southeast corner of Eighth street and Franklin avenue, which it will continue to operate. A branch store conducted by the concern at 4411 Natural Bridge avenue is to be discontinued, it was announced. The company is composed of Carl Tar-kow, president; Edwin V. Glaser, vice-president; and Simon I. Russek, secretary.

The building, which is a unit of the Dorris Block, comprises 15,500 square feet of floor space, exclusive of the basement. It has a frontage of 22 1/2 feet on Olive and 109 feet on Eleventh street. The property is owned by the Haldeman sisters.

The furniture section of Olive street, east of Twelfth boulevard, has witnessed noteworthy expansion since the first of the year. The Union-May-Stern Co. recently purchased an eight-story building, embracing a quarter of a block at the southeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Olive street, which is being remodeled and modernized at an estimated cost of $100,000. It dominates the Olive street approach to downtown St. Louis. The present quarters of the concern comprise a five-story block at 1126 Olive street.

The American Furniture Co., which has occupied a five-story building at 1114 Olive street for a number of years, recently acquired a long lease on the five-story building at 1114 Olive street, which is being remodeled and modernized at an estimated cost of $100,000. It dominates the Olive street approach to downtown St. Louis. The present quarters of the concern comprise a five-story block at 1126 Olive street.

The Mullins-Walters Real Estate
Co. negotiated this lease.

Heads Better Gardens Club.

Mrs. J. F. Williams of Kirkwood was elected president of the Better Gardens Club of Greater St.
Louis yesterday. Other officers elected are: vice-president, Mrs.
Isabel Sears, Belleville; secretary,
Mrs. Edgar Walsh, Richmond
Heights, and treasurer, Mrs. T. J.
Brown, Kirkwood.

CURB TURNOVER LARGEST FOR

SATURDAY SINCE FEB. '34

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Led by utilities, the curb surged higher in today's short session accompanied by a record turnover. Transfers, which approximated 300,000 shares, were the largest for any Saturday since Feb. 10, 1934.

Gainers of 1 to around 3 points included shares of American Gas & Electric, Electric Bond & Share, Citizens Power & Light preferred, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, United Gas preferred, and in the industrial section, Vost Mfg. A. O. Smith, Ingersoll-Rand and Aluminum Co. of America.

FINANCIAL NOTES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 10.—For the first time, the corporation at six years ago with paid in capital of $100,000,000 accrued from the sale of 1,000,000 shares of capital stock, Lehman Corporation's net assets have recovered in value to a point sufficient to pay $100,000,000 on the stock outstanding. The corporation's present break-up value compares with $95.98 per share.

The large increase in sales of electric power, the company's main business, promises to carry the total for the full year up to a new high record of about $100,000,000. The company is owned by Fitch Publishing Co. Last year's sales amounted to $95,000,000. The report said that in 1933 they were 1,064,000.

The total sugar meat of 13 U. S. railroads in 1933 was 2,280,000 tons, valued at $2,510,000 gross tons compared with $2,115,000 in the same period a year ago, and $1,900,000 in the same period a year before. In the same period totaled 2,280,000 tons.

W. F. Kenney, president of the Great Northern Railway, spoke optimistically of crop prospects along the lines of his company's property. "Threshing results in a very small margin," he said, "but," he said, "and I would say that present estimates, carefully made, would show a little more than double last year's crop. Wheat is of lower milling grade. Coarse grain is in the shape."

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Favorable dividend changes in the current week numbered 17 compared with 26 in the preceding week, according to the Standard Statistics. Unfavorable changes amounted to 2 against 1 a week earlier.

Boston Bond Market.

BOSTON, Aug. 10. (U. & Department of Agriculture). The volume of sales in 1944 and finer territory wools was fairly good in Boston during the past week, and prices on this grade were fairly firm. Lower grades of territory wools were mostly quiet. Prices were firm on 58s, 60s, to blood territory wool, and somewhat irregular on 56s, 58 blood. Medium semi-bloomed fleeces wools were moderately active at steady to firm prices. Ohio and similar bright fleeces, however, were mostly slow but fairly quiet, on a steady to rising staple at 30@32 cents in the green. Some of the better grades of 56s, 58s, 60s, to blood and 4s, 50s, to blood, and at 31@32 cents for 36s, to blood.

YOUTH NEARLY DROWNS IN ATTEMPTED RESCUE

Preston Redden, 16, Pulled Under 5 Times in Struggle With Negro Boy in Meramec.

A 12-year-old Negro boy known only as "Ed" was drowned in the Meramec River, 300 feet below Long Beach at 9 o'clock last night when he became exhausted while attempting to swim the stream for a third time.

It was the boy's custom to get food from campers in return for odd jobs and cooking. He had received a meal from two white boys camped below the closed Osage Beach, opposite Long Beach. He swam the river twice, and had started back when he called for help in mid-stream.

One of the campers, Preston Redden, 16, 1842 South Twelfth street, swam out to him, but the Negro boy grabbed him so frantically that Redden went under five times in attempting to save him. When Redden had finally broken the hold and was himself near exhaustion, an onlooker, John Dernberg of Kirkwood, rowed out in a skiff and seized him as he was going under again. The Negro's body was not recovered.

SEWELL, IN ANSWER TO SUIT, SAYS WIFE 'SPIKED' HIS DRINKS

Charges She Did This at Parties So She Could 'Carry on With Guests.'

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 10.—Barton F. Sewell, millionaire yachtsman, accused his wife, Leah, of "spiking" his drinks and being overly familiar with her servants, in an answer filed today to her suit for separate maintenance. Sewell has a divorce action pending in Las Vegas, Nev. The Sewells figured in the wife trading divorce case of the Walter Emersons earlier this year.

Mrs. Sewell, named as the "other woman" in the divorce suit filed against Buster Keaton, film comedian, by Mae Elizabeth Keaton, was accused by Sewell of keeping their Beverly Hills home in "an uproar and state of excitement for two years."

He charged she "spiked" his drinks at parties she gave, so she could "carry on with the guests." On a yachting party a year ago, he charged, she "tickled the legs of the steward serving us."

Mrs. Sewell's attorney, Henry Bodkin, said: "Mrs. Sewell will disprove all these charges in court."

CHILDREN GOOD RISKS, SAYS MAKER OF VACATION LOANS

George E. Buchanan, Detroit, Returns With 13th Party He Has Taken to Alaska.

By the Associated Press.
PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 10.—Loans to children for vacation trips to Alaska were described as good risks by George E. Buchanan, Detroit bachelor, who returned today with his thirteenth annual group of vacationists.

Buchanan said about a third of the money he had lent to youths had been repaid "earlier than I would have expected it to be." He lends each child a third of the cost of the trip on condition the individual himself earns a third and his parents supply the other third. The total cost of the vacation for each individual is approximately $300 for 30 days.

The money repaid on the loans goes into a fund for future tours. This year's tourists, who will return to Detroit Monday, number 28. Girls were taken for the first time, and will be included in future tours. Buchanan said that after his death the tours would be carried on by an incorporated board and financed by repaid loans.

MAN HELD IN KILLING OF SON

Charged With Shooting in Quarrel Over Politics.

By the Associated Press.
RAY ST. LOUIS, Miss., Aug. 10.—A father charged with killing his son in a political quarrel was removed to the Harrison County jail at Gulfport today when ill feeling developed here.

The father, Edward E. Oliver, 55 years old, was removed after he was arraigned before Justice of the Peace August Ruhl and pleaded innocence of the shooting of his son, Albert Oliver, 28. Police said they quarreled over the son's support of the candidacy of his father's brother for Constable in last Tuesday's Democratic primary election.

STRANGE ANIMAL IN COUNTY

Thought to Be Coyote; Seen in Ladue and McKnight Villages.

Owners of dogs in Ladue and McKnight Villages are concerned over the appearance of a strange animal in that area. Several dogs have been bitten by it in the last 10 days and its occasional howls at night set the neighborhood dogs to barking.

The animal seen several times at twilight slinking through yards, has been described as a coyote by one who knows the species.

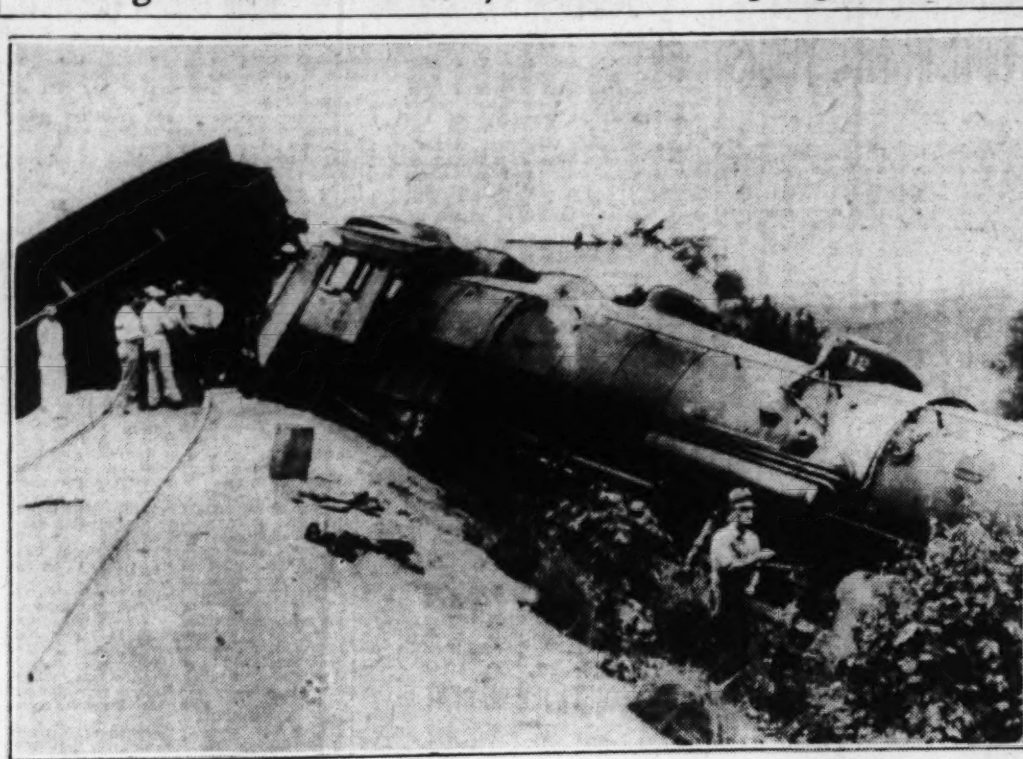

NEW YORK POLICE CLUB REDS

Disperse Crowd Shouting Communist Slogans; Man Hurt.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Police used clubs tonight to break up a crowd of 500 or 600 persons who were shouting Communist slogans before a theater in the Bath street section of Brooklyn.

Nine persons, one a woman, were arrested on disorderly conduct charges and one man was taken to a hospital suffering from a fractured skull.

Freight Train Wrecked by Bomb Near Springfield, Ill.

THE locomotive and 10 of the 110 empty cars it was pulling were derailed on the Illinois Central line early yesterday. Three trainmen were injured. The dynamiting is ascribed to the mine unions' feud.

NEW CONCESSION MADE ON PROCESSING SUITS

Congressional Conference Agree Findings of Revenue Commissioner Wouldn't Be Final.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Senate and House conference committee members moved for peaceful congressional acceptance of the farm adjustment bill today by widening the opportunity for suits to recover on processing taxes.

With removal of this major obstacle to acceptance by Congress of the conference report on the AAA amendments, the measure will be put before the House Tuesday and sent to the Senate later.

The agreement was reached as reports on processing taxes showed collections were cut sharply by the 899 pending injunction suits in Federal court. The situation caused some farm officials to repeat their belief of the necessity for an early decision on constitutionality of the AAA.

June taxes, collected in July, dropped more than $11,000,000 from the May total, and daily Treasury receipts indicated an even greater decline for July taxes being collected this month. For June, 1935, collections were $30,950,261, compared with a total of $43,043,375 for June, 1934.

The conference committee warned in advance to Senate objection to their first draft of the tax suit provision, worked out a revision after announcing a formal agreement on the bill. As before, the bill would permit processors to file claims with the Internal Revenue Commissioner for tax refunds in event the processing taxes are held invalid, but no longer would the Commissioner's findings be binding on the courts.

"As I understand it, it is a decided improvement," said Senator Borah (Rep., Idaho), "but I can't pass on the proposal as a whole until I see it."

Borah declared the first conference draft amounted to "nullification" of the efforts of the Senate to write into the bill permission for processors to claim rebates in event they should prove they had not passed on the taxes to consumers or producers.

To forestall any flood of recovery suits in event the processing taxes should be held unconstitutional, the administration sought to shut them off altogether and this was provided in the House bill.

The Senate voted to permit suits for recovery of taxes not passed on. The first conference compromise required processors to file claims with the collector of internal revenue, whose findings would be made final and not subject to review by the courts except for error.

Members indicated also that a processor could submit his claims before any internal revenue office in the various States, subject to regulations of the commissioner.

$600,663 APPLICATION FOR EAST SIDE PROJECTS FILED

Proposals Aids to Improve Sanitation With Prospect of Employing Groups of 426 and 531.

An application for $600,663 was filed yesterday with the National Allotment Board in Washington by Fred G. Austin, Administrator for Public Works Progress in the East St. Louis district, for improvements to be undertaken by the United States Health Service.

The first proposal seeks to eradicate malaria in Randolph, Perry and St. Clair counties, Illinois, by draining swamps and farms. This would cost $264,559 and employ 426 persons.

The second health plan is an attempt to control typhoid by erecting better sanitation facilities in 10 counties in Southern Illinois. This community sanitation project, begun under the CWA and continued through Illinois work relief funds, would cost $338,104 and put 531 men to work.

$50,000 FUND AVAILABLE TO INVESTIGATE TRAIN BOMBING

3 of Crew Furt in Illinois Wreck, Thought Due to Coal Union Dispute.

By the Associated Press.
SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 10.—A $50,000 fund for investigation was available today as Federal, State and county officials sought clues in the bombing last night of an Illinois Central freight train, in which three members of the crew were hurt.

The train bombing, another in a long series which, officials say, are incident to the union controversy in Southern Illinois coal fields, was the first since the Legislature appropriated $50,000 last June for the purpose of investigating such bombings.

The engine and 11 of 110 cars southbound on the Illinois Central were lifted from the tracks and scattered along a 20-foot embankment three miles south of Springfield late last night by an explosion of dynamite. Ira Fitzgerald, fireman, and Wesley Westbrook, conductor, were seriously injured. The engineer, W. H. Hoff, escaped with minor injuries. The three reside at Clinton, Ill.

Officials think the dynamite was intended for a coal train which nightly goes north on the same tracks. The dynamited train was an extra and passed the spot where the bomb had been placed but did not stop. The northbound coal train was due.

The Illinois Central and the Chicago Midland, as well as the Peabody Coal Co., have had $10,000 awards standing for the arrest and conviction of train bombers. The Federal Government has entered the investigation.

Taylor was convicted of participation in the 1934 robbery of the Nicklin Tannery Co., 409 South Second street, in August, 1927. Buschman also received a life sentence, and Elmer Schneider originally was sentenced to life imprisonment, but received a new trial. He pleaded guilty and accepted a five-year term.

LAWYER SUES; SAYS $5000 IS DUE FOR LEGAL SERVICES

Edward R. Weimer Brings Action Against Mrs. Florence Walter, an Administratrix.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Edward R. Weimer, an attorney, against Mrs. Florence D. Walter, 3450 Sidney street, for $5000. The petition set forth that legal services were rendered between April, 1934, and last June, and that Mrs. Walter had failed to make a settlement.

Recently Probate Judge Arnold allowed Weimer a fee of $1000 as attorney for Mrs. Walter, administratrix of the $76,000 estate of her husband, Adolph Walter, who died April 21, 1934. In rendering the judgment the court reduced Weimer's claim by $2000; he had asked for a fee of $3000. Mrs. Walter contended the bill was excessive. It was brought out she discharged Weimer and employed another lawyer.

Mrs. Walter has a petition pending in Probate Court asking for a citation against Weimer alleging that he is wrongfully withholding assets of her husband's estate consisting of stock in the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., and American Tobacco Co., having a total market value of about $60,000. She asked that he be directed to surrender possession. Weimer explained in court he held the securities to insure payment of his fees.

The petition for a citation was set for hearing on Sept. 9.

THREE CHIEF HEIRS TO ESTATE ESTIMATED ABOVE $10,000,000

Bowman Gray, of Reynolds Tobacco Co., Leaves Bulk of Property to Widow and Sons.

By the Associated Press.
WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 10.—The will of the late Bowman Gray, chairman of the board of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, was filed for probate today and leaves one-eighth of his net estate for charitable, religious and benevolent purposes and the remainder equally to his widow and two sons, Bowman Jr., and Gordon Gray, of Winston-Salem. The value of the estate has been estimated in excess of $10,000,000.

That part bequeathed to benevolent causes was left in trust for the Winston-Salem Foundation with instructions that members of his family act as a committee to decide what causes are to receive the benefits.

Gray died July 7, on a cruise to Norway and Sweden and was buried at sea.

ACTING GOV. HARRIS GRANTS TWO PAROLES

One to Edward Taylor, Serving Life for St. Louis Robbery He Denied Committing.

By the Associated Press.
JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 10.—Acting Gov. Frank G. Harris granted a parole today to Edward Taylor, who had served about six years of a life term in prison for a St. Louis robbery which he said he did not commit.

Among petitions Taylor submitted was an affidavit of Orville Taylor, no relation, who said he was present when Joe Buschman, a convict who died in the prison hospital Nov. 9, 1932, made a dying declaration that "Eddie had nothing to do with this. He is innocent." Orville Taylor, since paroled, was a hospital attendant at the time.

Acting Gov. Harris also paroled Davis Jackson, 42-year-old Weston (Mo.) Negro, who has spent more than half his life in the penitentiary.

Sentenced in Buchanan County to serve a life term for rape, Jackson was received at the prison Sept. 24, 1913. Prison officials said he had served longer than the usual life term. His sponsor was Charles Beecham, Kansas City.

Officers of the association are William N. Sifton, president; Paul N. Winter, vice-president; Harry J. Burkart, treasurer; A. N. Engle, secretary, and M. M. Greenwood, assistant secretary.

Similar suits are pending against directors of several other closed banks.

APPLICANT STABS TWO MEN IN KANSAS RELIEF OFFICE

Agency Workers Seriously Wounded; Assailant Flees but Later Surrenders.

By the Associated Press.
KANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 10.—A Negro relief applicant was jailed here today for an alleged assault in which two relief agency case workers suffered knife wounds. The assailant, Sam Patterson, fled, but later surrendered to police.

Frederick Daniels, 23 years old, of Holliday, Kan., one of the wounded case workers, said Patterson entered the office and Daniels referred him to another worker for a food order. Daniels said Patterson became abusive and drew a knife. The case worker said he struck Patterson with a wrench in self defense and the Negro slashed at him and inflicted a deep cut in his right leg.

Fred Hill, 22, another case worker, sprang at Patterson who, he said, cut him across the abdomen. At a hospital, Hill and Daniels were said to be in serious condition. Patterson was charged with assault.

Y. M. C. A. FUND CAMPAIGN TO BE CONDUCTED OCT. 14-25

80 Pct. of All "Y" Activities Are Self-Sustaining; Balance for Free Programs.

The Y. M. C. A. campaign for funds to support its activities in 1936 will be conducted from Oct. 14 to Oct. 25, it was announced yesterday by Wilbur B. Jones, president. No goal has been set. Last year the organization raised $140,000 in its fall campaign. The policy of conducting campaign in the fall was adopted so that it might be known in advance what funds would be available for the coming year.

Eighty per cent of all "Y" activities are self-sustaining, Jones said. Money raised in the campaign will be used to provide programs free of charge for young men in the "Ys" 12 branches in St. Louis and the county.

CHINESE CITIES LAID WASTE BY TYPHOON AND FLOOD

Missionary From Stricken Zone Tells of Damage in Chuanchow and Hungai.

By the Associated Press.
AMOY, China, Aug. 10.—Dr. Edward Strick, of Palo Alto, Cal., attached to the English Presbyterian Mission at Chuanchow, arrived here today with details of the damage done that city by a typhoon.

Strick said further flood danger was imminent because of heavy winds and torrential rains. Chuanchow, he said, was almost completely isolated. The only means of leaving the city is by sailboat. Most of the buildings in Chuanchow have been either destroyed by cyclonic winds or under flood waters. He said his mission hospital, situated on high ground, was not destroyed but was overflowing with injured.

At Hungai, short distance northwest of Chuanchow, virtually all the buildings were destroyed by wind or water, Strick said.

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT RETAILERS' MEETING

2223 Register First Week-of Convention—More Are Expected.

Attendance of retail merchants at the convention of the American Retailers' Association last week was the largest in the history of the organization, which was established in 1923. Scott R. DeKins, secretary-treasurer, announced yesterday. Registrations totaled 2223. Hundreds of additional merchants are expected this week.

Merchants from 29 states registered at convention headquarters at Hotel Jefferson. DeKins pointed out that because of elections in Mississippi, a large number of merchants at that state postponed their trips to the convention until this week. Additional merchants from Arkansas, Tennessee, Alabama and other states in St. Louis' trade territory also are expected for the final week of the meeting.

Visiting merchants will attend the Municipal Opera production of "Roberta" Tuesday night. There will be three additional style shows this week in the Grand Opera Hall of the Municipal Auditorium. The shows are presented as part of the musical feature, "The Ship of Fashion," in which Elda Vettori, Metropolitan Opera singer, has the leading role. The three remaining shows will be presented Monday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, at 8:15 o'clock.

"All the retail merchants seemed optimistic concerning business this fall," said DeKins. "This was reflected in the volume of their purchases, compared with their buying in the past few years. Executives of many houses on Washington avenue reported that their sales were the best for any market season since 1929. The remark, 'It's an old-time market season,' was a common one up and down Washington avenue. Down town hotels have been filled to capacity."

ST. LOUIS NATIONAL HORSE SHOW SET FOR OCT. 14-19

Dairy Exhibit to Be Held Also at Arena; Part of Proceeds to Go to Disabled Veterans.

The St. Louis National Horse Show, sponsored by the St. Louis Horse Show Association, Inc., will be held at the Arena Oct. 14-19, at the same time that the National Dairy Show will be held there. The dairy show will be held during the day, the horse show at night.

Part of the proceeds of the horse show will go to the Disabled Veterans of the World War, Chapter No. 1. In 1934 the St. Louis Firemen's Pension Fund received a percentage of the show receipts. Cash prizes totaling $15,000 have been announced, in addition to the trophies and ribbons to be awarded the winners. All of the customary events of the show, including harness races, three-day and five-gaited saddle horses, roadsters, heavy harness horses, hunters and jumpers will be held.

Officers of the association are William N. Sifton, president; Paul N. Winter, vice-president; Harry J. Burkart, treasurer; A. N. Engle, secretary, and M. M. Greenwood, assistant secretary.

REDS CONSIDER CONCESSIONS IN FIGHT AGAINST FASCISM

Moscow Congress Likely to Make Three Recommendations for Organizing United Front.

By the Associated Press.
MOSCOW, Aug. 10.—Three recommendations to national Communist parties apparently will be made by the seventh congress of the Third International, which today heard more speakers propose concessions to effect a united front against Fascism. The recommendations are expected to be:

Support of bourgeois democratic government in collaboration with non-Communist but anti-Fascist political and religious organizations, and taking the initiative or at least giving full backing in movements looking toward united front governments.

It has been made clear, however, by the principal Communist speakers that Communist participation in any united front government would be merely a stepping stone to efforts for establishment of Soviet rule.

Martha Stone, representing the American Communist women's organization, urged greater attention to the spreading of Communist doctrines among women.

LACLEDE TRUST CO. DIRECTORS SUED FOR $5905 IN DEPOSITS

It Is Alleged That Six Men Knew of Insolvency When Funds Were Received.

Six directors of the closed Laclede Trust Co. were sued in Circuit Court yesterday for $5905, representing claims of six depositors. The suit was filed by C. B. Morganthal, to whom the claims were assigned. His attorney, Paul Dillon, pointed out that the directors were liable because they permitted deposits to be made in the bank after the bank was insolvent. The petition alleged the directors knew of the insolvency.

The trust company, which was at 2801 Olive street, has been in the hands of the State Finance Commissioner since Jan. 16, 1933, and is in process of liquidation. Directors named in the suit were William G. Mueller, D. A. Thomson, J. C. Rodenberg, H. W. Kroeger, George A. Nies and James A. Dacey Jr. Their counsel, to whom reporters were referred for a statement, could not be reached.

Depositors who assigned their claims to Morganthal and the amount of their deposits were: C. D. and Emily Behmer, $294; St. Malachy's Church, by its pastor, the Rev. J. P. Johnson, $302; William Meisner, $1160; Mrs. Bertha Barber, $500, and Sickles, Inc., $3648. The deposits were made during 1931 and up to the time the bank was closed.

Similar suits are pending against directors of several other closed banks.

CITY BUDGET DIRECTOR PUT ON RELIEF COMMITTEE

A. C. Meyers Made Chairman of Organization to Study Outlook and Conditions.

City Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers has been appointed chairman of the newly formed Committee on Outlook and Conditions of the St. Louis Relief Administration. The appointment was made by Wallace Crossley, State Relief Director.

Meyers said yesterday that work of the committee would not start until next month. The committee probably will study local relief conditions and recommend changes in policy, if thought desirable. Meyers has prepared for study by the local committee, a digest of a recent report made by the members of the New York City Aldermanic Committee investigating the relief administration there.

ITALY AND JAPAN BIG BUYERS OF SCRAP IRON

Commerce Department Reports Exports in Last 6 Months Set Record.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Exports of scrap iron and steel were reported by the Department of Commerce today. Japan and Italy were the big buyers.

Scrap iron and steel exports for the first half year totaled 1,134,226 gross tons. This compared with 733,848 for the first half of 1934 and was more than in the full 12-month period in 1933 or in any previous year since the World War. Japan took 724,246 tons, against 407,592 during the first six months of 1934. Italy increased its purchases from 94,308 tons to 145,923 tons.

Other major buyers were the United Kingdom, Canada, Poland, Mexico and China. A total of 28 countries purchased the metals from the United States this year, compared with 21 in the 1934 six-month period.

The best markets, the department said, are "located in those countries having an insufficient supply of raw materials which must be augmented through the importation of scrap required to support a local steel industry and in those countries which have an extensive supply of raw materials available, but import scrap where its use results in economies compared with the use of locally produced raw materials."

Annual figures on scrap shipments show that the average yearly export during 1921-25 was only 69,735 tons. This jumped to an annual average of 335,178 tons in 1928-1930. In 1930 the total was 38,649. It fell to 136,125 in 1931, increased to 227,522 in 1932 and tripled in 1933 to 773,406.

ENGLISH AUTHOR WINNER OF MARK TWAIN PRIZE

C. E. Carpenter Receives Award for Best Essay on Centenary of Humors.

The eighth annual contest of the International Mark Twain Society for the best essay on "Mark Twain's Centenary" was won by C. E. Carpenter, an English author residing in Geneva, Switzerland, for his paper, "Mark Twain, 1834-1934," it was announced yesterday by Cyril Clemens, a relative of Mark Twain, and president of the society. Carpenter's paper dealt with his meetings in Vienna with the humorist, who instructed him in the art of interviewing.

Those receiving honorable mention are: Prof. Carl Holliday, San Jose, Cal.; Thomas Ewing Dabney, New Orleans; Frank Foster, Seattle; W. A. Rylie, Vancouver; the Rev. Charles Smith, Oldham, England; Frank Casselton, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss M. Snow, Grand Upper Montclair, N. J.; Mrs. L. Scarborough, Natchitoches, La., and Albert Fuller, Birmingham, England.

Judges were Josephine Johnson, Frederick Hazlett Brennan, Stephen Leacock and V. F. Calverton, writers and lecturers.

ALABAMA CROWD CHEERS NEGRO CONGRESSMAN'S TALK

Resolution Indorsing Roosevelt's Policy on Race Relations Adopted; Some Whites in Audience.

By the Associated Press.
ATHENS, Ala., Aug. 10.—Cheers for the Roosevelt administration echoed today as Representative Arthur Mitchell (Dem., Illinois), one of the Negro members of Congress, declared it had devoted its energies toward helping the common man. Shouts of "That's right" and "You tell 'em," went up from a crowd of 1500 whites and Negroes as the Congressman, departing from his prepared address, asked: "Have you been happier since Mr. Roosevelt became President than at any time during the administration of Mr. Hoover?"

At the conclusion of Mitchell's address a blanket resolution endorsing the administration and expressing thanks was unanimously adopted by the grand stand section filled with white persons.

The resolution specifically expressed gratitude for reopening banks on a sound basis, passage of the Bankhead cotton production control bill, Federal relief for the destitute, the housing act, farm loans and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The occasion was "Negro TVA appreciation" held on the anniversary of their first pay day for Negro TVA employees in this section.

POINTE-AUX-BARQUES, Mich.,
Aug. 10.

INVITATIONS in the form of jury summons took a large group of the summer resort colony to the gardens surrounding the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Luther S. Trowbridge of Grosse Pointe last Sunday to witness a mock trial.

George O. Begg of Detroit was the defendant in a suit brought by John Hamilton Farish for damages to his feelings because of Mr. Begg's failure to send him a Christmas card. Judge Lester Moll of Detroit presided, and Edgar A. Guest, the poet, who is occupying his summer home near the clubhouse, not only selected the jury from a called panel, but officiated as clerk as it was sworn in. The St. Louis jurymen were Mrs. Albert T. Terry, Marion Niedringhaus, Mrs. John R.
Shepley and her sister, Mrs. David
R. Calhoun.

The following witnesses, Mrs. Robert Whittemore Knapp, Mrs. Edward Gillette Hotchkiss, Benoit Thompkins and Dr. Ellsworth Smith, were urged to "disprove" the charges of both defendant and plaintiff.

After many arguments, participated in by all "court" attaches, the judge asked for a verdict, which he promptly set aside and found Mr.

the naval review which took place off Portsmouth late last month.
From the grandstand on the deck of the boat they watched the King's royal yacht lead the parade down the lane of ships. Thousands of people thronged the banks and crowded the yachts and boats which were anchored at the shore. At tea time, to the music of "God Save the Bishop Kemerer's Daughter Is Wed

THE wedding of Miss Elizabeth Kemerer, daughter of the Rt.
Rev. Benjamin T. Kemerer,
Bishop of Duluth, Minn., and Mrs.
Kemerer, to Dr. William Long Porcher of Denver, Colo., took place at 8 o'clock last night at St. John's Episcopal Church, St. Cloud, Minn.
Mrs. H. R. Edwards of New York was her sister's only attendant.
William John L. Porcher of Denver, was best man for his brother. Vernon Jones of St. Cloud and Cadwalader Jones of St. Paul were ushers. The marriage service was read by Bishop Kemerer and the bride was given in marriage by John Oscar King of St. Louis, a close friend of the Kemerer family.
The bride wore a gown of white satin, fashioned with a draped neckline and long sleeves trimmed with quilted satin cuffs. A belt of the quilted satin marked the normal waistline. She wore the tulle veil used by her sister at her wedding a few years ago. The veil fell from a cap trimmed with braided tulle and clusters of orange blosoms. Mrs. Edwards wore a gown

THE annual historical pageant of Nantucket is attracting many St. Louisans at New England coast resorts. Many of the old mansions containing collections of early American art, samplers, china and old furniture are open to the public. Among those attending the exhibition and luncheon at the Yacht Club Thursday were: Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lackland Taylor of St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor arrived at Woods Hole Tuesday, coming from St. Louis to be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Plant aboard their yacht Voyager II, for a cruise, the first stop being Nantucket. They will take the outside course from Nantucket to the Maine coast, stopping at many points en route. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O. Toberman of Webster Groves are also aboard the yacht as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Plant for the cruise to Maine.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Holcombe of Hartford, Conn., visited Mr. and Mrs. A. Wessell Shapleigh of Woods Hole, on their way to Nantucket. Mr. Holcombe and Mr. Shapleigh were roommates at Yale University. Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Shapleigh gave a cocktail party at their summer estate Leidsdamer. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, Mr. and Mrs. John Gillespie Moore, Mr. and Mrs. George Hayward Niedringhaus, Mrs. Charles Claffin Allen, Mrs. Theodore O. Hess, Mr. and Mrs. John Valle James, Mrs. George Dobler, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Spaeth. Mr. Shapleigh returned to St. Louis last week.

Mrs. George Dobler and Mrs. C. L. Johnson have been cruising this week with Mrs. Thomas Donaghy of Fairhaven, Conn., and attending the races in Vineyard Sound.

Mrs. Thomas E. Pierce and her daughter, Miss Roberts, are among the St. Louisans here for the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. G. Meyer entertained friends at the hospital benefit ball last week, among them Mr. and Mrs. George Mackay, Brookline, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Lancaster, New York, and Mrs. Dobler.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Upthegrove and their son William Upthegrove are at 7 Orange street, Nantucket, for the rest of the summer. Their daughter, Mrs. White Warren Kirkbride, the former Miss Elizabeth Upthegrove, will join them in two weeks for a visit. Their son, Daniel Upthegrove Jr., will join his family later in the summer. Mrs. Felix Anderson and Mrs. George Henson are also at 7 Orange street.

Mrs. Elvira Royle Howard of St. Louis, has taken a cottage here for the rest of the season.

Firmin Desloge arrived aboard his yacht, Nimrod, last week with a 400-pound sword fish he had caught. Mr. Desloge had with him

MRS. GEORGE GELLHORN JR., of New York and her daughter, Elizabeth, who are visiting Mr. Gellhorn's parents, Dr. and Mrs. George Gellhorn. —Schweig.

Debutante List

For Washington

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. THE debutante list for next season is beginning to take shape. On a list of some twenty, many tentative, some definite, a forecast of a most attractive crop looms as a pleasant prospect.

Senorita Amelita Alfaro, pretty dark-eyed daughter of the Minister of Panama and Senora de Alfaro, is the only representative from the diplomatic group on the list at this time. Presumably Senorita Alfaro will follow the foreign custom of being introduced to her parents' friends at a series of small teas, with a dance perhaps later for her contemporaries.

Miss Anna Moorhead, daughter of Mrs. Howe Moorhead, who ran away from her mother in Paris last year to avoid a debutante season, has been prevailed upon to forget her study of the dance, if even for a season, and have her coming out this year. Mrs. Moorhead and her daughter have a charming house in R street, with a legion of friends to insure a social whirl for the debutante.

Certain to make a distinct hit this season is Miss Eleanor Flood, daughter of Mrs. Henry D. Flood and the late Representative Flood of Virginia. She is a cousin of Senator Harry Flood Byrd and the Antarctic explorer.

Mrs. Flood lives in Winchester, Va., with her family, which also includes two sons, Robert and Bolling Byrd Flood, but probably will winter in town.

Formerly Miss Anna Portner, Mrs. Flood may be said to belong to that almost extinct but still socially powerful "cave-dweller" set of Washington. She is the sister of Mrs. William Payne Meredith whose own daughter, Sylvia, made her debut a season or two ago, and also of Mrs. Augustine Humes of New York and Newport, once married to Larimer Graham.

Miss Flood does all the things a debutante is expected to know how to do. Fond of sports and is very pretty.

Miss Imogene Gardner, the Gwynn Gardners' daughter, will be an outstanding debutante from the residential circle. Fairly tall and slender, she has brown hair, hazel eyes, and a flair for clothes.

Miss Marguerite Hagner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner, may make her bow to Washington society this coming season. Also Miss Polly Wigram, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wigram; Miss Emily Davis, daughter of Mr. Archibald Davis, and Miss Mary Patterson, daughter of Mrs. Samuel Patterson, a lovely person to look at.

Captain Harry Stuart, U. S. N., and Mrs. Stuart will have two debutante daughters, Mary Blagden and Anna Lee, both very attractive and popular with the Navy set.

Parties for St. Louisans At La Jolla, Cal.

Casa de Manana for a few days last week. They plan to return for a longer visit later in the summer. Arnold Stifel arrived the first of the week to join Mrs. Stifel and their children, who have been here since June. Mr. Stifel will remain until September, when he will accompany his family to St. Louis.

Dorley L. Gardner arrived Monday to join Mrs. Gardner and their two children in a visit with his mother, Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner, who has a house here for the summer.

Among the recent arrivals here are Mr. and Mrs. Horton Watkins and their three children, who will remain until Sept. 15. They have again taken Strong Hilltop for the rest of the season.

Mrs. Julian Glasgow and Miss Mary Lee are guests at La Jolla Manor. En route to La Jolla they stopped at Fish Creek, Wis., for a visit with Miss Lee's sister, Mrs. George Hoffman. Mrs. Hopkins entertained Sunday night at the Casa de Manana in their honor, and Monday night Mrs. Bevis gave a small dinner for Mrs. Glasgow and Miss Lee.

Mrs. George W. Goode entertained at luncheon at the Casa de Manana Wednesday. Mrs. Goode, a former St. Louisan, is now living in San Diego. Among her guests were Mrs. Frederick Orthwein, Mrs. Bevis, Mrs. Catherine D. Adams and Mrs. Frederick D. Gardner.

Miss Bertha and Miss Isabel Skinner have taken a house at Rancho Santa Fe and will be here for an indefinite stay.

Vesper Service at Y. W. C. A. The Virginia Asher Business Women's Bible Council will be in charge of the Y. W. C. A. vesper service this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the downtown branch, 1411 Locust street. Miss Hope Sheldon, a missionary in South America, will address the council Thursday evening at the same place.

To Wed This Month

MISS HAZEL MAY SILVERBURG, daughter of Mrs. Eli Silverburg, 3626 Lafayette avenue, will take place Friday, Aug. 23, at the Hamilton Avenue Christian Church.

Kathryn Ball Weds Arthur Winkelmeyer

MISS KATHRYN BALL, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Elmer Ball, 524 Lee avenue, Webster Groves, was married yesterday afternoon at Arthur B. Winkelmeyer, 324 Hawthorne boulevard, Webster Groves, the Rev. William Saye officiating. The Webster Groves Christian Church where the marriage took place was decorated with palms and greenery and large baskets of white gladioli and white roses. Only relatives and a few close friends of the two families were present.

The bride's gown of white mouseline de soie had a full tucked skirt, a close-fitting waist and high round neckline with a circular collar. The full puffed sleeves were elbow length. She wore a large white hair braid picture hat and carried a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley and white gladioli. Her sister Miss Marjorie Ball, who was her only attendant, was gowned in yellow mouseline de soie made with a full skirt and short jacket with puffed sleeves. Her large picture hat and slippers were brown, and her bouquet was of yellow gladioli.

Ralph Winkelmeyer, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Joseph Ruebel and John Porter Henry, were ushers. Out of town guests included two aunts of the bride, Mrs. William Wigginton and Mrs. C. A. Baptiste, both of Moberly, Mo.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the Ball home. Mr. Winkelmeyer and his bride left for a honeymoon at Michigan resorts.

The bride is a graduate of Washington University, where she was a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. Mr. Winkelmeyer attended the Principia and Washington universities. He is a member of Psi Kappa Epsilon. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Winkelmeyer will occupy their new home on Forest avenue, Webster Groves.

Fall Productions Of Grand Opera

WITH the opening of the St. Louis Grand Opera Company for the fall season the convention hall section of the Municipal Auditorium will be dedicated. The performances will be sponsored by various social and civic organizations of St. Louis. The first production, "Turandot," by Puccini, Oct. 31, will be sponsored by the Service League of the Church of St. Michael and St. George. Renato Citterali, Italian Consul and a committee of which Vincent Siglito is temporary chairman, will have charge of the second performance which will be "Norma," by Bellini. "Faust," by Gounod will be presented under the auspices of the St. Louis Section of the National Conference of Jewish Women.

The sponsors of "Turandot," by Wagner will be announced later.

A partial list of the boxholders for the Grand Opera season follows: Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, Walter W. Head, Edwin L. Grey, Frank M. Mayfield, Edwin A. Lepp, Harry M. Pfleger, Mrs. John E. McKelvey, Mrs. H. A. Uhl and Mr. and Mrs. L. Warrington Baldwin.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Loria of 5597 Lindell boulevard motored from their home on Monday to join their sons, Russell Jr. and Sam, who have been guests in the cottage of Mrs. Loria's mother, Mrs. Sam Pingree. Mr. and Mrs. Loria will remain for the rest of the summer.

Misses Clara and Louisa Leets of St. Louis were luncheon guests on Saturday of Mrs. Leonard Matthews at the Belvedere Club.

Mrs. and Mrs. E. A. Buemann had as guests over the week-end, before they left for St. Louis, Mrs. Harris Cobb and Mrs. Christian Stocks.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Valier have had as their guests for several days Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Jones. The Valier cottage overlooks the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Fowler Campbell of Washington boulevard are recent arrivals at the Belvedere Club. They entertained several guests on the resort with colored molasses cake and punch.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Fisher, who recently traveled on Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. Vernon Clark.

Robert Lewis Fisher Married in the East

MISS HILDA M. CLAASSEN, daughter of Mrs. Fred Claassen of Lyons, N. Y., was married to Robert Lewis Fisher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin K. Fisher, of Blenden place, Friday afternoon. The wedding took place in the garden of the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Pell at Fort Ticonderoga, N. Y., the Rev. Daniel T. Hill officiating. Miss Anna Grushoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Helen Schies were bridesmaids. They wore frocks of powder blue chiffon with hats to match. The bride wore a gown of sweet pea toned organza with a large garden hat of the same shade. Alfred Gertsch of St. Louis was best man. A reception followed the wedding.

The bride was graduated from the Wheelock Kindergarten School in Boston. Mr. Fisher was graduated from the University of Missouri and from Washington University. He is professor of history at the Principia. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will live in St. Louis.

Babette Seele Wins College Scholarship

MISS BABETTE LOUISE SEELE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene W. Seele, 761 Harvard avenue, University City, has received a scholarship in Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass. The award was made by the Wellesley Faculty Committee Scholarships on the basis of her scholastic record at Mary Institute and her grades in her college entrance board examinations. Her grades were the highest at among Wellesley college candidates in the Middle West.

Miss Seele was graduated from Mary Institute last June. She was a member of the Glee Club and class representative of The Chronicle, the Mary Institute year book. Miss Seele is a pianist and has taken part in several radio programs.

CONVENTION PROGRAM OF LEGION AUXILIARY

Mme. Schumann-Heink to Sing at Afternoon Session on Sept. 23.

The full program for the convention of the American Legion Auxiliary, which will be held in St. Louis in September, was announced yesterday by Mrs. Clark Hudson, chairman of the committee in charge. The auxiliary meeting will open Sept. 22, a day in advance of the American Legion convention. Both organizations will hold their final sessions Sept. 26.

Mrs. Hudson said the various State headquarters of the auxiliary had estimated that 50,000 members would attend the convention. Most of them will come to St. Louis with their husbands who are members of the legion, and with their sons, members of the Sons of the American Legion.

Headquarters for the auxiliary will be at Hotel Jefferson. Business sessions will be held at Bessie Temple. Committees which will function during the convention include those on Americanism, community service, finance, legislative membership, poppy sales, rehabilitation, education of war orphans, national defense and child welfare.

A reception for Mrs. Albin Charles Carlson, president, and other national officers will be held at 9:30 p. m. Sept. 22 in the gold room of the Jefferson.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, noted singer, is to open one of the afternoon sessions Sept. 23 with a song.

Members of the auxiliary will participate in the legion parade beginning at 10 a. m. on Sept. 24. Officers will be nominated Sept. 25 and elected the following day.

Princess Alexandrine G. Cantacuzene, president of the Fidac Auxiliary for Rumania, will speak at 11 a. m., Sept. 25.

Ludington (Mich.) Summer Visitors Entertain Guests

LUDINGTON, Mich., Aug. 10. LILBURN A. HENRY, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Porter Henry, entertained a group of the younger set at tea Sunday evening at their cottage, Comanche.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry have had several guests recently. Miss Margaret and Miss Betty Trembley, who are staying at Lake Baldwin, Mich., with their parents, spent Monday here, and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Williams of Webster Groves are visiting them at present.

Mrs. W. R. Shillington has as her guests Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Scheu Jr. and Mrs. Truman Walker, all of St. Louis. Mr. and Mrs. Scheu plan to return to St. Louis in a few days. Mrs. Walker will remain two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Shillington, the latter formerly Miss Matilda Jones, arrived Friday to spend the rest of the season in their new cottage, West Wind.

Douglas H. Baer, accompanied by Dr. and Mrs. Fred Kramer, St. Louis, spent last week with Mrs. Baer and the children at their cottage on Lake Michigan.

Miss Betty Hessing and Miss Carol McCarthy departed Monday for Camp Minnawanka, where they will remain for two weeks. Miss McCarthy has been a guest of the Hessing family at their cottage.

Miss Marion Bishoff, who has been on an extensive trip through Canada, is visiting Miss Virginia Hessing. Miss Bishoff will resume her studies at Washington University this fall.

Mrs. Senter M. Jones and her daughter, Miss Elizabeth, Mrs. Linda Nichols and Miss Peggy Marquis, all of St. Louis, who have been at Waukasoo Inn, near Holland, Mich., for the past few weeks, motored here Monday to visit Mrs. A. O. Leutheuser and Mrs. Cortland Harris.

They plan to come here for a visit later in the season. Mrs. Charles Hill is spending a week with Mrs. Leutheuser, and Mrs. Harris and her daughter, Louise, now have as their guests, Nick O'Bannon, Thomas O'Brien and Miss Odie Wise, all of St. Louis.

Jack Muckerman and Russell Herman, both of Webster Groves, arrived Monday to visit Watson Skinner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse S. Skinner, at their cottage. The boys came here after visits in Southern Michigan. John S. Skinner is now with his mother after the summer session at the University of Wisconsin, and George Skinner, another son, will arrive from St. Louis next week.

Charles Holman, who has been here about a week, will leave soon for a trip through California.

COMPLAINTS TO MAYOR ON 'AD' SOLICITATION

He Says He Has Approved No Canvassing for Political Publications.

Mayor Dickmann told reporters yesterday that complaints had been made to him that business firms were being solicited to purchase advertising in the "Municipal Reference Book," a publication containing a directory of city and State officials. This publication, he said, had not been endorsed by the administration and he had not authorized the solicitation of advertising for it.

"It has been brought to my attention," said the Mayor, "that business men and manufacturers in the city are being solicited for advertising space in magazines and various other publications which are represented to have some political standing or significance. A number of persons so solicited, I am told, are reluctant to respond to such solicitations without first ascertaining that the persons claiming to be responsible for such publications are co-operating with me in my administration of the city's affairs."

Without His Approval. "Such a display of interest on the part of business and industrial interests of the city in the success of my administration is naturally gratifying to me and, while I have not been informed who the persons are who are making these solicitations, or whether they are co-operating with me or not, I feel I owe it to my friends in the business and industrial circles of the city to let it be known that none of these solicitations are being made either with my knowledge, consent or approval."

"And particularly I would like to let it be known to those who have been solicited and who might have some trade or contractual relations with the city that it is not necessary for them to respond to such solicitations in order to assure a continuance of the very cordial relations which the city has enjoyed in all of its business contacts with them."

Alderman Allen E. Peterson of the Twenty-third Ward told reporters that complaints had been made to him that solicitors for the publication were using his name. He said he had given a letter of introduction to the publisher whom he knew only as "Riley" but had not authorized the use of his name in soliciting advertising.

"I don't know where the office of the publication is or much about it except that it is supposed to contain short biographies of city officials and a list of officials and location of their offices," said Peterson. "I don't want people trying to get advertising by using my name, however, and I want everybody to know that."

Royal Parties For Regatta Week

LONDON, Aug. 10. BRILLIANT weather has so far favored Regatta Week. Each evening King George and Queen Mary have entertained a small dinner party aboard the royal yacht, the Victoria and Albert.

Among their guests have been Sir Wade Clifford, Governor-General of the Bahamas, and Lady Clifford. Lady Clifford is the former Alice Gundry, daughter of J. M. Gundry, of Cleveland.

Gerald Lambert, owner of the American yacht Yankee, has also been a guest aboard the royal yacht.

After presenting new colors to the Black Watch Regiment at Glamis Castle, the Duke and Duchess of York will motor tomorrow to Cannock, Scotland, where they will be the guests of J. Pierpont Morgan for 10 days.

The American Colony is interested in plans for the dinner hall to be given by the Associated Countrywomen of the World at Clardige's, December 3.

Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, wife of the American Ambassador, is expected to act as chairman at the Fall committee meetings.

An international pageant is being planned for the fall. The members' committee includes Mrs. Warren Pearl, Mrs. J. Roland Robinson, Baroness Schroeder, Viscountess Gladstone, and Mrs. I. Steff.

COLORFUL VACATIONS IN CENTRAL AMERICA

Guatemala and Its Neighbor Mexico Offer Many Highly Interesting Sights.

For a cool and colorful vacation, Guatemala and its near neighbor, Mexico, have few equals. Both represent an ancient people whose lives and civilizations have been thinly overlaid with a new culture. No more fascinating source of archeological research exists in the Western world. The pyramids with their strange carvings and intricate and perfect mathematical design are known to most students who are interested in Maya culture.

History Well Known. The history of these countries since the days of the Spanish Conquest in 1542 is well known. While the language spoken is Spanish, not the hispanic "Castellano" but a smooth succession of soft sounds, the handicrafts and dress still hark back to the mysterious past. Public buildings and monuments are ornate Spanish baroque but the more intimate crafts, such as weaving and pottery and glassware are all naively primitive.

The markets of Mexico City and Guatemala City have much in common. One may purchase colorful pottery, finely woven baskets and blankets, strange tropical fruits, clothing, and enormous Mexican sombreros. The love and respect that most primitive races have for their children is shown in the fanciful, beautifully made toys which can be purchased on any market day. Bargaining is part of every sale. The Mexican and Guatemalan women feel that they have been cheated unless the bargaining on both sides is lively.

Guatemala City lies back of the only Atlantic port of the republic, Guatemala, Puerto Barrios. This port is named for General Jose Maria Barrios, once a president of the republic whose statue stands on the Boulevard "La Reforma" which he was instrumental in constructing.

CAMPING TRIP OR TOUR FOR JAMBOREE SCOUTS

Boys Who Were to Have Gone to Washington Consider New Outing Plans.

St. Louis Boy Scouts who had been selected to attend the National Jamboree in Washington met last night at Pilgrim Congregational Church with their parent and scout officials to consider plans for a camping trip to take the place of the canceled jamboree.

Several tentative plans for the trip were suggested when word arrived Thursday that President Roosevelt has called off the Washington meeting because of an outbreak of infantile paralysis in the East. Two weeks of camping at a Wisconsin or Minnesota lake, or a tour in those States were considered.

Ricard Baldwin, chairman of the jamboree committee, yesterday expressed satisfaction with the spirit of the scouts in face of their disappointment. "Not one of the picked Scouts has forgotten what he learned as a tenderfoot—that a Scout is loyal, obedient, and cheerful."

The 130 boys who were to make up the jamboree group from St. Louis had been selected on the basis of service in scouting, rank, and character. Many had been chosen to represent their troops as the "outstanding scout" and were to go to Washington on money raised by the troop.

The final period of summer camp at Irondale Reservation will end this week. Attendance this season has broken all previous records, with a total enrollment of 1138 boys. In the best season before this year about 1000 scouts had camped at the reservation.

Troop 74, Sherman School, and Troop 63, Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, held a joint court of honor Friday evening at 4020 Flad avenue. Phil Ziegenfuss, south district chairman, awarded Eagle Scout badges to Scout Buck Jones of Troop 74 and Wilbur Finger, Troop 63. Kenneth Jones and Joseph Harper received Life Scout badges.

Troop 248, Edwin Long School, will award Star Scout rank to August Weidner and Ray Kummer at a court of honor tomorrow at the troop camp near Wright City, Mo.

Kirkwood Troop 4, Kirkwood Presbyterian Church, will also make awards tomorrow evening. Carl Dagele, Lewis Sallor and Robert Woodbury will become Life Scouts, while F. P. White, Junior Daily and Jack Laick will receive Star badges. Robert Bennett and Robert McKee will be invested as Tenderfoot Scouts.

John Hoech, scout of Troop 1, Thomas Station, was made a Star Scout at a troop court of honor Friday. Stunts were given by the Eagle and Beaver patrols.

Troop 166, St. Mark's Lutheran Church, gave a Star Scout badge to Robert Jenneman and a number of merit badges to other scouts at a court of honor Friday evening.

ST. LOUIS U. PROFESSOR STUDYING STATE'S FIRE CLAYS

Dr. Victor T. Allen Seeks More Information on Burning Behavior and Utilization.

Dr. Victor T. Allen, associate professor of geology at St. Louis University, is carrying on a petrographic investigation of the fire clays of Missouri, under the auspices of the Missouri Geological Survey.

The purpose is to determine the mineral composition and origin of the clays, in order to better understand their burning behavior and utilization.

The clay industry of Missouri is the second largest mineral industry in the State. In addition to diaspore clay, which is found in commercial amounts only in Missouri, the State is well supplied with plastic and flint clays that rank among the finest in the United States. Collections from the extensive deposits in the St. Louis district, from Callaway, Audrain and Montgomery counties are being made and the laboratory study is being carried on at St. Louis University.

New uses and increased production of the various clay types utilized in the ceramic industry are expected when the mineral components of the clays are fully known. Information regarding the mineral resources of the State are published by the State geologist for the benefit of the public.

OLD TIME FIDDLER WHO WAS GUEST OF HENRY FORD DIES

Jep Bisbee, 93, Taken in Private Railroad Car in 1923 to See Edison.

By the Associated Press.
LUDINGTON, Mich., Aug. 10.—Jep Bisbee, whose skill as an old-time fiddler won him many honors, including a trip to New York in Henry Ford's private railroad car, is dead. He was 93 years old and said he was Michigan's champion fiddler.

Bisbee was stricken with a heart attack and a cerebral hemorrhage yesterday afternoon, after he had given a concert on a program commemorating the death of Father Jacques Marquette here. He died in a hospital.

It was in 1923 that Ford took Mr. and Mrs. Bisbee east to meet Thomas A. Edison. While there, Bisbee made some phonograph records, more than any other person ever made in one day, Edison said later. Bisbee won a contest held under Ford's auspices in 1920.

A Communist In Paris

Goya—Hugo—The Bourse

By VLADIMIR LIDIN

Translated from Izvestia, Moscow Official Government Daily—Reprinted from The Living Age.

On a grayish Paris day a few lonely lovers of painting and literature wandered into the Bibliotheque Nationale. Silence reigned in the darkened rooms, where a jubilee exhibit commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of Victor Hugo's death was on display: huge medieval manuscripts with broad margins for insertions and corrections—L'Homme qui rit, Les Travailleurs de la mer, Notre Dame de Paris. Complicated, monumental works, a long life of labor.

The old-age portrait of a man who made France famous by a half-century's work. The opened manuscripts testified to the complete literary creation of their author. He stirred huge clouds of history, which now mark the path of French literary development. Another wonderful master of a past epoch, Goya, was represented by a series of passionate etchings, whose hatred of war and of mankind's stupidity proclaimed the glory of another art. Now they were neighbors—Goya and Hugo. Two masters representing two different arts.

Wild Scenes on Bourse.

Only one block separates the quiet building of the Bibliotheque Nationale, with its archives, manuscripts and books, from the noisy and unabashed square of contemporary life. On the square rises the many-columned building of the Bourse. On that day unusual cries, recalling a rebellion rehearsed on the stage of some theater, carried as far as the library. While debates went forward about granting full power to the Government in the financial field, stocks, government bonds and rent rose and fell. All the porticos of the Bourse were packed with people. Crazy men with notebooks in their hands rushed at one another. An odor of human sweat filled these rooms, where the speculators raised their hue and cry. Guards in white trousers and blue jackets wandered along the balconies, where the prices were noted down in chalk. Oil stocks, government bonds, bank stocks, Citroen stocks, even the Russian Tsarist debt, as useless as waste paper, had their prices.

Indifferent to Nation.

Who of these crazed men was interested in the fate of France, the financial worries of the nation, the question of national defense? Guards with microphones and earphones walked along the balconies and wrote down new prices. The sweaty herd below pushed and cried, and raised its hands, grew wealthy and then destitute. They could always acquire wealth, under all historical circumstances, whether war was declared or peace were maintained. The historical progress of the nation did not affect them at all. The renown of French heroes, the importance of French art meant nothing. The speculators entangled the nation in a net of cabalistic agreements with private organizations, railroad companies, gas and electric companies, and the bus and trolley lines of Paris.

In Paris today there are still quarters where the dull gas light of a past century replaces electricity. For an old agreement is still in force, giving the gas companies a monopoly there. The Napoleonic code, which has not been brought up to date in decades, moves like an antiquated locomotive and puts a brake on the country's progress. It condemns thousands of people to bow down to old-fashioned laws and circumstances.

Class Distinction in Bus.

The company that controls the Paris busses is not at all inclined to improve and modernize the old green rattletap that is euphemistically called a bus. With grinding sounds and a mighty cry this contraption takes off, rumbling as it goes. The inside is divided into different classes, for even here the division of the population into social classes is strictly observed.

Most of the people stand on the rear platform; the crisis has depleted the first class. The company had to take out some of the seats and install standing room instead. But two or three benches in the first-class section remain unchanged, a symbol of class distinctions.

The Paris population hates these busses and street cars and considers them basic elements of exploitation by private owners. In every conflict the people take the passenger's side, for they unconsciously feel that they are being cheated and given a minimum of comfort for the fare. The people always wonder which is preferable, the discomfort of a bus ride or the discomfort of a subway ride, which is characterized by bad ventilation, a warmish ammonia smell, and long steep stairways, which one has to scale in order to reach the light of day.

Discomfort in Subway.

The subway platforms glitter with coal dust. Now and then someone comes with a teapot of water and sprays the dust. Then the thin dirt slithers under foot. The same practice of social justice divides the cars into first and second classes. The majority ride in second class. During rush hours the stifling air makes one dizzy and somewhat seasick. Awkward iron balustrades, intended to guide the flow of passengers, hit you on the knees. At the express stations, Palais-Royal and Opera, you have to walk for half a kilometer along underground corridors if you want to change to another train. These underground stations look like servants' quarters. They do not arouse a single esthetic emotion. The comfort of the population was never a problem to all these companies that control the country's means of communication.

In France only one railroad line, the one that goes to Brittany and Normandy, belongs to the Government. The rest are in the hands of private owners. Competition runs high along all these roads. The idea of progress and maximum efficiency plays no role whatever. Electrification is a problem of the hour. But, because the railroad directors also own factories producing rolling stock and coal mines, which furnish coal to the railways, coal is fighting electricity, and, because electrification would mean heavy losses to the coal-mine owners, who are also the railroad directors, coal has been victorious in this battle.

Defeat of the Bus.

The condition of railroad travel and the technical equipment do not meet the problems of the age and the demands of the population. The people go on breathing coal smoke, and they must rest content with the comforts that the company offers, with shaking rattletaps and similar delights.

The Rothschild family—five people in all—controls the French railways: the northern and eastern lines and the line that goes to the Mediterranean. The struggle for railroad electrification was one in which stocks, influence and the press were the chief actors. The press belonging to the coal magnates proved the strongest.

For the past few years a fierce battle has been raging between the railroad and the bus. The bus was quicker and more comfortable. The bus took the peasant to his cottage door. It therefore

The Mayor Who Went to Jail —And Remains There— In Defense of Municipal Ownership

Elected on Pledge to Extend City Lighting Service to Residents, C. W. H. Bangs Was Imprisoned May 8, for violating Court Injunction Issued to Protect Private Company From Competition.

Conducts Business in Jail—Stands on Right of Town to Distribute Current to Homes—City-Owned Plant, the Second in the United States, Has Been Lighting Streets Since 1885.

By SAMUEL J. SHELTON,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

HUNTINGTON, Ind., Aug. 10. AFTER three months in the county jail, Mayor Clare W. H. Bangs is as determined as ever that Huntington, a flourishing city of 14,000 population, shall serve electricity from its municipal plant to all residents who wish to buy from that source.

It was this determination that got Mayor Bangs into jail. He made it plain in an interview with the Post-Dispatch writer that he has not relented; that he will not compromise with the power company which instituted the court action resulting in his imprisonment.

He is expecting an early decision, probably next week, by Special Judge David E. Smith, who has the case under advisement, and he hopes it will set him free to give personal attention to the aggressive program of expansion of the municipal utility he instituted when he took office last Jan. 1.

Private Utilities Company

Claimed Monopoly in Town

The case before Judge Smith is the suit of the Northern Indiana Power Co., a unit in the old Insull utilities system, for an injunction to restrain the city from selling electricity to the homes and business houses of Huntington, the company asserting this market is exclusively its own. The day that Bangs became Mayor, having announced his plans for immediate extension of municipal electric service, the utility corporation filed its application for an injunction, in Huntington County Circuit Court.

After issuing a temporary restraining order against the Mayor and other city officials, Circuit Judge Sumner Kenner withdrew from the case and David E. Smith, a Fort Wayne lawyer, was appointed special judge. Mayor Bangs and his aids had started the municipal program with a rush. Bangs had promised immediate action; the people had elected him by a majority of more than 400, and had chosen a city council pledged to extension of municipal service. Within a few hours after Bangs was sworn in, the Council had passed an ordinance for extension of service and several homes had been connected to the city transmission lines.

Subsequently, on a showing by the company that it had lost customers, Judge Smith granted it a temporary injunction and found Bangs and other city officials and employees guilty of civil contempt for having violated the temporary restraining order. A judgment for $1500 damages was granted against Bangs in favor of the company, and on his refusal to pay Bangs was sent to jail.

Began Jail Term May 8

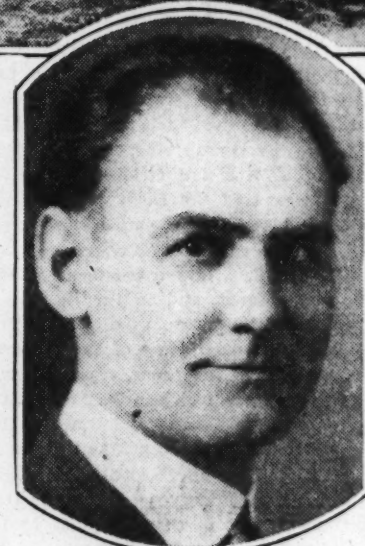

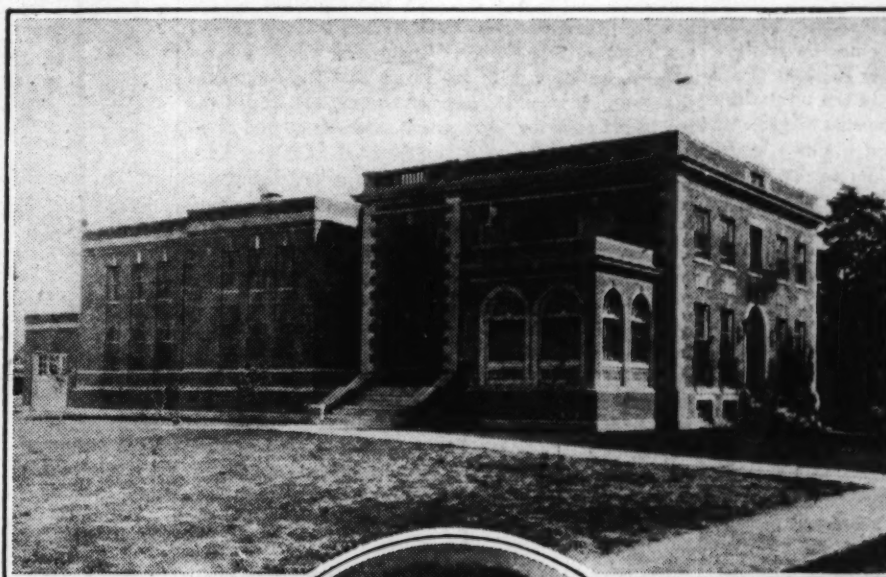

Refusing to Give Bond

Bangs appealed the contempt judgment to the Indiana Supreme Court and his appeal bond was set at $2000, but the Mayor made no effort to furnish bond, asserting that as a matter of principle he would go to jail rather than acquiesce in any way in a judgment he asserted was invalid. It was his contention the court had no jurisdiction to restrain the city from operating a municipal electric plant and supplying current to the public. Other officials cited for contempt gave appeal bonds.

The City Council this week sought to have the Mayor released long enough to attend a meeting to discuss the annual budget, but this was denied by the Court. On an earlier occasion the Council met in the jail so the Mayor could attend.

The Mayor began his jail term on May 8. Not until five weeks later was a hearing held on the merits of the application of the power company for a permanent injunction. For 10 days witnesses for the company and the city appeared before Judge Smith, the company showing its loss of business and the city asserting its right to operate a public utility.

The issue boiled down to this: The company pursuant to the Indiana Public Service Commission law had surrendered an old franchise and had obtained from the Public Service Commission an indeterminate permit under which it asserted the exclusive right to supply electricity in Huntington. It suffered damage from the city's competition. It contended the city had not complied with a 1933 law concerning entrance into the utility business by municipalities.

The city, on the other hand, had operated its light plant for years to supply street lighting, and in 1914 had obtained from the Public Service Commission a certificate of convenience and necessity to engage in the commercial distribution of electricity. It had never surrendered its right to operate a utility, and as the indeterminate permit granted to the power company did not specifically give it exclusive rights, the city contended no such exclusive rights could be inferred from the terms of the permit. It contended the 1933 act did not apply to it, as it previously was operating its light plant.

Mayor Bangs was interviewed in the small reception room at the jail. A deputy sheriff unlocked a barred door to admit the writer. The Mayor arose from a straight-backed chair in which he was sitting before a window, also barred. He would be ready in a moment; he was discussing with a citizen the problems of extending the city transmission lines rapidly enough to take care of the requests for service. The Mayor assured the inquiring citizen that within a few days equipment would be installed to serve the section in which the citizen resided.

Mayor Gives History

Of Municipal Plant

"Now we can talk," said the Mayor as he invited his interviewer to sit on the end of a wooden bench, "near the window where you can enjoy our fine lake breeze"—hot wind blowing in from the railroad yards.

There was a little history to be related.

"The City of Huntington, I think, was the second city in the United States to establish a municipal electric plant," Bangs said. "My information is that Wabash, Ind., was the first. Our plant here began supplying electricity for street lighting in December, 1885, before I was born, and has continued that service without interruption."

"In 1913 the people voted five to one to enlarge the plant and extend the service to the public. A bond issue of $50,000 was authorized and the following year a certificate of convenience and necessity to engage in the commercial lighting business was obtained from the State Public Service Commission."

The plant was enlarged and improved, but for some reason no serious steps were taken toward extending service to the public. The city had established its own waterworks and the two utilities were operated together. The last of the bonds issued were paid last year.

Bangs related how in 1932 he acquired control of the Huntington Daily News, through loans which he had made to the former owners. He immediately began a campaign through the newspaper for extension of the municipal light service to the public.

"Of course I aroused the opposition of the power company and a bank," the Mayor said.

"The bank had me thrown in jail on a charge of criminal libel, which, by the way has never been tried, and while I was in there the power company shut off the power at my publishing plant. The employees on the paper bought a Ford engine and rigged it up to run the press, and they set type by hand. The paper did not miss an issue."

"Last year I advocated that both parties nominate candidates for Mayor pledged to providing municipal electric service. One of the Democratic candidates took a definite stand for that policy, but none of the five Republicans who had announced for the primary would say clearly how he stood. So I entered the race as a Republican candidate, pledged to immediate extension of the municipal service. My nomination, and my election by the largest majority given a candidate for Mayor in many years, shows how overwhelmingly the people stand in favor of the municipal plant."

Satisfied 95 Per Cent of

Townsmen Support Him

"I am confident that 95 per cent of the people of Huntington are solidly behind me in this fight and I have no intention of turning back. I am going to see it through without compromise. Word has come to me recently that the company might be willing to sell its distribution system to the city."

"It is too late for that. We are going ahead installing a new, modern distribution system, adequate for our requirements for many years, and I see no reason why we should buy an antiquated system that is nothing but patchwork."

With a show of pride Mayor Bangs related how the work of connecting consumers to the city transmission lines was going ahead. He was hampered in giving exact figures, not having access to his office records, but he understood the total number of consumers now on the city system was about 600. That was verified at the city hall where it was said that 86 of the number were business houses.

"The total number of electric consumers in the city is about 3800," Mayor Bangs said. "So you see we already have a substantial part of them. We have line crews working day and night extending primary transmission lines, installing transformers and making service connections. More and more consumers are requesting municipal service and the work of adding them to the system is going ahead as rapidly as is physically possible. I should say we average about 10 new connections a day."

Deposits by Consumer

Help Finance Extension

The problem of financing the extension arose early in the program. To buy meters, transformers and other materials, and pay for labor required funds. The power company had included the city treasurer in its injunction suit, and he was restrained from paying out city funds for power plant extensions.

The new consumers were asked to pay de-

Danger of European War, Ferrero Thinks, if France Should Take the Path of Dictatorship

Conservatives and Radicals So Far Balance Each Other, but Economic Distress May Pave Way for Forcible Seizure of Power.

By GUGLIELMO FERRERO, Noted Italian Historian.

GENEVA, Aug. 10.

Is the sentiment of liberty about to wake in the French people? There are signs which lead one to think so. It is to be hoped that these signs are not deceptive. After the end of the war, France withdrew too much into an exclusive preoccupation with her immediate interests and, owing to the narrowness of her views, she committed a series of errors which have been equally disastrous for herself and for Europe. She is now running the risk of falling into the same abyss as Italy and Germany: a coup d'etat.

In order to understand the nature and gravity of the danger, we must form a clear idea of France's political situation. In France there is apparently a great dividing up into parties and groups but all these parties and groups really form only one great division; the Right and the Left. The Right includes all from monarchists to moderate Republicans, and represents the rich classes and a portion of the well-to-do and cultivated middle class; the Left includes all from radicals to Socialists and Communists, and represents the masses, a portion of the well-to-do middle class, the lower middle class, artisans and peasants.

It is thus that both Right and Left proclaim themselves the defenders of liberty and accuse the opposite party of aspiring to dictatorship.

For the moment neither of the two parties is strong enough to make a successful attempt on legality. But the great danger is that the disorder, agitation and poverty which are increasing in France, as they are everywhere else, may end by producing a situation in which a forcible coup may succeed.

From this point of view, the anxiety of all far-seeing persons about the armed leagues organized by the Right is justified.

In a free democracy one can write, speak, organize, make demonstrations as much as one likes, Italy's Misfortune.

Armed leagues, political parties with military organization, are the negation of free discussion and consequently of the representative regime. Fascism and Nazism began by the formation of armed leagues.

There are many persons in France and abroad who find amusement in exciting the two parties against each other. These imprudent persons do not know what a catastrophe a coup d'etat and the coming of an illegitimate government in France would be in the present disturbed state of Europe.

The coup d'etat which gave Italy an illegitimate government in 1922 was a great misfortune. Today the world is expiating the thoughtlessness with which it viewed this event. However, as long as among the great states of Central and Western Europe there was only one illegitimate government, founded by a coup d'etat and maintained by force Europe was able to live relatively in order, hoping speedily to recover its equilibrium.

The catastrophe began when there were two illegitimate governments in the heart of Europe—Italy and Germany. The over-excitement of nationalism, the competition in armaments, the general uneasiness and instability which are ruining the western world, are the consequence of the coup d'etat which permitted Nazism to seize the power, when there was already a similar government in Rome.

Parties Balance Each Other.

The Left, on the contrary, can easily form Ministries, having a parliamentary majority; but it always finds itself in conflict with the press, which excites public opinion against it, and with high finance, the great industrialists and the upper bureaucracy, who form a more or less open opposition.

The two parties are very powerful, but on different planes. They are less powerful than each would wish to be, because they limit one another. The result is that both are exasperated; the Right because it can never have the Government in its hands; the Left because, when it is in power, it cannot govern as it would, in the midst of the difficulties created for it by the Right.

This situation is unique in the world, and one cannot realize what is going on in France unless one understands it. It offers considerable advantages to the country, since neither of the two parties can abuse its power too much. But in the midst of the difficulties which have been accumulating and becoming more complicated during the last five years, this situation begins to present a great danger.

Dangers of Upheaval.

The two parties, exasperated, are beginning to think of a departure from legality, a forcible coup, a political upheaval—the Right in order to checkmate universal suf-

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Says Administration Is Not Democratic.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

PLEASE accept my congratulations on your excellent editorial, "The President and the Constitution." The attitude of the press toward the socialistic and paternalistic innovations of the Roosevelt administration was disappointing until recent months. It is reassuring to know that the intelligent electorate and the prominent newspapers are critically examining the attitude of this administration.

I am a Democrat. I have never voted for a Republican candidate for an executive, legislative or judicial office. But we do not have a Democratic administration at Washington. The teachings of Jefferson, Jackson, Cleveland and Wilson are commendatory of centralized and bureaucratic government. An examination of every platform adopted by the Democratic party from 1832, including the platform of 1932, will clearly reveal that the Democratic party has consistently adhered to non-interference of government and for a rugged individualism.

We are now confronted with an administration bearing the Democratic label that has created more bureaus and governmental agencies than any other administration in the history of this country. The Government is concerning itself with every phase of life to a greater extent than any administration from George Washington down to the present time. Your editorial is timely. The issue must be the Constitution and economy in government. We must not return to the passiveness of a Hoover administration. Neither can we long endure the socialism and paternalism of a Roosevelt.

For Stricter Traffic Laws.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE letter of Charles M. Hay, City Counselor of St. Louis, regarding traffic law fines, is right. The limit of the law for traffic violation should be enforced. Any activity that causes the death of 36,000 persons yearly and sends hundreds of thousands to hospitals, needs the rigorous enforcement of every law.

One-third of those who operate automobiles are incapable of doing so properly. They are incompetent physically and mentally, lack quick perception, or have unsteady nerves. Rapid travel in automobiles requires more than an ordinarily well-balanced mind. What would happen if our railroads were to pick up any kind of untrained chaps to run their trains? We need stricter laws, well-enforced, to govern our highway traffic.

Bloomfield, Mo. G. A. HOFFMAN.

Tribute to a Grandfather.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I READ an editorial in time ago about people who tried to live, as the expression was, "on grandpa's backbone." The writer seemed to think that basking in memories of grandpa and the pattern he laid before us would be detrimental to our lives and affairs, and he inferred that the influence of our hardy ancestors is not enough to sustain us in these days of economic chaos.

My grandfather, though he was not famous, was just, courageous and law-abiding, and was respected enough to be chosen representative of the State he lived in for years. He followed the path of duty and honesty to the end. Following him has made me honest and honorable family of his relatives. His life pattern has been inspiration and strength to me. His sons lived for the welfare of their families, their country and their fellow men.

Retreat From Radio.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MY family solves the problem of poor radio programs by purchasing a good bination radio and phonograph, together with a few good records. I do not know whether the radio part of this mechanism still works. A glance at the radio programs in today's papers leaves me without any desire to find out.

How can commercial publicity medium afford to cultivate a growing indifference or, in some instances, an active dislike among its auditors?

PHONOGRAPH.

A Teacher's Viewpoint.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"PROPERTY HOLDER" whose letter appeared July 25, and who thinks education is an undoubted bachelor or a man who doesn't have a family. If he had a family, he could surely see that education is the hope of the nation. What hope have American youth in anything else than education, to bring our country out of the sad dilemma which now exists?

He thinks teachers' salaries should be cut in half. Now let's look at the teacher's side. I have spent my entire life since I was 6 years old in obtaining an education and in teaching. I have taught a number of years and this year I will receive $75 per month, with 22 pupils in school. I wonder if "Property Holder" would take care of any child, even without teaching it, at the rate of $3.40 per month? Teachers are only employed from eight to 10 months a year. The majority of them must pay board and go away to school in the summer months. JUST AN UNDERPAID TEACHER.

Carbondale, Ill.

AN OLD WASHINGTON CUSTOM.

Some Washington lawyers have been doing quite well during these lean and hungry years. The news has mentioned Patrick J. Hurley, Secretary of War in the Hoover Cabinet, whose legal firm has received $100,000 in three years from Associated Gas & Electric. One item in the account has puzzled the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee's interest. This is a payment of $25,000 for services in connection with the Wheeler-Rayburn holding company bill. What were the services?

As Mr. Hurley explained, he had obtained permission from Representative Rayburn for an officer of Associated Gas & Electric to appear at House hearings on the bill. He had also delivered an unrequired opinion that the bill was unconstitutional.

Mr. Hurley was also paid $50,000 in connection with the stock exchange investigation. In this connection, he said that John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President in 1924, had been employed during that inquiry, and suggested that Mr. Davis be interrogated about his compensation. "Don't worry," was the assurance instantly given by Senator Black.

Another prospering Washington lawyer is Joseph P. Tumulty, remembered as secretary to President Wilson, whose fees from various clients are reported as $107,500 during '33 and '34. "The green isles in the sea, love," less poetically known as the Philippines, have been good to Mr. Tumulty, and Mr. Tumulty has scattered largess with not ungenerous hand. He has given $5000 to former Senator Moses of New Hampshire. Questioned as to the legal work he had done, Mr. Tumulty was somewhat vague. He spoke in gestures and generalities of his own labors and merely recounted the honorarium to Mr. Moses as an incident.

Let's call the roll. Patrick J. Hurley, ex-Secretary of War; Joseph P. Tumulty, ex-secretary to President Wilson; George H. Moses, ex-Senator from New Hampshire; John W. Davis, former Solicitor-General of the United States, former Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, a candidate for the presidency, counsel for the Morgan banking house who personally attended J. Pierpont Morgan during the latter's appearance as witness before the Pecora committee's stock exchange inquiry.

The roster of prospective witnesses to be examined by the Lobby Investigating Committee includes the names of Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War in the Wilson Cabinet, and James M. Beck, a former Solicitor-General, ex-Representative from Philadelphia, recently tapped as a possible presidential candidate next year on the Republican ticket.

As regards Messrs. Davis, Baker and Beck, they are all lawyers of outstanding reputation, signally successful in the practice of their profession, whose ability to earn any fee paid them is not open to question.

But the lucrative practice of law in Washington by former office-holders, as revealed in the present inquiry, is not a late or novel phenomenon. It is an old Washington custom. As far back as 1924, during the oil disclosures, when the shadow of Teapot Dome darkened the continent, the country was amazed to learn that William G. McAdoo, shortly after retiring from the secretaryship of the Treasury in the Wilson Cabinet, had been employed by the Doheny oil interests, which had paid him New York firm $150,000 and retained Mr. McAdoo personally at $25,000 a year. It was also revealed that Mr. McAdoo's firm had been paid a fee of $150,000 for representing the Republic Iron & Steel Co. of Youngstown, O., "in complicated tax matters." The year was 1919.

So the political lame ducks, it would seem, have long been feathering their nests rather comfortably as Washington lawyers.

But the question with the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee is this: "Where does legal service, as such, end, and where does lobbying begin?"

The Post-Dispatch has already asked the question as to the fee Mr. Hurley might have received if he had not been a former Cabinet officer; Mr. Tumulty, if he had not been secretary to a President; Mr. Moses, if he had not formerly been a member of the Senate.

The proprieties ask the same question. The public welfare, as served or disserved by the legislative action of Congress, asks the question. Public opinion may well ask the question.

PUTTING THE LARK IN ITS PLACE.

If the world lasts long enough, all the mistaken notions bequeathed by the poets will surely be corrected. The latest instance of setting things right involves the lark, which Chaucer some 600 years ago reported to be the first riser among the birds. John Lyly had the same thought in mind when he wrote: "Goe to bed with the Lambe and rise with the Lark." Shakespeare and Christina Rossetti, to name only two later poets, accepted the natural history of the earlier bards without confirmation, and so the lark has been held up through the years as the example of early rising. But Shelley's "blithe spirit" does not deserve to be so hailed. Harold J. Massingham, the English essayist and amateur naturalist, found on a recent sojourn in the country that while the lark is no lie-bed, it is not the first bird to announce the coming day. The song thrush and the lowly hedge sparrow, he discovered, both get into action before the lark. This is now confirmed by the British Empire's Naturalists' Association, which reports that the hedge sparrow regularly beats the lark by seven minutes. Doubtless, these adjustments will do for rural England. Down in the Ozarks, as every early riser thereabouts knows, the first bird to flash through the woods is the brilliantly-dressed and sweet-sunged cardinal.

MEXICO AND THE TOURIST.

One of the most interesting trends of the times is the growth of tourist travel in Mexico. The number of tourists in the City of Mexico this season has been so great that it has been necessary to make hotel reservations in advance.

The Mexican capital, one of the most beautiful cities in the world, was not altogether prepared for the deluge of tourists which has swept down upon it. It will be better prepared before the year is over. Two new hotels, one of 522 rooms, are being built upon the Paseo de la Reforma, and additions have been built to some of the hotels already in the city.

The tourists, of course, come from the United States. To them, Mexico is a place they have overlooked. They have not been aware of either its great beauty or its quaint foreign quality. There is a sense in which one may see the Europeans upon the streets of any big city in the United States, but to see the Mexicans, most of whom are still pure-blood Indians, one must go to Mexico. The climate is also an attraction. The City of Mexico is 7400 feet above sea level. So is the air-cooled train a help to tourist travel. There is a very warm region between most of the United States and Mexico, but not on the air-cooled train.

Mexico City is distant from St. Louis two days and three nights by rail and less than 24 hours by air. Within a few months, upon completion of the highway between the City of Mexico and Laredo, it will be possible to make the trip by motor.

A TOPIC TO BE KEPT ALIVE.

Public discussion of the proposal to amend the Missouri Constitution so as to permit the operation of mutual savings banks and savings bank life insurance should go on, notwithstanding the failure of the last session of the State Legislature to submit the question to the voters in the form of a proposed amendment.

Not only does the fine record of banking and life insurance of this sort justify the continuation of popular education on the subject. The course of the joint and concurrent resolution of State Representatives J. Jules Brinkman of St. Louis made it clear that a large percentage of legislators favored submitting the question to the voters. After receiving the overwhelmingly favorable vote of 106 to 7 in the House in March, the measure was approved by the Senate Committee on Constitutional Amendments and reported to the floor. Undercover opposition developed, however, with the result that the committee chairman, Senator Barbour of Springfield, called the resolution back for "further consideration," and eventual death with the adjournment of the Legislature.

The close of the fiscal year, June 30, found 558 mutual savings banks in operation in 18 states, chiefly Atlantic coast states, lying along the seaboard from Maine to Maryland. Although they constituted only about one-third of the banks in the country, they held on that date $9,870,000,000, or approximately one-fourth of all the bank deposits, exclusive of interbank deposits. According to an extended account in the Christian Science Monitor of how the depression and the upturn have affected these banks, they now have more depositors than ever before and almost as much in the way of assets as they had before the financial crash of 1929. Not a single mutual savings bank failed during the months when ordinary commercial banks were closing their doors by the hundreds.

While savings bank life insurance is not necessarily an accompaniment of the mutual savings bank, the two have functioned together so satisfactorily in Massachusetts as to justify investigation of the insurance feature by Missourians. For it is a remarkable story of service and efficiency which is told in the 1935 report of the Deputy Commissioner of Savings Bank Life Insurance of Massachusetts, just published. Launched in 1907 under the sponsorship of Louis D. Brandeis, now a member of the United States Supreme Court, and in the face of a bitter fight by opposing interests, this form of insurance has so grown in the confidence of Massachusetts that $107,309,753 worth of insurance, representing 120,318 policies, was in force on June 30. So well pleased are buyers of savings bank insurance that former residents of Massachusetts continue to keep up their policies, although they have scattered throughout the Union and to practically every country in the world.

Missourians owe it to themselves to find out all they can about mutual savings banking and insurance and to make it plain to their legislators, when next the latter assemble at Jefferson City, that submission of a constitutional amendment such as Mr. Brinkman proposed is in order.

SENATOR GLASS A CANDIDATE.

Senator Carter Glass has announced that he will seek re-election to the Senate from Virginia on the presidential election ballot of 1936. An independent judgment, uninfluenced by party ties or regularly, will hold, we believe, that the outspoken Virginian is entitled to another term. How the administration will look on the candidacy of one of its leading critics remains to be seen. If it follows the course of wisdom, it will see the need for critics within the party as well as outside. Straightforward critics such as Senators Norris, La Follette and Borah within the Republican ranks have performed outstanding services for their party during the years since the war. Criticism within the ranks is just as much a need of the Democratic party, especially when it comes from a veteran lawmaker and former Secretary of the Treasury, whose knowledge and experience in the formulation of legislation relating to banking are probably unsurpassed.

STRIKING AGAINST SECURITY WAGES.

The question of security wages vs. prevailing wages on Government work-relief projects was thoroughly debated in Congress early last spring. Payment of security wages became the approved Government policy. The purpose, as explained by the President, was to get as many unemployed workers as possible off the unenvying dole and to pay them wages higher than direct relief, yet not large enough to compete with private industry. The scale was fixed with a view to encouraging workers to accept regular employment as soon as it should become available.

The decision now is challenged by a walk-out of workers on public projects in New York City, led, curiously enough, by building trades men who receive $93.50 per month, the highest rate paid by WPA anywhere in the country. There are indications that the demonstration will spread to workers elsewhere, though there is a division in the A. F. of L.'s higher councils as to the advisability of such a strike.

The arrangement is fair and the strike ill-advised. It is only proper that labor should be concerned over maintaining the wage standard, but, as a matter of fact, many union men have been accepting lower pay per month, as well as lower pay per hour, than the Government offers. The average for skilled labor in past months, when work was available at all, has been around $60 per month, as compared with the top WPA figure of $93.50. It is apparent, too, that labor's demand for a 40-hour month on work-relief projects, to keep up the hourly wage standard, would hopelessly disorganize working schedules.

Not only do security wages mean more cash than the average worker has been receiving, but to thousands of unemployed they are the alternative to no wages at all. The Government has undertaken a tremendous building program for the relief of these men. Without it, they would be on relief or destitute. It is quixotic, to put it mildly, that these men should be striking against the Government's effort to give them work and wages in its fight on unemployment.

"Of Making Many Books"

JOHN G. NEIHARDT

LIFE WITH FATHER. By Clarence Day. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York City.)

CLARENCE DAY has gathered into book form a collection of the sketches about his father that have been delighting readers of the New Yorker and other magazines for several years. It is a masterpiece, both of portraiture and of writing. In it, Father lives again just as the Day family, torn between awe and admiration, knew him over several decades, beginning with the ample '80s.

Father can best be described, perhaps, as a benevolent household despot. He was a vigorous, unbending, opinionated individual, tolerating no nonsense from his offspring or the world in general, but sheltering a heart of gold behind a bluff and bellowing exterior. Seldom was his determination thwarted, and then only when Mother used her powers of persistence, or a force of nature proved stronger than his will. But that was seldom, and Father usually had his way, though he could never overcome Clarence Jr.'s chronic inability to master the violin, or Mother's lack of account-keeping sense, or the refractory nature of horseflesh.

Mr. Day already has published one slender volume about his emphatic parent, "God and My Father," describing his encounters with religion. The new book is better only because there is more about Father in it. As the elder Day had no use for physicians or telephones. He prayed on occasion. It is true, but he mixed profanity with his prayers. He thought illness an affliction, to be overcome in his own case by sheer resisting force, and in the case of others by his loud "Bah!" Determined to bring up his four sons as civilized men, he provided well for them, and dominated them with sympathetic ferocity.

A crusty old curmudgeon he must have been, but altogether lovable. Mr. Day paints his portrait unforgivably with an easy and effortless style. It will be a rare reader who does not enjoy it fully. F. G.

CORNISH OF SCOTLAND YARD. By G. W. Cornish. (The Macmillan Co., New York City.)

FOR nearly 40 years, the author was superintendent of Scotland Yard. Since his retirement two years ago, he has been recording his memories of many celebrated cases that he handled. The result is the present volume, and those who go in for crime fiction should do themselves the favor of reading the book, not only for its highly entertaining character, but by way of realizing that truth may indeed be "stranger than fiction." There are at least a dozen murder mysteries here, and as many more accounts of ingenious swindles and robberies.

MODERN ETIQUETTE. By Elinor Ames. (Walter J. Black, New York City.)

NOW enter radio manners, which are a little late in arriving. As coded in Elinor Ames' "Modern Etiquette," they call for a return to the common courtesies and considerations of life, sometimes neglected by radio users and abusers, notably the addicts who keep it going at full blast day and night, to the great annoyance of the neighbors. This, we are told on the authority of "Modern Etiquette," is the irreducible minimum of good manners.

Another modern note is that persons who travel by air or contemplate doing so are told how to act when they are off the ground. It is claimed for the book that it has many new features not to be found in other books on manners. There are helpful illustrations, and a foreword by Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson.

EYES ON THE WORLD. Edited by M. Lincoln Schuster. (Simon & Schuster, New York City.)

WHAT we have here is a photographic history of the world from January, 1934, to May of this year. It is certainly more than a collection of news pictures from all over the planet, thanks to the integrating world-view of the editor.

When regarded as a thing in itself, without much knowledge of the human past or of the forces that conceivably are working in the stuff of tragedy toward a saner future, to go through the book is like experiencing a nightmare. Yet no emphasis is placed on the more obviously terrible incidents, and often the genuine human touch is in evidence. It is the grotesque preposterousness of it all that sends a chill down the spine.

But one should remember that fundamental intelligence, goodness and decency still exist in vast numbers of people; that such qualities aren't news and can't be pictured; that when this fit of social insanity shall have ended, and all these tragic comedians shall have ceased to strut their stuff, those qualities will still survive, perhaps—who knows?—with a better chance to flourish than ever before.

LATTER HOWE. By Doreen Wallace. (The Macmillan Co., New York City.)

DOREEN WALLACE is a British novelist whose former books, "Even Such Is Time" and "Barnham Rectory," have won her an appreciative following in America. "Latter Howe" is the story of a young sheep-raiser of the Cumberland Hills who marries Katherine Parret, a college don 10 years his senior and considerably above him in social status. The two begin life together in a little primitive stone-floored farmhouse remote from cultural centers, later moving to a more commodious farm dwelling on the Norfolk coast when the family has outgrown the cottage in the hills.

The original situation in the hands of a writer of a certain type, now distressingly conspicuous, could have been made to yield plenty of marital discord, but Doreen Wallace herself lives close to the earth on a Sussex farm, and it is the enduring truth about the relationship of man and woman that interests her. Most love stories begin with courtship and end with marriage. This one begins with marriage and ends with the death of Katherine. To read it is to be enriched with a fine vicarious experience.

EMPTY ARMS. By Marguerite Brenner. (The Macaulay Co., New York City.)

THE tragedy of a happily married couple who, year after year, are childless, although the wife has the mother instinct strongly developed, is here told with sympathetic delicacy, and so realistically that almost to make the reader wonder if it is not autobiographical, though couched in the form of a romance.

It is not a sex romance of the usual modern kind. There is nothing to thrill the prurient-minded. To the contrary, sorrow pervades it, and the author compels the reader to share the tragedy of the motherless wife through 13 years of sterility, which causes suspicion on the part of each victim and threatens to cause a disruption of their otherwise perfect union. The wife tries to appease her longing by adopting a baby, but this does not satisfy the husband.

The unusual element in this romance is the manner in which the problem is solved. Those who know the story of Zola and his childless wife can guess how this woman's mother instinct is finally satisfied. But the tragedy continues to the end. H. M. W.

AMERICA: ITS HISTORY AND PEOPLE. By Harry Underwood Faulkner and Tyler Kepner. (Harper & Brothers, New York City.)

THIS is the story of life in this country from the earliest settlements to the present day. It is designed primarily as an American history textbook, but the student who uses it will find the emphasis to be far different from that which has been traditional in the past. Attention is no longer centered on things military and governmental; dates of battles and the years of presidential administrations are no longer set forth as the facts of history most worth remembering.

What is brought out instead is a record of the way people have lived down through the years. The style of the houses, the magazines and books which were popular, the social uses and customs, the struggles for economic reform—such are the things which become important in characterizing a period. The first-named author, who is professor of history at Smith College, will be remembered for "The Quest for Social Justice," which deals with the period 1898-1914 in the Schlesinger-Fox History of American Literature. The second is director of social studies in the Brookline (Mass.) public schools. Aside from the text itself, their book is valuable for its many stimulating suggestions on how to approach the study of life as Americans have lived it. I. D.

THE ART OF INVENTING AND WHAT TO INVENT. By Raymond F. Yates. (D. Appleton-Century Co., New York City.)

CORRECTLY described by its title, this work should be of great help to anyone who feels that he has hit upon some ingenious mechanical idea and wishes to work it out. The author seems to get at fundamentals in a practical way, entering into detailed discussions of such matters as a prospective inventor might need to know ranging from mechanical principles to legal considerations.

SUNBONNET DAYS. By Bliss Isely. (Caton Printers, Caldwell, Idaho.)

THE sunbonnet days told about by Bliss Isely, formerly a St. Louis newspaper man, are the days that were lived as a pioneer woman by his mother, Elise Dubach Isely, who was brought from Switzerland by her parents in 1835, and is still living at Wichita, Kan.

The story is simply and sincerely told in the first person, as though spoken by Isely, as she might tell it to her grandchildren and great-grandchildren, the story of the experiences of a sunbonnet woman, with an occasional adventure thrown in, in terrifying but without very grave consequences, such as grandchildren and great-grandchildren like to have told over and over. The book is an authentic record of pioneer years as remembered by a woman who lived them. F. A. B.

Opera's 'Roberta' Taken From Stage and Screen

Park Version of Kern-Harbach Musical Play to Follow Original Script, With Film Numbers Added.

"ROBERTA," the Jerome Kern-Otto Harbach musical play which has come to St. Louis earlier this year as a stage presentation and a motion picture, will be presented for the first time at the Municipal Theater tomorrow night. The revived "Desert Song" completes its run this evening.

Although admitting they expect a record attendance for "Roberta," officials of the opera announce that good seats are still available for all performances of "Roberta" and "Whoopie," final show of the season, as well.

The version of "Roberta" that will be seen here follows the original stage presentation rather than the movie although features of the film are being introduced, among them the two song numbers, "Lovely to Look At" and "I Won't Dance," which Kern himself wrote for Hollywood.

Except in minor details, plots of both the stage play and the picture were the same. The part that went to Fred Astaire was built up several times to suit his peculiar talents, as was that of Ginger Rogers, who became a bogus Polish Countess, rather than a real one.

The show this week will bring back some exceptionally fine vocal numbers which the movie passed over in a hurry. These include "The Touch of Your Hand," which film fans heard only as sketchy incidental music, the sentimental and sweet "Yesterday," which Roberta herself sings in the original and "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," which had a far closer connection to the story on the stage than on the screen.

THE Forest Park show will have the catchy "You're Devastating," which was dropped entirely by the picture and the lively numbers, "Let's Begin" and "Something's Got to Happen." It was the music of "Roberta," incidentally, which, most authorities agree, made it a New York success. Five weeks after the show opened (on Nov. 18, 1933) it still was not popular. But its music had been played on the radio and attendance began, miraculously, to pick up. The show ran for 284 performances on Broadway and as the only musical play on the road last season, was highly prosperous.

In two acts and nine scenes at the opera, the play again will be centered around the style display at a Parisian shop operated by "Roberta." Gowns and other apparel, contributed by the "Fashion Square" stores, were created especially for Municipal Opera.

The cast includes five principals who were with either the New York company or the touring unit. They are Odette Myrtil, Bobby Jarvis, William Hahn, Helen Gray and Phil Farley. Miss Myrtil is Clementine Scharwenka. Jarvis appears as Huckleberry Haines, the orchestra leader; Hahn is the Ladislav, Miss Gray the American girl, Sophie Teale, and Farley the dancer, Gin Blossom.

Hal LeRoy, youthful dancer of the stage and screen, will make his first park appearance as Billy Boyden. He has been in such musical shows as the Ziegfeld "Follies," "Thumbs Up," and "Strike Me Pink," and has been seen on the screen in "Wonder Bar" and "Harold Teen."

Marguerite Sylva, who was in "The Chocolate Soldier," is Roberta; Nancy McCord is the Russian princess, Stephanie, and Jerry Goff the college football star, John Kent. Roy Gordon will play Lord Henry Delves. Electa Leonard, stage actress, cast as Mrs. Teale, and Freda Sullivan, young acrobatic dancer, will make their first appearances. Marion Huntley, Una Val, Sheila Dilla, Al Downing, Chiquita Matthews, Earle MacVeigh, Victor Casmore and Rosemary Deering will also appear.

The story, as will be recalled by those who saw the play or picture

Styles hold the stage in Forest Park this week as "Roberta" makes its appearance. The role of Aunt Minnie (trade name "Roberta") is taken by Marguerite Sylva (extreme right). With her are her protegee, Stephanie (Nancy McCord) and Stephanie's fellow exile, Ladislav (William Hahn).

as well as any who read the Alice Duer Miller novel, "Gowns by Roberta," is that of a former American woman who has built up a modiste's business in Paris. She hopes to encourage a romance between her nephew, John Kent, and her shop manager, Stephanie, but the course of the affair encounters many hazards, and Roberta has passed to her reward before one of the shop's creations brings the lovers together.

Following "Roberta," Municipal Opera will close its season with its first presentation of the one-time Ziegfeld success, "Whoopie." George Price, comedian of stage, screen and radio, will take the principal role. Katherine Carrington, Gil Lamb, Freda Sullivan, Roy Gordon, Audrey Christie, Sheila Dilla, Earle MacVeigh, Jerry Goff, Charles E. Gallagher, Al Downing, Victor Casmore and Rosemary Deering are in the cast.

Fonda Picked for Lily Pons Film. Henry Fonda, soon to be seen at the Fox Theater in "The Farmer Takes a Wife," has been selected as Lily Pons' leading man in her first motion picture, "Love Song." Work on settings of Paris, where Miss Pons was reared and educated, is well under way.

Bleriot Flight Re-enacted. An exact re-enactment of Bleriot's famous first flight across the English channel in 1909 has been made for the English picture, "Conquest of the Air." The plane used is a replica in which Bleriot still makes flights.

Song for Charlie Chan. Warner Oland will burst into song in "Charlie Chan in Shanghai," his next picture. The number is a ditty entitled "The Prince and Ming Lo Fu." Oland, in early stages of his career, spent several years training for the concert stage and opera.

THE nasty-mannered but clean-cutting Mr. James Cagney is back in town this week, as co-star of "The Irish in Us." The picture, by the way, reopens the Shubert Theater, which, under a mercurial spell, has been closed for the last five weeks. In suggesting that the film tops the others offered around town, I do not endorse Mr. Cagney's continued practice of calling every serious adult a "sourpuss" or every comely young woman "Toots." Neither would I sign anything which said "The Irish in Us" was great entertainment. It is merely that I find in Cagney's performance that inflection he always gives, to make his screen personality interesting. "The Irish in Us" sets him down as the youngest of three O'Hara boys. Brother Pat O'Brien is a policeman, brother Frank O'Hugh a fireman, Jimmy Cagney O'Hara does exactly nothing for a living, although having an avocation in the management of broken-down prizefighters. The simple patter that has been composed in the manner of a plot, has Cagney meet O'Brien's girl friend, Olivia de Havilland, and proceed to win her away. That causes fireworks in the O'Hara family and Jimmy has to go into the ring himself and win the middleweight championship of the world before everything is calm again. Such a menu is only corned beef and cabbage, anyway you fork it, but it qualifies, nevertheless. The point about Cagney is that he digs into the psychology of his role. As the prodigal about to leave home, he drops the chip from his shoulder and wins sympathy immediately, demonstrating again that he is a highly intelligent actor who employs his offensive disposition only as stock in trade. Equal honors go to Frank McHugh, who is responsible for nine-tenths of the plentiful comedy in the show. Pat O'Brien, whose performance in "Oil For the Lamps of China" ranks as one of the staidest and finest of 1935, is superb in his part. The Shubert builds up its program considerably with a short subject on deep-sea fishing. A scrap between a whale and a sword-fish is the battle royal.

The Black Room. THE new Boris Karloff picture at the Missouri departs so widely from the practice of merely making ugly faces at the audience that it is a highly artistic film. Without a plaster face or bolts in his neck, and in the most cultivated English, Karloff essays the portrayal of twin sons of a Hungarian barony. A prophecy has been made that the house will end as it began, with the murder of the elder of twin sons by the younger. Karloff the Wicked decides to upset the prophecy, lures his younger brother home from abroad and when Karloff the Good is safe within the castle walls, murders him and assumes his identity. The peasant-folk, from whom Karloff the Wicked has been stealing a young woman to practice homicide on now and then, have wanted to get rid of him for a long time, so everybody is happy, except the bereaved great Dane that Karloff the Good left behind him. The dog eventually upsets the murderer's plans to wed Marian Marsh and reveals his true identity. Circumstances combine to send the evil one to his death on his brother's dagger. The screen play, of which Arthur Strawn, former St. Louis newspaper man, was a co-author, may be credited for the originality of the film. Karloff, moreover, draws a fine distinction between his characterizations. The Missouri's second picture is "Cheers of the Crowd," about a press agent, Russell Hopton, who promotes an elaborate publicity scheme for a New York theater only to become too successful for his own comfort. Bradley Page is the villain of the piece but he is not allowed to run away with Little Nell, the check-room girl, and he has to give back the money.

The Girl Friend. HAVING had a look backstage all up and down Broadway, we now are treated, in the Fox headliner, to the working space of a barn theater, that manifestation of Broadway's summer wanderlust. Roger Pryor and two pals find a way to live all the season on country cooking, by the simple means of impersonating Broadway producer and his staff and promising to produce Jack Haley's Napoleonic satire. Domestic animals are dispossessed and the show goes on in a barn, successfully. Somehow we have come to expect success in such cases. Jack Haley, who still resembles as a master of ceremonies in St. Louis, has some amusing comedy in the role of the Little Corporal. Most of the entertainment is what any kittenish scenario writers would think up a few minutes before going home. Ann Sothern sings a song or two. That's about all there is to it. In "The Girl Who Came Back," Shirley Grey gives up the friendship of counterfeiter to work in Sidney Blackmer's bank. And the counterfeiter is such a nice man. They wear dress suits all day and say subtle things.

Pursuit. FOR the thrill-hunters this week, there is "Pursuit" at Loew's. Its best moment is one in which a heavily-loaded truck goes around a curve on two wheels, but there are also an airplane ground-loop into a haystack, the explosion of the truck's gasoline tank, a near-drowning in the ocean waves and an escape from gun-men and an oncoming railroad train. Morris' contract is to get Dorothy Peterson's little boy out of the United States into Mexico so her cruel in-laws can't take him from her legally. Sally Eilers goes along with Chester and the exciting things, already listed, just happen. Loew's also offers a revival of "The Thin Man," still the best detective yarn on the screen and one of the cleverest films for comedy.

Broadway Gondolier. DICK POWELL, I will wager, will never become an operatic star, in spite of his ambitions, which "Broadway Gondolier" cautiously reveals, yet I am quite as certain that his youthful charm will not fade. In "Broadway Gondolier" (second week at the Orpheum), his winning manner carries him through a musical satire which would probably not amount to a great deal on its own account.

Aldridge Players' Repertory. The Aldridge Players, Negro Little Theater Group, has announced five productions for its 1935-36 season. The plays, to be presented at the St. Louis University Auditorium under the direction of Joseph Richardson Jones, are: "Roseanne," by Nan Bagby Stephens, Oct. 18; "Laugh, Sing and Pray," by Otis Lucas, Dec. 6; "Dred Scott," by N. B. Young, Feb. 21; prize-winning play of the Urban League contest, April 3, and "Stevodore" by Paul Peters and George Sklar, May 15.

Musical for Jane Withers. Jane Withers, who rose to stardom in "Ginger," will be the headliner in an elaborate new musical entitled "The Immigrant." The story is that of a little Irish girl arriving in the United States in search of her mother, a cook in a wealthy home.

Wells to Write Only for Screen. H. G. Wells, according to reports from London, has decided to write exclusively for the screen during the next three years. He is now occupied on two screen plays, "The Man who Could Work Miracles" and "100 Years From Now," both for an English producer.

Hollywood Weather Men Always Keep Their Word

Movie-Makers Refuse to Trust California Climate and Pacific Ocean—Blow Up Their Own Storms.

BY H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 10.

LAST winter when the studios were threatening to move out of California—they never meant it, really—it developed that the sunshine and the warm weather meant very little to the picture makers of today, since fully 95 per cent of all films are photographed indoors on the great sound stages, where streets and coal mines and deserts and even oceans are built to order. Also it must be remembered that movie dramas call for a great many things besides sunshine and palm trees. Right now out on the Fox lot they are finishing up the screen revival of that old tear-jerker, "Way Down East" and one of the big scenes, you may recall, requires a frozen river with cakes of ice, swirling snow and all that sort of thing.

The Fox people had a river on hand. It was left over from the canal shots of "The Farmer Takes a Wife" and really was built as the old Erie Canal but a little changing here and there made it a good old-fashioned New England river. The water was real and the producers planned to make a lot of genuine ice float around in it but the day the ice machines were hooked up to the banks the thermometer leaped up to 90—it does get that hot out here, Chamber of Commerce reports to the contrary notwithstanding—and the stuff just wouldn't jell. The snow, thousands of pounds of corn flakes, was OK but the carpenter shop and the scene painters had to move in and make some wooden ice.

wave machines will make it very real and, what is more important, the director can order a wave when he wants it, and gets it, too.

ON this indoor ocean has been built the most complete ship ever constructed for the films. More than 150 feet long it is "practical" in every detail except that, instead of floating, it rests on the stage floor. Battle and murder and sudden death will be enacted on its decks and five or six other vessels, a bit smaller in size, will attack it from all sides moving into action on railroad tracks laid under water.

Pictures calling for rain scenes cannot be made in actual rain. The cameras, the scenery, the sound machines and all the other accessories, to say nothing of the high-priced stars, would get too wet. The rain you see in a film comes out of pipes and falls like a curtain in front of the camera. Disturbances on the "ocean" are manipulated with huge dump trucks high in the air and filled with water. When a "wave" is wanted, it is dumped down a chute.

Snow for "Way Down East" was a very simple matter. Any studio prop department can supply a snow storm on a few minutes' notice from the warehouses where many bags of bleached corn flakes are always kept on hand. These flakes form the backbone of every snow scene but they are helped out considerably by a lot of marble dust, small white feathers and great bins of silver "flutter" ground mica. In "Way Down East" you will see the snow melting on the actors' faces. Then it will be almost the real thing for a cutting machine will flake cakes of ice on one side of the stage and a huge fan will blow it wherever it is needed.

Fog scenes are pretty tricky because they are liable to get out of hand and make things so cloudy the cameras can't penetrate them. Mostly they are made by burning a pleasant smelling powder some distance away from the set and then having a battery of glass fans blow it across the stage in curtains.

Thunder and lightning are no trouble at all. The only thing never used, at least not so far, in a picture is a hail storm. But if a director ever calls for one he'll get it.

Highlands Extends Johnson Engagement

Jerry Johnson's dance orchestra, originally booked for one week, begins its third week at the Forest Park Highlands ballroom tonight, featuring new songs and dance tunes, with Mickey Barrie singing current hits. Lester Krum and Bernard Press will be heard in harp and trombone solos, respectively. Harry Lange's Commanders have arranged another three-part program of classical and popular numbers, and waiters and marchers, each of 45 minutes, as this week's offering of free entertainment.

Canada Completes the Greatest Animal Drive in the History of the Continent to Herd 3000 Reindeer 3600 Miles Through the Arctic Wastes.*

Eskimo family and their home.

Sunday Magazine

HERIOT BAY, B. C.

HE great reindeer drive is ended—the longest trek of domestic animals recorded in the annals of the New World—3600 miles across the frozen North to preserve a people from starvation.

The diminutive, 70-year-old master herder, Andy Bahr, once of Lapland, now of Seattle—Tungarooruk, or "Bow-Legs," to the Eskimos—returns to civilization to find his life savings wiped out by a depression which he hardly knew existed. It had barely begun, back in 1929, when he plunged into the wilderness with eight Eskimo helpers and 3000 reindeer for which the Canadian Government would pay $195,000 on delivery, 1200 miles to the east along the rim of the Arctic Circle.

Here, in the far reaches of the Canadian Northwest, native tribes faced a shortage of food and clothing. The caribou on which they depended for both seemed to be nearing extinction, and taking a card from the experience of the United States in Alaska, the Dominion planned to replace the wild caribou with the domesticated reindeer. It prepared a 6600-square-mile reservation, near the mouth of the Mackenzie River, and arranged the purchase from the great Lomen herds in the Kotzebue Sound region on the western coast of Alaska. Delivery could be made, it was estimated, in three years.

But there were three mountain ranges and one of the world's largest rivers to be crossed. The 1200 airline miles stretched out to 3600 by the actual zig-zag line of march, the three years to more than five—1908 weary days, few without their hardships and none without its hardships.

Across uninhabited mossy barrens, desolate, winter-ridden nine months of the year, marched Andy and his men. They wandered through untraveled and dangerous mountain passes, skirting treacherous muskegs and belts of dusky evergreens where wolf packs waited; they watched warily, these sturdy men, against the horror of summer fire, more dreadful upon the mossy barrens than ever in forest or on prairie. Men and the beasts they drove and guarded were hampered by blizzard and glare of ice, harried by wolves and grizzlies of the barrens. Still more terrible in the short Arctic summer's scorching days, the eggs of the northern, bot-fly, laid upon the backs of some of the driven reindeer, developed into maggots which eat holes through the hides of living deer, and beasts in frenzied madness stampeded for miles.

The men faced winter weeks of 60-below-zero weather; summer days when "bull-dog" flies, as big as bees and with bite more terrible, assailed them, and "No-see-'em" black flies—mere animated specks—gave raper thrusts unbelievably painful.

In the first winter of the drive wolves stampeded the herd so that it could not be reassembled for months. In a summer camp on the tundra, the herd split again and groups drifted miles apart. In March of 1931 food ran out. Pilot Joseph Crosson of Alaskan Airways took emergency supplies. And always the drive went on.

It was too much for even so hardy an adventurer as Dave Irwin, former St. Louisan, whose battle for existence, set forth two months ago in the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, has been declared "one of the finest that has come out of the North in recent years."

Irwin, it may be recalled, signed on with Bahr in 1933, after the great trek had been under way three years. But the swaying motion of the beasts, unchanging, hour after hour, was too much for him, and he struck off alone for the Hudson Bay and great adventures.

They were no greater than those still in store for Bahr and his handful of Eskimo helpers. The outside world was relegated to the vague hinterland of their thoughts, a remote echo of memories that grew fainter day by day. No wonder Andy Bahr hardly knew there was a depression! The only contact with civilization was through Daniel Crowley, vice-president of the Lomen Reindeer Corporation, who used airplane and boat to meet the expedition at various points along its hazardous trail.

Likewise, the outside world had little news of the progress of the march. In 1932 the great herd was lost for months. An aviator sighted it in December at Icy Reef, near the western boundary of Alaska. Only 2300 reindeer then remained of the 3000 which had started.

Andy Bahr.

Many and various were the setbacks. And the greatest of these was the mighty Mackenzie River, the mouth of which, 70 miles across, lay between the herd and their new 6600 square miles of pasture on Canadian soil.

In the spring of 1933, with the passes of three high mountain ranges negotiated, grizzly bears and wolf packs fended off with only small losses to the herd, Andy and his men brought the reindeer to rest for the first time on Canadian soil, and allowed the fawns to gain strength for a winter's dash across 70 miles of frozen river.

Early on January 3, 1934, the herders drove the slightly depleted band out upon the broad and island-dotted bosom of the mighty Mackenzie. A dead hush lay over land and frozen river, brooding, ominous. The snow lay on the ice exactly right, not too deep, not too shallow, a condition upon which all depended for getting across that river, wider than many a lake.

There was a restlessness in the animals, more weather-wise by far than even those deeply experienced men. But the herders, nevertheless, urged the reindeer on. Suddenly, from the icy regions around the Pole, a blizzard struck. Still, gray day gave place to walls of snow, rotating and resistless under shrilling, furious winds blowing from all directions at once. Before the first blast the reindeer broke in stampede. Guided by some instinct of the wild, all headed for the safety of the land near Shingle Point, whence they had set out to attempt the crossing.

The blizzard lasted three days. It scattered the young and old and took a heavy toll of fawns.

During the remainder of 1934, at last respecting the Mackenzie in its true proportions as an obstacle, the herders, in conjunction with officials of the Department of the Interior, established a series of rest camps on the islets of the delta over that route chosen as shortest and best.

In September the herd was moved very slowly eastward, bringing the animals by the first week in December to a point on the west bank of the Mackenzie where Moose River empties into it.

All depended, now, on snow to cover the ice, over which the animals could not otherwise travel. They waited, surrounded by the Arctic winter, wrapped in the gloom of its long night.

The time of full moon was the time for traveling. But, just when December's moon should have shone brightest, an unprecedented rise in temperature melted the snow and mocked the eager men.

For another dreary month they waited. Snow fell, perfectly suiting their requirements. Then, on the night of January 17, 1935, just in tune with the filling moon, a terrific down-river wind swept the vast expanse clear of snow. Under the glorious moonlight, a broad waste of ice glistened cold defiance to baffled hopes.

Arrived the night of February 18, full moon, snow-covered river, stillness.

OUT upon the treacherous Mackenzie, risking all on grim chance of holding weather, the herders urged their beasts from station to station. On the morning of February 21, the last straggling yearlings scrambled up the bank to join their antlered elders.

The great hazard had been crossed. They were within a few miles of the Canadian Government's waiting reservation. The success of the great drive was assured.

It had seemed hopeless. But it had not been undertaken without arduous preliminary examination. In May, 1926, A. E. Forskild and his brother, Robert T. Forskild, began a 30-month survey in which they traveled 15,000 miles, mostly by dog-sled and canoe.

One of the features of their survey was the use of a dog-drawn sail-sleigh equipped with an odometer, a wheel trailing behind the sled to measure the mileage, a very great assistance in laying out a huge reindeer range such as this one.

"It was interesting to notice how the severe climate of the north coast had decreased the size of the animals since transplantation of the stock from the Seward Peninsula," Forskild reported after months in Alaska. "At Point Barrow the average weight of the dressed deer is only about 100 pounds; in a herd about 200 miles east of Point Barrow it is about 75 pounds only, whereas the reindeer of southern Alaska dress about 150 pounds."

Due to this 1926-1928 investigation of the Forskilds, a range of 6600 miles was selected east of the Mackenzie River, the Kitigazuit area, embracing well-watered coastal plains north and east of the delta. Here the entire absence of predatory animals was a strongly deciding factor. The summer range is believed to be free of the bot-fly, the most devastating enemy of the caribou and reindeer, and the ordinary menacing flies are least plentiful. The summer and winter stations are equipped with living quarters for a dozen men, with corral space sufficient to house the present herd. The winter station is the largest and lies inland along the east branch of the Mackenzie, 50 miles from Aklavik. A. E. Forskild is in charge for the Lands, Northwest Territories and Yukon branch of the Department of Interior.

Thus the Canadian Government enters upon its second great experiment in animal conservation. In 1914 the Government succeeded in establishing a herd of buffalo, 748 in number, which by 1935, in spite of the slaughtering for food and skins of 10,630,

In buffalo, as in reindeer, a somewhat similar conservation experience was noted by the United States. The States, according to their Biological Survey, in 1900 had only 835 remaining of the countless herds that once roamed the plains. It was feared that they might become extinct.

Government herds were established in Alaska and in the national parks. By last year they had increased to 20,000 or more, and had become such a problem to park administrators that a number were slaughtered at Christmas to reduce the numbers of the herds. Buffalo meat provided holiday meals for the unemployed in many cities.

This was but an episode of the United States' herds, however, whereas Canada has drawn steadily on its buffalo—American bison, to use the correct name—to feed its unemployed. The 10,000 slaughtered in Canada provided 670,000 pounds of meat for the purpose.

Northwest in the past fed countless thousands of caribou that were too quickly slaughtered when the white men brought high-powered arms to the natives. And there is the experience of the United States, which, due to the foresight of Charles H. Townsend, and the work of Dr. Sheldon Jackson, General Agent of Education in Alaska, imported in Alaska between 1892 and 1902, a total of 1208 reindeer from Siberia and Lapland. In the period since then, the original herd has increased to over a million, changing the Alaska Eskimos from precariously living wanderers into a fairly prosperous pastoral people.

In 1914, the Lomens, Carl, Ralph and Alfred, after a careful study, saw in reindeer a valuable meat for the markets of the world. Through their efforts reindeer meat is now eaten in the United States, and some cold storage shipments are made to Great Britain. It was from the Lomens that Canada made its purchase.

AN odd consequence of success was a controversy between the Lomens and the Indian and Eskimo neighbors of their range, which required the attention of the United States Department of the Interior in 1931. The reindeer, it was said then, had increased to "millions," and their numbers had led to a dispute over range lines reminiscent of the "cattle wars" of the old West.

A similar increase of the Canadian herd is considered more than likely. The new Canadian range was a favorite grazing ground of the now depleted woodland caribou, which are simply the American species—the largest—of reindeer, the European species of which was domesticated by the Laplanders. Until the advent of the white man's weapons, indeed, caribou offered the natives what seemed an unlimited resource of food and clothing.

In the Canadian north, in recent years, living conditions for the Eskimo have been dangerously changed, so much so as to confront the Canadian Government with threatening possibilities for the welfare of its wards.

The Eskimo has become a trapper, exchanging furs for high-powered firearms, white man's clothes, food and utensils. Game has grown alarmingly scarce. Because of this the Canadian Government, in 1926, decided that the successful propagating of reindeer in the North might prove a real and lasting benefit. Each Eskimo family will be supplied with a start of several deer, and it is hoped that they will emulate their Alaskan kinsmen in becoming at least partially a pastoral people.

Otilie Umbach.

Left a Life of Luxury to Marry the Man She Loved— AND DIED

By JACK ALEXANDER

ALPINE, New Jersey. HE love of Fraulein Otilie Stauffmann for her girlhood sweetheart, George Umbach, almost literally conquered all. When her rich father, Karl Stauffmann, a Hamburg (Germany) furniture manufacturer, put a parental foot down upon the romance, it overrode his iron will. It conquered her craving for the pleasures and advantages of her luxurious home when a break with her parent was the only way out and it prompted her to give it all up and sail for the United States to join her impoverished lover. When her baby was born, only to die of malnutrition, her stanch fidelity to her husband conquered an impulse to accept her father's offer of passage home and forgiveness. She stuck with Umbach, clinging to him through months of miserable gypsy poverty. But a mere stroke of ill-luck wrote a tragic ending here recently when she was washed to her death in a drainage ditch down the steep side of the Palisades during a cloudburst. Her remarkable devotion couldn't quite conquer fate.

When Otilie, who died at 27, was 22 years old, a young student began annoying her one day on her way home from classes in the University of Hamburg. She was on the verge of tears when a husky young man came to her aid and fended her tormentor with a blow. His name, she discovered, was George Umbach, and he had once studied law, but was now working as a carpenter to keep himself alive. He asked to be permitted to call on her.

Parental opposition arose as soon as she related the details of the street occurrence. The father reminded her of the family's position in Hamburg and asked her to remember that her sister was the wife of Professor Erwin Johannes Bach, dean of the Conservatory of Music at the University of Swerdlowsk, U. S. S. R., and a descendant of the famous composer. The girl refused to give up Umbach and met him clandestinely.

In 1931 Umbach came to America in an effort to establish himself in a trade or business. But wealth was not as easy to acquire in America as he had imagined and last summer he returned to Hamburg. Avowals of love were renewed and Umbach rashly urged his sweetheart to take a chance and return to America with him. Last July Umbach sailed alone on the Deutschland and Herr Stauffmann breathed easier. But a week later Fraulein Otilie was missing and her

One night, quite by accident, she met him on a Yorkville street and fell into his arms. They were married immediately at the Swedish Lutheran Church, at 45-33 Twenty-first street, Long Island City, Queens. But Umbach was not financially able to shoulder his new responsibility. father learned that she had drawn out her entire savings from her bank. She left no message, but the family knew where she had gone. What they did not know was that she was about to have a child. Herr Stauffmann wrote the New York police to keep an eye out for the couple.

Blithely the girl landed in New York and set out on what she thought was the simple task of finding her husband-to-be. But she scarcely spoke English and the streets and crowds were puzzling and she finally wound up as a case for the Travelers' Aid Society. The society found her lodgings with a German family at 320 East Eighty-third street, Manhattan, in the German section known as Yorkville.

When her funds vanished she became a housemaid, continuing her search for Umbach by patrolling the streets on her time off. One night, quite by accident, she met him on a Yorkville street and fell into his arms. They were married immediately at the Swedish Lutheran Church, at 45-33 Twenty-first street, Long Island City, Queens. But Umbach was not financially able to shoulder his new responsibility. He did odd jobs and looked for a steady position, but there was precious little money to be had. The pair moved from place to place as the rent became due.

THEY finally found a semi-permanent place in a wretched basement apartment in the Bronx, getting it rent free for Umbach's services as janitor. His new duties prevented Umbach from getting the odd jobs he had formerly depended on and the pair ate irregularly.

Less than three months after their joyous reunion in Yorkville, a son was born. He lived only three weeks, dying from lack of food, plus double pneumonia.

Meanwhile, Detective William A. Parks of the Missing Persons Bureau had been fruitlessly following the pair's trail of evictions and rent-flees from tenement to tenement. His first clue was the marriage license. The clue that finally led him to the miserable basement lodgings was a death certificate for the baby. When Parks got there, the parents of the child were so dazed by grief and weakened from malnutrition that they were unable to do much more than stare. After he had fed them out of his own pocket, Parks conveyed to the bride her father's request that she come back to his roof.

With what strength the skinny girl could muster, she arose and told the detective: "If he had let me marry George when I wanted to, my baby would be alive. I refuse to touch his money. I'll stay here with George, if I have to starve." Then she collapsed.

Newspaper accounts of the couple's plight brought the following note from Marlene Dietrich, German motion picture actress: "I read about your great distress in the papers. It would give me great pleasure to help two deserving fellow-countrymen. If there is anything I can do, get in touch with me at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria. The messenger will wait for an answer."

The screen star's check saved the baby from burial in the potter's field and gave the lovers a small stake with which to start life anew. But dank basements and lightless rooms weakened the heiress' constitution and a doctor warned her she must live in the open or she would soon die.

Umbach and his bride migrated across the Hudson to the cheapest place they could find and paid $3, a week's rent, for pup tent space. Umbach was unable to pay the second week's rent and at the start of the third week he and his pale wife packed up their belongings and began to live like hunted animals. They slept under their tattered tent by night and hid their effects by day for fear the authorities would molest them. Each day found them in a new section of the Palisades Interstate Park preserve, for the police began to recognize them.

From a Manhattan relief agency they got a $9 check each week, but the bride's craving for a spark of the glamorous life she had once enjoyed prevented them from keeping a roof over their heads. She loved the movies and Umbach, feeling deeply his responsibility for her plight, took her often to the theater. Except for this, they might not have had to take refuge under a wooden culvert when the fatal thunderstorm broke.

It seemed a safe enough place, this culvert. Only the day before the couple had stood under it and kept dry during a light rain. So, when the clouds lowered, they stepped down into the rock-lined ditch which drains the Jersey side of the George Washington Bridge over the Hudson, and waited for the rain to fall. It fell, in torrents, and the man and woman hugged their snug retreat.

Suddenly a veritable tidal wave of drainage water roared down the slope. Umbach grabbed a spike protruding from the side wall and shouted to his bride to do likewise. But the on-rushing waters caught her off balance, carried her past her husband and swept her down a 300-foot slope, crushing her body against an iron fence at the bottom.

HIS own right foot crushed against a rock, Umbach staggered down the slope and was striving to free his bride's broken body from the meshing when the police arrived. An ambulance took the pair to Englewood Hospital, where Mrs. Umbach was pronounced dead. An autopsy showed her skull had been fractured and her lungs had filled with water.

For a time surgeons thought they might have to amputate Umbach's leg, but the danger passed in a few days. Park police questioned him about rumors that the pair had contemplated a suicide pact, but Umbach's answer disarmed them: "We were too much in love for that."

Once more a person unknown to the pair came forward with an offer of help. Mrs. N. H. Bachman of 791 Park avenue, Irish wife of a German-American woollens manufacturer, saved Otilie Stauffmann Umbach from the potter's field which had almost received her baby. Mrs. Bachman arranged for a funeral in Brooklyn and burial in Cypress Hills Cemetery. To the widowed husband she gave enough money to get him started again.

"I read about their case," Mrs. Bachman explained. "I went over to Englewood and saw Umbach. The poor fellow didn't even have a pair of socks. Everything they had was swept away by the water."

Everything had been lost except the dead bride's small personal kit, which she had stowed in a chink in the rock-lined wall of the drainage ditch.

The kit contained only a few tragic mementoes of her self-chosen poverty—a broken comb, a rusty nail file, a small mirror. There was also a crumpled letter. It was the note Miss Dietrich had sent months before.

"The onrushing waters swept her down the slope."

NEW YORK.
"A NYTHING is liable to happen to that woman. She may be a great star of the theater. She may blow up in the next 24 hours. She does what she pleases, says what she thinks; she's 100 per cent dynamite. Trouble follows her night and day. She's a bad business risk. But she's a wonderful actress!"

The veteran producer who thus summed up the lovely Mary Nolan could scarcely have known how accurate a prophecy his careless words would prove. He was in a position to know how true was his estimate. He had seen her rise above the wreck of her early stage career, above the bitter notoriety of an international scandal. And he had just seen her new career end in a sudden explosion of temper. But he couldn't have been certain that in five years she would be pitifully trying to stage another comeback on the floor of an obscure night club in an outlying section of New York—Jackson Heights, Queens.

That was what she was doing a few weeks ago when it was announced that she was suing a Hollywood director for $500,000 damages, alleging that in 1931, several months after they had ended an affair that had lasted three years, he had "violently and criminally attacked her," after having used his influence to keep her from getting a job.

Mary Nolan's life has been a continual skipping from success to disaster. She has been considered an outstanding beauty ever since she started out as an artists' model at the age of 16. Although her features have hardened perceptibly in the last few years, she still has fine-spun blond hair and brilliant turquoise eyes. But the sharp, clean line of chin and throat has filled out since she left Hollywood and the Motion Picture Almanac has preserved her youthful dimensions ("height, 5, 5, weight 112") only as a courtesy, to all appearances.

SHE was born 30 years ago in Louisville, Kentucky, the daughter of Jack and Mary Robertson. She was educated in St. Joseph's Convent and began her public career as an artists' model under the name of Imogene Wilson. Mary Imogene Robertson was, as a matter of fact, her real name, but she left it behind when she went East to enter the musical comedy business. Still in her 'teens, she was taken up by Florenz Ziegfeld, who "glorified" her in two seasons of the "Follies." Her "glorification" was the beginning of her first downfall. It was worse than that for the man she brought down in her tumble.

He was Frank Tinney, at that time a burnt-cork comedian, who enjoyed tremendous popularity on Broadway. At the time Imogene Wilson was in the "Follies," Tinney was taking in $4000 a week as the star comedian in the 1924 "Music Box Revue." He had a wife and a young son, a big house on Long Island; he was at the peak of his career. Imogene's beauty seems to have been a special instrument the fates picked out to lash him with. They were on friendly terms from the time she entered the "Follies." On Easter Sunday, in 1924, their affairs took a more turbulent turn. That day Imogene attempted to commit suicide, owing to their difficult relations. The attempt, such as it was, was unsuccessful and she put it off till the next day. Then she threw a great party in her flat, disappeared into the bathroom at the height of the festivities and came back a few minutes later, white and nervous, saying she had "done it." No one took her very seriously at the time. They held a mock funeral for her still-breathing "remains." Then her guests all left and Carrie, the actress' Negro maid, called in a policeman and told him her mistress had taken poison. After he had administered an antidote, the cop began to look around. He found a touching farewell note, a portrait of Frank Tinney and an open bottle containing nothing more lethal than liver pills. Two of these turned out to have been Imogene's hemlock draft. They were not the end.

Two or three days later she descended like an irate Juno on a New York police court and made a terrific scene as she filed charges against Frank Tinney, saying he had given her a trouncing in her own apartment. The story was all over town in two hours and the ensuing trials—criminal and civil—became the vortex of Broadway gossip.

At the preliminary hearing both Imogene and Carrie, her maid, had to be carried into the courtroom. Both were becomingly swathed in bandages and both appropriately wrathful. Imogene's story was something like this:

Tinney had walked into the apartment one evening as a reporter was sitting there—taking down her biography. Somehow, she had no idea why.

Tinney had gotten the impression that the reporter was a disguised rival for her affections. As soon as he had left, she said, the comedian began to be violently abusive. He, according to the lady, kicked her on the shin, called her honey, knocked her down and sat on her, the more conveniently to give her a thrashing. The inference was that he was a bit under the influence, for all this time he was said to have been wearing Imogene's blue silk kimono and the maid's jet earrings.

Frank Tinney had a completely different version of the story. He said he had been peacefully sitting in the apartment when Imogene came at him with a desperate-looking icepick—which he had introduced as evidence—and that Carrie had knocked him down from behind. Anyhow, he was held for the grand jury. But he wasn't indicted and the temperamental beauty dropped her $100,000 damage suit.

Tinney and his "Follies" girl patched up the quarrel. Within a short time she had followed him to England, having lost her job, it was said, on account of the notoriety.

Meanwhile Mrs. Tinney wasn't amused. She had had her erring husband followed on board the boat by process servers, who failed to locate him. "I've had all I can stand," she added aside. "I've tried to play on the level and be a good fellow. But you can only use a post-age stamp once, and I guess that about describes me." Soon afterwards she filed suit for separation; later for divorce. Her lawyers' agent found Tinney living at the Royal Turk's Head Hotel, Newcastle, with a woman. The employees of the hotel said he called her Bubbles—the nickname that had been applied to Imogene throughout the assault case in New York. Soon afterwards they parted for keeps. "Bubbles" went to Germany to enter the movies. Tinney, whose wife had had all his property attached, was found by a reporter, living alone in a squalid hotel in London slums. His room wasn't even equipped with running water. He dined on tinned beans and cheese and crackers.

Tinney's subsequent history was a story of unadulterated hardship and misery. A friend let him have enough money to get back to New York and producer Earl Carroll gave him a job.

Then he began drinking heavily. When he got to Detroit on a road tour with the "Vanties," he collapsed completely. At a hospital it was discovered he was suffering from pleurisy, nervous exhaustion, two fractured ribs, acute alcoholism. His mind became a complete blank. He had to learn to speak and to walk again. He has never been able, successfully to return to the stage.

Meanwhile, Imogene had again changed her name. In 1926 she came back to America, already established by her success in European movies. Disguised under the name of Mary Nolan, she took up her residence in Hollywood, more vivacious and more lovely than ever. Berlin and London seemed to have matured her, given her airs and graces she had never known in her callow youth as a "Follies" girl. "Viennese Lover," "Thirst" and "The Woman God Forgot" were among her early pictures. Presently she was doing more important roles and appearing prominently in successful films, at first in the late silent movies, then in the talkies.

In 1927 she had a part in "Sorrell and Son." During the following three years she appeared in at least 13 pictures, including "West of Zanzibar," "Unlucky Money," "Charming Sinners," "Undertow" and "Shanghai Lady." But by 1930 she was on the down path again.

That year, in March, she had her row with executives of Universal Pictures Corporation. The finished scenes of the last movie she had been working on were scrapped. Another actress was called in to take her place. No explanation was offered the public, save three words from Carl Laemmle Jr.: "Too much temperament!" Miss Nolan, who had previously told her publicity agent that she knew all the women in the world hated her, began to think that perhaps a good many of the men did, too. She threatened to sue the company for violating her contract, gathered her storm clouds about her and departed for New York in a towering huff.

That wasn't quite the end of Mary Nolan's film career, however. She later appeared in "Docks of San Francisco" and two or three other things. But for practical purposes, she, apparently, was through. Her reputation for unreliability and "temperament" seemed to have been her undoing. It alienated the big companies and kept her from getting long-term contracts. It didn't keep her out of the news, though.

She was having supper with Walter Winchell, for instance, the night she accepted W. T. MacRery's proposal of marriage. She met the young New York broker in Los Angeles several months before. The night before their wedding they were sitting with Winchell and Harry Richman in a New York night club. MacRery proposed that they be married instantly. At 3 o'clock in the morning they called up Miss Nolan's business manager and told him about it. The following night they were quietly "hitched" in Brooklyn, with members of the groom's family as the only witnesses. That was in March, 1931, less than a month following her arrest on a charge of petty theft after she had unintentionally thrown a $200 rug into the laundry just before moving to New York. That case was dismissed.

She was charged with violating the narcotics law that same summer. The charge came about in a curious way. The actress had fallen asleep in a row-boat on Arrowhead Lake, California, had been dangerously sunburned and brought to a hospital. The nurses who cared for her there said they found her arms "full of punctures from hypodermic needles." They had a warrant sworn out and a Federal narcotic agent obtained search warrants for her three apartments. The charges were dropped.

AFTER their marriage, the MacRerys went back to Hollywood, where Universal Pictures was suing her for $111,887, charging she had borrowed more than $20,000 during the four years she had worked for them, and had returned only $8810.

She and her husband now went into the business of running a dress shop in Los Angeles, hoping, perhaps, to realize on Miss Nolan's fame and her husband's business ability. If that was their ambition, they apparently were doomed to discouragement. In August the actress was charged on complaint of four household servants and a musician with having refused to pay them $355 in back wages. She pleaded not guilty, and the case was put off for a time. The following November a similar charge was filed by Mrs. Sonia Sovers, designer in their dress shop. She said the MacRerys refused to pay her $50 for designing clothes they offered for sale in their shop.

In March, 1932, Miss Nolan was convicted on eight labor charges, her husband on nine. They were sentenced to 30 days in jail. They appealed and the sentence was upheld by the Appellate Division of the Superior Court.

Meanwhile, the MacRerys were having domestic difficulties. Mary said, "He's the nicest man I know, but we're drawbacks to each other." They were divorced in Connecticut in 1933. The following December Mary Nolan was arrested again, this time charged with having left a worthless check for some $300 at a Minneapolis hotel. Taken from her dressing room in a New York vaudeville theater and held under $1500 bail, she explained that she "told the hotel manager she had no money," that he "insisted" she sign a check and make it good when she was able.

And now she has gone to court again. She charged that Edward J. Mannix, the movie director with whom she says she spent three years in Los Angeles prior to her marriage to MacRery, worked her in bed one night in 1931 and injured her so severely that she had to be taken to a hospital for an emergency operation. Mannix has refused to discuss her charge.

Meanwhile, Mary Nolan is, as before, hoping to stage a come-back.

Frank Tinney.

MUTINY on the BRIG SOMERS

This account of one of the strongest incidents in the history of the United States Navy is a semi-fiction tale based on naval records. The author has taken his quotations from the report of the ship's commanding officer to the Secretary of the Navy. "Mutiny on the Brig Somers" is reprinted here by courtesy of Esquire magazine, in which it first appeared.

By HANSON W. BALDWIN

WITH the sea chuckling beneath her forefoot, and royals, skysails and stunsails bellying taut in the soft breath of the northeast trades, the United States brig Somers bowed gently over a tropic sea towards Charlotte Amalie, Danish West Indies.

It was the second dog watch, Friday, November 25, 1842; the sudden twilight of the tropics had faded swiftly into the shadowed splendor of night. Overside the bow wave curled quietly aft in a fine feather of white and phosphorescence gleamed briefly golden in the dark waters.

On deck the running rigging had been neatly coiled, the boat falls flemished down, the spit kids stowed beneath the spar deck guns and the ship was settling down into the restless sleep of night upon the ocean.

Aft by the wheel were the officer of the deck and the helmsman, their sun-tanned faces sharply etched in the faint glow from the binnacle. Forward near the bitts, J. W. Wales, the purser's steward, was loitering, taking the air after supper and smoking a bed-time pipe. There were few others on the spar deck except the watch.

Wales puffed out a strong mouthful of smoke and turned to find Midshipman Philip Spencer at his side. Spencer made some remark about the weather; Wales answered in an off-hand manner, for Spencer, though he was the son of John Canfield Spencer, Secretary of War in the Cabinet of President John Tyler, was not popular with his shipmates—"he was a constant offender in a matter in which a self-respecting officer may never offend; he was always trying to bridge an unbridgeable distance in rank between man and officer."

"Come up on the booms with me; I've something to say to you."

Spencer's eyes gleamed, and Wales, startled and curious, knocked the ashes from his pipe, accompanied the midshipman aft and clambered up on the clutter of boats and spare gear stowed in the booms.

It was black dark on the booms; only the faint pin-prick of the stars relieved the sable of the sky. Spencer's sudden strained voice broke through the gentle creak of cordage and the slap of waves:

"Do you fear death? Do you fear a dead man? Are you afraid to kill a man?" Wales, frightened, edged away and answered something that seemed to satisfy the midshipman.

"I don't doubt your courage at all; I know it. But can you keep a secret and will you keep one? If so, take the oath!"

Word for word and phrase for phrase, the steward repeated after Spencer a solemn oath never to reveal to any person the conversation which was about to take place between the two. Then, with the soft winds sighing through the shrouds, Spencer told the horrified Wales of the details of a plot to murder the captain and officers, to seize the brig and to hoist the Jolly Roger.

"FEEL of my neck-handkerchief," he commanded. Wales did so and there was "a rumpling which showed that there was a paper in the back part of it."

Spencer told him there was a "secret writing" in the paper—the plan and stations of the mutineers. There were about 20 of them, he said; they would start a fight on the forecabin; Spencer would bring the men to the mast and get the officer of the deck to come and settle the difficulty; as soon as the officer got to the gangway he would be seized and thrown overboard. The scuttles to the spar deck from the cabin and stowage, the only exits to the deck from the officers' country, would be guarded, the arms chest opened, and all officers and others who did not fit in with Spencer's plans would be murdered.

There was much more of it; for half an hour an eager, excited torrent of words poured from the lips of the 19-year-old midshipman—the tale of Pines, the skull and cross-bones, piracy, captured ships scuttled without trace, blood and gold, beautiful women.

Spencer gave Wales no chance to reply; towards the end of his monologue—it was about eight bells and the watch was stirring about the deck—he called out to a seaman, Elisha Small, who was passing beneath the booms, and told him to come up. The midshipman said something to Small in Spanish, and then, in English:

"Oh, you need not be under any apprehension of fear on his account, as I have sounded him pretty well, and find he is one of us."

Small nodded; went away; the strange interview ended with tentative arrangements for another on the morrow, and threats by Spencer of violent and immediate death if the steward "hesitated a syllable."

Spencer left Wales a shaken and a terrified man, obsessed with the necessity—despite his oath—of getting the news to the captain, Commander Alexander Slidell Mackenzie, as soon as possible. The steward came up on the quarterdeck after Spencer had turned in in his hammock and hung about the cabin entrance, but he saw Seaman Small watching him and, frightened, he slunk away. Wales then tried to get into the wardroom to report to the First Lieutenant, Guert Gansevoort, but Spencer saw the steward coming into the steerage and wanted to know:

"Why in the devil are you cruising around this place at this time of night? Why don't you turn in?"

AND so the night of November 25 dragged into history. Wales lay awake trembling the night long, while the brig Somers, running her westing down, sailed on towards Charlotte Amalie, 1700 miles away.

Saturday, November 26, 1842.

In the early morning Wales got into the wardroom on some pretext and told Purser H. M. Heskell of the incipient mutiny. The purser informed Lieutenant Gansevoort, the second in command, and Gansevoort, "thoroughly alarmed," hurried to inform Commander Mackenzie.

Mackenzie was 39 years old, an officer with "proved reputation for courage and efficiency—a record of unusual ability in his profession" and author of several books of biography and travel. He was highly esteemed and well fitted, by character, ability and temperament, to command the Somers, with her crew of 13 officers and 120 "men"—some 50 of them apprentice boys.

At first, the youthful commander refused to take the "mutiny" seriously. He listened to all Gansevoort said; asked a number of rather impatient questions; smoothed his thin auburn hair, and then declared that the "vessel was in good discipline" and that he found it difficult to credit Wales' report. He directed Gansevoort, however, to "watch Mr. Spencer narrowly, without seeming to do so" and also to watch the crew.

The Lieutenant carried out his instructions—while the brig was humming along with the trade winds towards Charlotte Amalie. There was little to report. Spencer spent the day "rather sullenly in one corner of the steerage, as was his custom." He was seen in the wardroom looking at a chart of the West Indies and making inquiries about the Isle of Pines. He went to the foretop, where an apprentice, Benjamin F. Green, tattooed "some love devices" on his arm. That was all, but Gansevoort learned other things—that Spencer had been trying for some time to "ascertain the rate of the chronometer"; that he had been "seen in secret and nightly conferences with Boatswain's Mate Samuel Cromwell and Seaman Elisha Small"; that he had been intimate with the crew, though reserved with the officers; that he had given money to Small and money and tobacco to others; that he had caused the wardroom steward to steal brandy from the mess and had been drunk; that he had "the habit of amusing the crew by making music with his jaw," and that he had been dismissed in disgrace from the Brazilian squadron.

These things, to Gansevoort, were cumulative evidence, and when he detected the midshipman looking at him "with the most infernal expression I have ever seen upon a human face," the Lieutenant was "satisfied at once" of Spencer's guilt.

As the day wore on and the sun passed the meridian and sank towards a mass of cumulous clouds in the western sky, Commander Mackenzie, wearied with much thinking and disturbed by the tension of an uncertain danger, changed his mind. At evening quarters, with the sun gliding the world of water and painting the far horizon with the soft hues of twilight, the captain ordered all officers aft on the quarterdeck; the master took the wheel and Mackenzie approached Spencer and said:

"I learn, Mr. Spencer, that you aspire to command the Somers?"

With a bland but deferential smile, the midshipman shook his head.

"Did you not tell Mr. Wales, sir, that you had a project to kill the commander, the officers and a considerable portion of the crew of this vessel and convert her into a pirate?"

"I may have told him so, sir, but it was in joke."

How the Captain of a United States Warship of the Sailing Days Put Down a Threatened Rebellion by Hanging Three of His Men, One the Son of the Secretary of War.

"COME UP ON THE BOOMS WITH ME, I'VE SOMETHING TO SAY TO YOU."

"This, sir, is joking on a forbidden subject; this joke may cost you your life. Be pleased to remove your neck-handkerchief."

But there was no longer any crumpling; the paper had gone.

Spencer was arrested, his sword taken from him, and he was placed on the port arms chest on the quarterdeck, double-ironed and handcuffed. He was warned that if he talked to or communicated with the crew in any way he would be put "to instant death," and Lieutenant Gansevoort was directed to see that these orders were carried out. The officer of the deck was armed with cutlass and pistol, while the amazed crew, dismissed from quarters, slunk forward, eying each other warily and talking in groups in guarded whispers. Gansevoort and Midshipman Henry Rodgers went below to the steerage to search Spencer's locker. Two papers with "Greek characters" were found. Rodgers translated them and presented the result to the captain as follows:

Those doubtful marked x will probably be induced to join before the project is carried into execution. The remainder of the doubtful will probably join when the thing is done, if not, they must be forced. If any not marked down wish to join after the thing is done we will pick out the best and dispose of the rest.

Mackenzie, face strained and eyes bloodshot from sleeplessness, pored hour after hour over the names, as the dancing shadows from the swinging lamp flickered about his cabin. Along the darkened decks, beneath the canvas faintly creaking in the bolt ropes, the officer-of-the-deck, armed and uneasy, trusting no one, jumpy from suspense, made the rounds of the ship. Spencer, on the arms chest, slept peacefully, his chains clanking as the ship rolled. Mackenzie, below in his cabin, sat wakefully—thinking—tortured thinking, seeing his kingdom of the sea, all he knew and loved and had built up, wavering like the staggering shadows, the crazy shadows, lengthening and crawling across the deck, shifting and climbing in grotesque shapes up the solid oaken bulkheads, tortured shadows—shifting things.

Sunday, November 27th.
It was a glorious Sunday in the year 1842; a flood of blinding tropic sunlight should have washed clean all the terrors of the dark. Sweet winds—fair winds—still belled the bleached canvas and tenderly touched the lovely, eager bosom of the sea.

The wind freshened in the early morning, and after sail was shortened, the crew stood to quarters ready for inspection. Commander Mackenzie eyed his men closely—men he once could trust—as they lined up with their battle axes. Forward was Samuel Cromwell, a boatswain's mate of the old school, ready with tongue and marine spike, the tallest man in the crew, a bushy-bearded, mustachioed sailor, cruel, violent, profane, and able, seamed with the scars of his slaving days. "He had a determined and dangerous air," Elisha Small was a weakened, shriveled little man with a timorous face. He shifted his battle axe from hand to hand, stood on one foot and then the other, and avoided the captain's glance.

After quarters, divine services were held; again the captain, while he read the Psalms and led the men—they were once his men—in the singing of the hymns, watched the crew closely. Mackenzie's searching eyes flickered from face to face, looking—looking—but there was nothing.

In the afternoon, "the wind having moderated," skysails and royal stunsails were set. An apprentice was on the main royal yard; Small and another seaman were pulling at the brace, when with a crash of splintered wood, snapped stays and flapping canvas, the topgallant mast carried away in the sheave-pole, carrying with it the main royal mast, with the skysail, studding sail, 'gallant stay and part of the gaff topsail. "Occurring at this time, this incident immediately took on a sinister appearance both to Commander Mackenzie and his first lieutenant, whose minds at once rushed to the conclusion that it was intentional." Gansevoort hurried to the deck and took charge of clearing the wreckage; he noted that all those "most conspicuously named" in Spencer's Greek papers had mustered at the main topmast-head; "the coincidence confirmed the existence of a dangerous conspiracy."

The wreckage was cleared up without trouble; new canvas was sent up; by late afternoon the Somers was bowling along under full sail with a whispering wind astern, but nerves were twitching; blood pounding in temples; throats dry, for night, "the season of danger," was at hand.

The harassed captain consulted his first lieutenant; together they agreed that Cromwell, the hard-case boatswain's mate, should be arrested. All the officers were armed and stationed about the spar deck; it was almost dusk. Cromwell, huge, bearded figure of a man, was climbing slowly down the rigging. As he set foot on deck he was met by Gansevoort with a cocked pistol, and surrounded by officers, he was led aft to the quarterdeck where he was questioned by Mackenzie as to the "secret conversation" he had held the night before with Mr. Spencer.

"It was not me, sir; it was Small."

Small was brought aft; charged with having listened to Spencer's mutinous plots, answered meekly: "Yes, sir."

Both men were clapped in double irons; Cromwell put on the starboard arms chest directly across from Spencer and Small on the starboard quarterdeck near the after gun. They were both told they would be taken home for trial; Cromwell protested his innocence:

"I don't know anything about it," he insisted.

Wales, the steward, was armed and set as guard on the prisoners; "increased vigilance was now enjoined upon all the officers; all were perpetually armed"; either Commander Mackenzie or Lieutenant Gansevoort was always on deck, and generally both of them were.

Monday, November 28th.

The officers came red-eyed upon deck to greet the sun; it had been a sleepless night, with cutlasses and pistols as bedfellows, and aft in the captain's cabin, the shifting shadows from the swaying lamp had kept fitful pace with Mackenzie's thoughts. It was another soft and sunlit day, but the terrors of the night did not die with the dawn.

After a breakfast of salt horse and hardtack with a pannikin of "jamoke," all hands were called to witness punishment. There were two to be flogged. One of them was Charles Lambert, boy, who had stolen some sinnet for a hat from the apprentice, Gagey. The lad was stripped to the waist, his wrists and ankles spread-eagled to a grating, the crew paraded at quarters, the armed officers looking on. A petty officer wielded the "cat." The nine "talls" whistled through the air and cracked across Lambert's naked back. The boy shuddered, gasped. Red welts, criss-crossed, faintly oozing purple blood, ridged the skin of his back, curved beneath his armpits and reached out onto his chest, where the lash caressed him. The cat cracked again; the boy strained at his bonds. Six lashes—fifty-four welts—a curving pattern of scarified skin.

Henry Waltham, the wardroom steward who had stolen brandy for Spencer, was next. He did not "wince nor cry aloud." Sullenly, when his punishment was ended and his bonds released he drew a shirt over his smarting shoulders and slunk away. Punishment finished, Commander Mackenzie mounted the trunk and addressed the crew. He told them for the first time in general terms of Spencer's plot; he emphasized that many of them had been "marked for murder" by Spencer; he "exhorted them to think of their homes and kindred and to rejoice at the prospect of being with their families again in about three weeks." Some of the boys shuddered; some "wept" at his words. The tears impressed the captain; he "now considered the crew tranquilized and the vessel safe."

But not for long.

Tuesday, November 29th.

Again the pipe shrilled:

"All hands witness punishment."

Waltham again. This time he had told a boy of three bottles of wine which could conveniently be pilfered, "his object being no doubt to furnish the means of excitement to the conspirators." Another speech, "but the whole crew was far from being tranquilized."

THE captain became convinced the conspirators were planning a sudden rush to rescue the three prisoners chained upon the quarterdeck. Wales, the steward, detected Charles A. Wilson, sailmaker's mate, attempting to draw a handspike from beneath the launch. Wales leveled his pistol at Wilson's head and the man dropped the spike and ran.

Wednesday, November 30th.

Another fair morning, and Charlotte Amalie five days to the westward. The sea, gold and blue in the sunlight, danced away in little leaping waves to the far horizon. The muzzles of the smooth-bores glared from port and starboard out upon an empty ocean. The captain paced restlessly on the quarterdeck. The rising sun found him where the moon had left him—on deck, sleepless, red-eyed, tormented, cutlass by his side, a brace of pistols in his belt. Landsman McKinley and Apprentice Green had missed their muster when the watch was called at midnight; "Where was this thing to end?"

At 9 a. m., quarters, four more arrests were made; Wilson, the sailmaker's mate; McKinley, on Spencer's list as "Certain"; Green, and Alexander McKie, friend of Cromwell. In double-irons the new prisoners were placed beside Spencer, Cromwell and Small on the quarterdeck, "in the way of everybody and interfering seriously with the working of the ship." In Wilson's sail-bag was "found an African knife of an extraordinary shape; . . . it was of no use for any honest purpose; it was fit only to kill."

Spencer, Cromwell and Small were the only suspects capable of navigating the ship; Article Thirteen of the Laws for the Government of the Navy provided that "if any person in the Navy shall make or attempt to make any mutinous assembly, he shall, on conviction thereof by a court-martial, suffer death—"

Immediately after quarters the captain addressed a letter to the Somers' four wardroom officers and the three oldest midshipmen asking their "opinion as to the best course to be pursued" in view of the "disaffection among a crew which has so long and so systematically and assiduously been tampered with by an officer."

THE seven officers at once convened in the wardroom and commenced to examine "witnesses."

Without a halt for meals, through the long hot day until the sun was reddening the western sky, the officers sat in the tiny wardroom, Purser Heskell scribbling notes. At dusk the captain adjourned the proceedings.

Thursday, December 1st.

The counsel ended its sittings before quarters and at 9 a. m. its verdict was handed to Mackenzie:

U. S. Brig Somers
December 1, 1842

Sir:
In answer to your letter of yesterday, requesting our counsel as to the best course to be pursued with the prisoners, Acting Midshipman Philip Spencer, Boatswain's Mate Samuel Cromwell, and Seaman Elisha Small, we would state, that the evidence which has come to our knowledge is of such a nature as, after a dispassionate and deliberate consideration of the case as the exigencies of the time would admit, we have come to a cool, decided, and unanimous opinion that they have been guilty of a full and determined intention to commit a mutiny on board of this vessel of a most atrocious nature; and that the revelation of circumstances having made it necessary to confine others with them, the uncertainty as to what extent they are leagued with others still at large, the impossibility of guarding against the contingencies which "a day or an hour may bring forth," we are convinced that it would be impossible to carry them to the United States, and that the safety of the public property, the lives of ourselves, and of those committed to our charge, require that (giving them sufficient time to prepare) they should be put to death, in a manner best calculated as an example to make a beneficial impression upon the disaffected. This opinion we give, bearing in mind our duty to our God, our country, and to the service.

We are, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servants,
Guert Gansevoort, Lieutenant
R. W. Leacock,
Past Assistant Surgeon
H. M. Heskell, Purser

Mackenzie did not hesitate; he gave orders "to make immediate preparations for hanging the three principal criminals at the main yard arms."

The day was fair, with scalloped clouds tracing a fleecy pattern across a deep blue sky. The gentle rollers easily lifted the brig's 266 tons; the main yard awayed slightly.

"All hands witness punishment." Again the shrill and cheerless skirl of the boat's n' pipe.

The officers and trusted petty officers, cutlasses in hands and pistols tucked in their belts, were stationed about the spar deck. Captain Mackenzie left the deck for the first time in many hours, went to his cabin and donned his full dress uniform.

Mackenzie first confronted Spencer, the still bland and almost debonair midshipman, the son of a Cabinet officer.

"Mr. Spencer, sir: when you were about to take my life, to dishonor me as an officer when in the execution of my rightful duty, to take my life without cause or offense to you, it was your intention, sir, to remove me suddenly from the world in the darkness of the night, in my sleep, without a moment to utter one word of affection to my wife and children and one prayer for their welfare. Your life, sir, is now forfeited to your country; the dire necessities of the

'RED' McLELLAND

How the Arkansas Signboard-Sitting Champion 'Got By' in Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C. RED McLELLAND, the signboard-sitting champion of six years ago in Camden, Arkansas, is going to hang up another record of a sort this Christmas. He came to Washington a little more than two years ago, when he was 14, with $1.25 in his pocket, but come Christmas he is buying his parents and his six brothers and sisters a home and five acres in Camden, and paying cash.

"Course," he explains in a hurry to be fair, "Camden and Washington are different things. The house we picked will only cost $300. But I'll have it saved just in time."

In the little more than two years Clebourne McLelland has been in Washington he has become one of the phenomena of the New Deal. When this freckle-faced, red-haired youngster doesn't appear every so often in the office of Vice-President Garner, the white-haired V.P. demands a little querulously, "Where's Red? What's he doing?"

Red's conquest of the Vice-President is the reason folks back home class Red with the last big tornado that hit Camden. It was noticed here about a year ago that the Vice-President usually appeared at baseball games accompanied by a red-headed boy who had no compunctions about rooting for the team opposing the Vice-President's favorite.

The movie news reel men wanted pictures, got them, and when the film showed in Red's home town the local papers commented: "This is the first time Camden has broken into the movies since the tornado more than a year ago."

Back of those ball games lies a story about Red which makes the older politicians grin. Red's first job in Washington was a post as page in the Senate—and, incidentally, that post was the first patronage plum which fell to an Arkansan with the change of administration. He had worked two days when he set a new goal. Vice-President Garner was the highest official on Red's immediate horizon. He decided to be Mr. Garner's special page.

He noticed that periodically Mr. Garner beckoned a page to his desk on the Senate floor and sent for cigars. Red learned the brand and after that carried several of them with him. When Mr. Garner beckoned after that Red stepped up with a cigar, and solemnly the Vice-President dug in his pocket and reimbursed the small entrepreneur.

"Course," said Red of his plan, "it was an investment, but Mr. Garner never did fail to pay me."

THEN came one sunny afternoon when the Senate adjourned early. Vice-President Garner stepped into the Democratic cloakroom and demanded to know if there was a ball game. Red waited until the Senators in the room could say their say.

But none of them did, so he stepped up.

"Mr. Vice-President, Washington is playing Boston today. The game was postponed yesterday, but today is an open date." The Vice-President hid a laugh.

"Well," he said, "I'll be needing a page at the game. Suppose you go with me." So Red went out for his first big-league ball game as the guest of the Vice-President. He was only 14, but he understood the fact he was an unknown, freckle-faced boy from Arkansas rolling around Washington streets in the opulent limousine of one of the nation's highest officers.

"Say, I thought quick," Red recounts. "I knew we'd have to talk, so I just lit into baseball." Garner knows baseball players and the game, but so did the red-headed youngster.

Clebourne
"Red" McLelland.

Some time later the Vice-President was so ambushed by the boy's persistence that he broke a rule of 30 years. Red was approaching his sixteenth birthday, and that meant he could no longer be a Senate page. He cast about for another job. He got the signatures of 35 Senators on a job petition, and then bearded Mr. Garner in his office.

According to Garner, he had never signed a job petition in the 30 years he has been in Washington, and he told that to Red. But Garner signed, saying, "That's the first and last time I do that."

Then Red waited around Capitol corridors until he saw Postmaster-General Farley. He told the Postmaster-General his troubles and Farley grinned at an aid who was with him. "Better find the kid a job. He's going to be a big Democrat some day." Red finally landed in AAA as a messenger boy. But he kept his eyes open for a better job. This time he had to take an examination, but he passed and now he is in the machine tabulation department of AAA, where the cards for crop payments are sorted and filed. That job is the reason he can, although he is only 17, buy his parents a home. Heretofore he has just been able to pay his expenses and send money home to the folks. But the new job, he figured, even before he had it, would give him, by December, $300 he didn't need. So he wrote home to make arrangements for the purchase.

The home will put a period to one chapter of his story. He climbed the train for Washington a few days before the inauguration in 1933 with a worn suit on his back, a railroad ticket the Arkansas Legislature had bought him, and $1.25 in cash. His plan of action started with the first turn of the wheels. He hunted the Arkansas delegation which was aboard. He spotted Senator Joe Robinson, the senior member of the group, and announced himself. He wanted a job.

It is easy to imagine Robinson's reaction. Thousands of constituents were begging him for food and work. Banks were closing all over the country. Unemployment had been increasing.

"But I've got a family to support," Red urged.

"What? A family?" Robinson said. "Yes, six brothers and sisters," Red said. "My father's a World War veteran. He was injured and can't work."

"Well," said Robinson going down before the onslaught of those gray-green eyes and the red hair. "Well, we'll see." Without telling Red the delegation made up a purse and wired ahead to have a new suit delivered to the train so their young fellow citizen could arrive in Washington looking like a worthy representative of Arkansas. He told them he had $1.25 and he intended to stay until that played out. They believed him. On his second night in Washington he went to the inaugural ball on tickets given by James Farley.

At the ball he wandered about wordless until he saw the famous pink whiskers of Senator Ham Lewis of Illinois. He sidled up to the Lewis box, and in a minute Lewis' hand was stroking Red's bright-colored top piece. Red spent the rest of the evening with the Senator and his wife.

"I SUPPOSE I ought to admit I wouldn't have got far without this hair," Red says. "People notice it. But I deserve what I get," he adds. "I pay attention to business." The Garner cigar story is proof enough that the boy sizes himself right; not too much, and not too little, either.

Washington proved to be no trail-less jungle to him. He has been sharpening his miniature political weapons since he was a five-year-old newsboy in Camden. Then, being a rank amateur, he used the bludgeon method. "I just pestered customers till they bought from me," he says. Later he took to selling peanuts, but he was learning. He admits with a grin that he always tried hardest to sell peanuts to the big shots. His next try was with a telegraph company at Pine Bluff. Messenger work was too juvenile for him by that time. He was 11, so he solicited business and brought home the plum of the town. He talked the town's leading banker into dispensing with the services of the opposing company, and taking those of his own.

Then his friend, Lawrence E. Wilson, to whom he had sold peanuts, was elected Lieutenant-Governor of Arkansas. Red decided to cast his lot with Wilson. The Lieutenant-Governor grinned and put the boy in his hotel room until he gained a job as a page. That gave Red his idea of coming to Washington. He reasoned if a state Capitol has pages, the national Capitol must have them, too. So he passed the hat for his ticket and climbed on the train. He says he intends to climb on the same Washington special eight years from now as Arkansas' 25-year-old Representative from his district.

Margaret Bourke-White.

PHOTOGRAPHER of the MACHINE AGE

WHEN raw and reaching steel began to thrust aside the woodland for a place beside the pretty ladies in the pictures, there was immediate need for a cameraman with candor and imagination to bare the soul and sinews of industry.

Margaret Bourke-White, a New York girl in her late twenties, filled the bill. She saw the heart of trade in a roundhouse full of locomotives, in the lacy web made by the girders of bridge or building rising against the sky, in the shine of sweat on the naked back of an iron puddler stirring molten metal and she trapped her impressions on photographic plates. To get just the right shot she wanted she has strapped a camera to her chest and crawled on hands and knees through the dark tunnels of a coal mine or swung out on a crane over a river or chasm. Recently, she was strapped on the wing of an airplane to get certain views from the air.

"Please," she protests, "do not get the impression that I go out of my way to 'stunt.' Far from it. I'm too much in favor of staying alive; and besides, the insurance companies would cancel my policies if I went skylarking. Calmly and sanely I decide the shots I want. If a perch on a girder is the place to get them, I get on a girder. I am very sure-footed. I have a good sense of balance. Heights don't bother me. And that is all there is to it."

Curiously enough, it wasn't until her senior year at college that she discovered a flair for the visually dramatic—the story in a picture. Her father died during her last year at Cornell University, where she was specializing in biology. She was immediately faced with the problem of earning money to support herself until she got her degree. With a small camera she wandered about the campus, snapping pictures of the buildings that particularly appealed to her. An architect saw them in a shop where they had been put up for sale and he gave her work that would have supported her through several college courses.

After graduation, she got out of the biology lab, convinced that photography was her field. She went to Cleveland when the huge Terminal Tower was under construction and so impressed were the builders with her work that they made her official photographer. Since then she has been official photographer for other great buildings, steel mills, coal mines, lumber forests, textile factories and airlines. She did a series of photo murals for the RCA Building in Radio City, New York, with pictures 10 feet high around a 160-foot rotunda. They depicted the whole history of radio, dynamos, antennae, rectifiers, coils, loudspeakers and microphones.

RECENTLY she was in St. Louis on a two-fold mission. An airline commissioned her to photograph the entire route along which its planes fly. For several weeks she practically lived in a plane. And it was to get air views of the Painted Desert, Grand Canyon, the Indian villages and other spots that she had herself strapped to a wing of the ship as she pointed her camera earthward.

The second part of her mission concerned St. Louis itself. A monthly magazine sent her on a tour of the country to present urban communities to the nation. Some of her photos of old and new sections of St. Louis are pictorial sagas.

Last year a most heartbreaking job from a human point of view, yet one of the most thrilling pictorially, came her way when another magazine assigned her to photograph the havoc that the drouth wrought in the Middle West.

"The whole trip, except for the excitement of the job itself, was like a dreadful nightmare that you felt you ought to wake up from any minute," she recalls. "Feeble, emaciated cattle clustered about a tiny trickle of water that was once a wide river. Over all the sun was simply broiling. Farmyards had the listless look of a deserted village. When I did glimpse a man or woman, they seemed sunk in the same sort of apathy I noticed in the starving animals. Yet they had a blind faith that everything would eventually work out all right."

Before many people had gone to Russia to observe the social experiment, she had set up her tripod in its factories and explored its mines and steppes. She had adventures galore, some of which could befall only a woman who was young and pretty. There were, for instance, five Russian proposals in the summer she was 24. She credits that emotional upheaval in the Soviet Union entirely to her lipstick. Its use by local girls was banned.

Margaret Bourke-White gets from $500 to $1000 for some of her pictures, but her clients say they are worth the money. Thinks she comes honestly by her love for machinery and architecture as her father was an inventor of devices for cameras and printing presses. Re-takes until eternity to get the effects she wants and for a less-than-five-foot person, has an enormous appetite. Prefers German cooking, though she once spent seven hours in a German jail on suspicion that she was a spy because she took pictures of the Ruhr Valley.

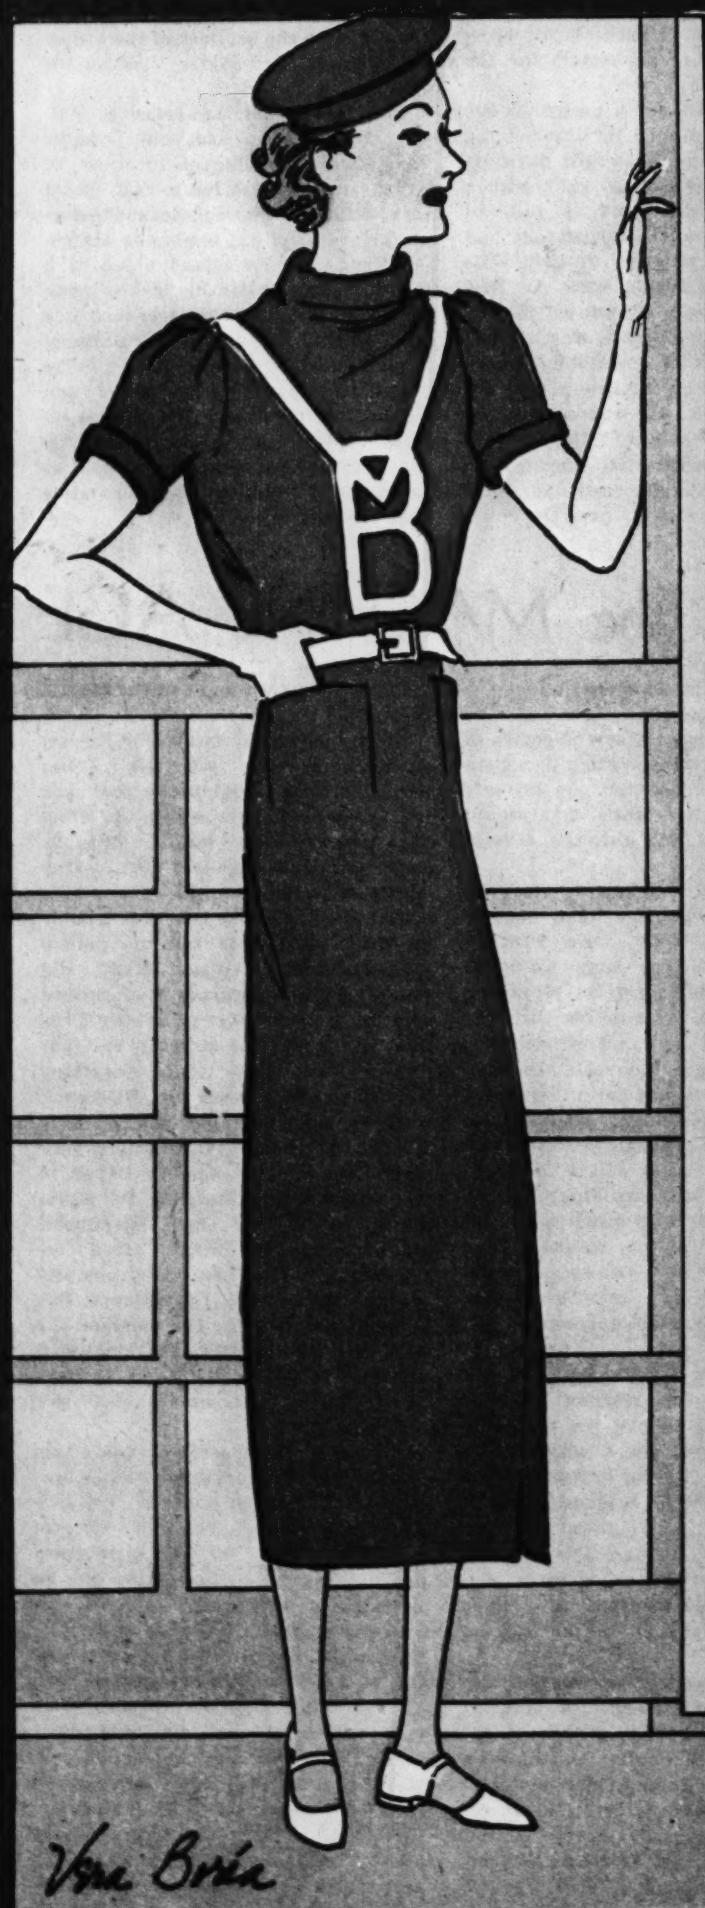

Nothing about her career has caused her as much amazement as the fact that a writer recently named her sixteenth among the 20 most notable women in America.

TRAILED the SMUGGLER of Watch Parts for TWO YEARS

And Found Him
Serving in a Religious Capacity in the Kitchen of an Ocean Liner.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch
Sunday Magazine

TODAY the United States Treasury Department believes it has the answer, a 105-pound, black bearded man, to a smuggling problem that has had it combing transatlantic shipping without a clew since 1933. And no wonder it took two years. Ferreting the secretive little ex-rabbi out of all the tonnage that piles the North Atlantic was something like finding a needle in a haystack.

What started it all was a sudden flood of "bargains" in imported watch parts in New York. There's a tariff on Swiss watches and parts, a tariff that makes bargains, duty paid, next to impossible. And importers who had paid duty began to complain.

Then—and, for that matter, until a few weeks ago—Max Erbllich was a man respected no less for his personal integrity than for the dignity of the calling which had been his. Since then Erbllich has sat in a cell at the Federal House of Detention, unable to raise $1000 bond. Two others have been arrested and a smuggling warrant has been issued for a fourth. And the Federal men, announcing that the arrests broke up an international ring which had smuggled in hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of watch parts, feel pretty confident that there'll be no more complaints of duty-free "bargains" for a while.

One wonders how this unobtrusive little man, 48 years old, still a Polish citizen, ever got into such a far-flung and fantastic racket. So, it seems, does he. But it's easy to understand how, once in it, he could remain unsuspected until almost every other possible solution had been investigated and ruled out.

It was late in 1933 that the Customs Bureau, hearing of the flood of significantly low-priced watch parts in New York, set out to discover how they had come into this country. The first possibility, of course, was that this was a new venture of some old hand at the business.

Known smugglers were watched. A special detail was assigned to the task. None of the more prominent and versatile professionals could be incriminated. The investigators turned to smaller fry, and found nothing there. Records were thumbed over. Still no clew.

Plainly, there was a new operator in the field. And a busy one, for still the foreign parts were arriving, somehow, on the New York market.

INVESTIGATORS were sent to Europe. They visited the great export and manufacturing centers, questioned watchmakers and dealers. And turned up not a single likely tip on the mystery they sought to solve.

Just as the case was beginning to seem hopeless, it was noticed that the arrival of a new supply in New York roughly coincided with the landing of the great Cunard liner, the Aquitania. At first, it was only the shadow of a suspicion. But, when the Aquitania returned and immediately thereafter for a second time, the "bargains" reached the market, it seemed certain that the Federal men were narrowing their search.

Obviously, the person they were seeking must have come on the great Cunarder. Obviously, he was not a passenger, for no passenger could sail again and again on the same steamer without exciting at least a measure of curiosity. The place to look was among the crew. But, in a crew of several hundred men and women, that was no simple task.

It required patient and endless investigation. And it required secrecy, for if the suspicions of the guilty person were aroused, there wasn't the slightest chance of ever catching him with the evidence or running down his accomplices. And the last man for them to suspect, of course, would be a man of religious calling.

That, as the course of the investigation went, was almost literally exact. Erbllich was virtually the last man to be investigated. Small, quiet, not obviously secretive but devoted to minding his own business, he was in charge of the kosher diet department of the liner.

Nearly every other member of the crew had been eliminated before the Customs men turned to him. Once they had, however, everything seemed to point to him as the man they sought. Yet they were skeptical. They watched every move he made in every port, on both sides of the Atlantic, checked up every place he visited, every person he met, all his associates.

The net was drawing close about him when an incident occurred which, a little earlier in the game, might have diverted the Federal men from their quarry. On June 25 a trunk arrived on the Aquitania's fellow-Cunarder, the Berengaria. There were other trunks on the Berengaria, of course, dozens of them; but there was something peculiar about this one. It was empty. It was consigned to a fictitious address. And in the back of the trunk was a false panel seven-eighths of an inch thick, inserted vertically behind the drawers.

The secret compartment was empty. Apparently, it is thought now, the European members of the international smuggling ring thought this would throw the investigators off the trail; that, while they tried to trace the trunk, the smuggler could get in safely with his contraband. If so, the ruse occurred too late. The Federal men were on a trail too hot to abandon. And then they received news from England which assured them that the end of the trail was in sight.

ANOTHER empty trunk, with a similar false panel, arrived on the Aquitania July 10, again, apparently, with the hope of distracting the Customs men. But that afternoon they were too busy to wander off on false scents, too busy for reasons which soon became quite apparent.

As the ship drew in to Pier 54, North River, hundreds of eager folk waved a frantic welcome from the dock to hundreds of voyagers on the decks. Inconspicuous, strictly non-waving but emphatically quite as eager as any of the others, a quiet, little homecoming committee waited for Max Erbllich. It was a surprise party.

And was it a surprise! Moreover, the ordinarily quiet little gentleman made wholly clear, it was a shock. In fact, it was remarkable that so diminutive a person could muster so much vehemence. But, ignoring his protestations, Customs Guard William H. Butler escorted him to a private room on the pier. Other guards joined him, and together they went over the ex-rabbi from top to toe.

Now it was their turn to be surprised. Beneath Erbllich's clothing, crossed over his chest Sam Browne style and bound round his waist was a belt of fine flannel. Concealed in it, the Customs guard reported, were 700 parts for Swiss watches. One of the guards ducked out to the telephone. He called Gordon H. Pike, special agent of the Customs Bureau, who had been waiting for a call like that for a long, long time.

"We've got him," said the guard, when Pike got on the phone.

Meantime Customs Guard Butler escorted Erbllich back on board the Aquitania, across the decks and down to his quarters. There, Butler reported, he found 34 small brown packages. None was more than seven-eighths of an inch thick. But altogether, said the Customs men, they contained 1300 watch parts—for this voyage a total of 2000, valued at about $5000.

It was 5:30 p. m. But the ex-rabbi's day of sorrow was just beginning. He was questioned through the whole night. There was much to ask him about. The Federal men had been accumulating questions for two years.

They don't tell what they learned from Erbllich. But a little after dawn they set out for the Bronx. There, at his home, they arrested Louis Landau, 24, a tea and coffee salesman. His father, Morris, was not at home. The Customs men set a watch for him. Another group picked up Aaron Bernstein, 49, a dealer in watches.

The three men under arrest were questioned by Joseph P. Martin, Assistant United States District Attorney. Garrett W. Cotter, United States Commissioner, issued a warrant for the arrest of the elder Landau, and set a total of $4000 bail for the three men in custody.

case, growing out of your corruption of the crew, compel me to take it. I shall not, however, imitate your intended example, and send you to your Maker without preparation. If there yet remains to you one feeling true to nature, it shall be gratified; if you have any word to send to your parents it shall be noted and faithfully delivered. You will have ten minutes for this purpose—"

The midshipman's composure entirely vanished; "he sank, with tears, upon his knees and said that he was not fit to die." Urged to die like an officer and to set an example to the men he had seduced, Spencer shudderingly regained his self control and commenced, quietly, to pray.

Cromwell, the hard-case boatswain, was even more unnerved; he protested his innocence, falling upon his knees, his chains clanking on the deck planking and begging for mercy for his wife's sake. Only Eliza Small, the scared-looking "conspirator" who had been set down "as the poison of the three," received the announcement calmly; he had no preparations to make, he said:

"I have nobody to care for me but my poor old mother, and I would rather that she should not know how I have died."

Spencer, praying, suddenly looked up, his eyes swimming in tears, as Mackenzie passed:

"As these are my last words, I trust that they will be believed. Cromwell is innocent."

The captain was staggered. He consulted Lieutenant Gansevoort, who said, "there was not a shadow of doubt." The lieutenant consulted the petty officers, and Cromwell, the ex-slaver, was "condemned by acclamation."

The fair trade winds still held; they whispered gently to the taut canvas as the minutes passed. Spencer objected to the shortness of time for preparation, and asked for an hour; no answer was made to this request, but he was not hurried, and more than the hour for which he asked was allowed to elapse.

"He requested that his face might be covered; this was readily granted; and he was asked with what it should be covered; he did not care; a handkerchief was sought in his locker; none but a black one found and this brought for the purpose."

"Tell them," Spencer breathed; "tell my family I die wishing them every blessing and happiness; I deserve death for this and many other crimes—there are few crimes that I have not committed; I feel sincerely penitent, and my only fear of death is that my repentance may be too late—"

The little waves slapped briskly against the weed-grown strakes. "This will kill my poor mother," Spencer sobbed, and then:

"But haven't you formed an exaggerated estimate of the extent of this conspiracy? Aren't you going too far—too fast; does the law entirely justify you?"

"All your brother officers, your messmates included, believe you guilty," Mackenzie replied, "and your death justified."

"They are right; they are right," the prisoner muttered. "Oh, God, how am I to die?"

The captain "explained to him" the manner of his death—

"Oh, let me be shot!"

The sun-tanned boys and bearded seamen, bare-footed, tattooed, brawny, stood in silent ranks with fearful eyes strained aft.

A Bible and a prayer-book were brought for the midshipman; "frocks" to cover the heads of Small and Cromwell. The three walked slowly aft, their chains clanking, a sad, funeral procession.

Spencer to Mackenzie: "I beg your forgiveness for what I have meditated against you."

Spencer to Wales: "Mr. Wales, I earnestly hope you will forgive me for tampering with your fidelity."

The steward broke into tears and sobbed:

"I do forgive you from the bottom of my heart and I hope that God may forgive you also."

Spencer to Small: "Small, forgive me for leading you into this trouble."

Small to Spencer: "No, by God! Mr. Spencer, I can't forgive you."

Spencer to Small: "Small, forgive me; you must forgive me."

Small to Spencer: "Ah, Mr. Spencer, that is a hard thing for you to ask me; we shall soon be before the face of God, and there we shall know all about it."

THE captain intervened, pleaded with Small; immediately the weakened little seaman held out his hand:

"I do forgive you, Mr. Spencer; may God Almighty forgive you also."

Small to the captain: "... you are doing your duty, and I honor you for it; God bless the flag and prosper it!"

The prisoners were placed by the gangway, on the hammock nettings fore and aft. The nooses were adjusted and Spencer asked permission to give the signal of execution.

Small asked for a last word with the crew and his "face being uncovered," said:

"Shipmates and topmates, take warning by my example; I never was a pirate, I never killed a man; it's for saying that I would do it that I am about to depart this life; see what a word will do. It was going in a Guineaman that brought me to this; beware of a Guineaman—I am now ready to die, Mr. Spencer—are you?"

Cromwell's muffled voice through the frock that hid his face:

"Tell my wife I die an innocent man; tell Lieutenant Morris I die an innocent man."

Silent the prisoners stood upon the hammock nettings, hands bound behind their backs, chains looped about their feet, faces muffled in their hanging shrouds. The sweet winds whispered in their ears; the warmth—a tender warmth—of the tropic sun beat down upon their bodies; the pulse of life flowed strongly in their veins; temples throbbed to the terrible rhythm of racing hearts; a sob wracked Spencer's body.

They stood and waited—the crew of the brig Somers—in silent ranks, their hands upon the whips, ready to heave their shipmates into eternity. Cold-eyed, wary, hands upon cutlasses, the officers and trusted petty officers stood near them, while aft on the quarterdeck, looped in chains, the other prisoners lay.

Captain Mackenzie, his gold epaulettes glinting in the sun, mounted the trunk and "waited for some time but no word was given." The slow minutes passed—a last eternity—no sound but the soft chuckle of the little waves, no fragrance but the sweet smell of the salt, salt sea; no sight—for the hooded men—but the red glare of brilliant sunlight through the coarse warp of cloth—the red glare of leaping flames in hell!

Time after time Spencer wet his quivering lips beneath the cloth and tried to speak; time after time as seconds ticked the last act of a tragedy he tried to give the words that meant the end. His voice stuck in his crop, his throat constricted—he could not—he could not—Oh Christ in Heaven!

The glowing coal by the signal gun grew dull; a boy fetched a live one from the galley.

The hooded head of the son of the Secretary of War moved dumbly like a thing bereft; a hoarse unnatural voice whispered to a boatswain's mate named Browning that he could not give the word—

Immediately the captain spoke:

"Fire!"

The glowing coal dropped upon live powder; the muzzle-loader spoke, roaring across an empty ocean.

"Whip," shouted Gansevoort. Nervous hands clutched at the trailing lines; the nooses tightened; beneath the hoods breath stopped suddenly and praying lips grew blue; heels were snatched from hammock nettings; the ensign sprang to the gaff—and as if to keep the colors company, the bodies of Spencer, Small and Cromwell were run up in jig-time to the main yardarms.

The brig Somers sailed on beneath a mackerel sky towards Charlotte Amalie, where once in days gone by pirates had fought and died...

The bodies swung like gruesome pendulums all the livelong day; Spencer, the officer, alone at the port yardarm. An hour after the crew's dinner, the watch was set and the bodies lowered to be laid out for burial. For the midshipman a crude coffin was made out of two mess chests; Spencer was dressed in complete uniform, "except the sword, which he had forfeited the right to wear." The two seamen were tended by their messmates; dressed decently and sewed up in their hammocks by the sailmaker. Round shot—to carry them to Davy Jones—went at their heads and feet—and all was ready.

"All hands bury the dead—"

It was almost the gloaming and the sky was no longer fair, but dark and lowering, with great piled masses of heavy clouds. A squall sprang up; "tarpaulins were hastily thrown over the corpses" and the watch shortened sail. The decks streamed water; the black guns dripped damp and ugly; fierce rain beat upon the canvas covering those who had once been men.

It was dark when the squall had ended and final preparations were complete. On the damp spar deck, with the wet sails drawing to the now faint sighing wind the crew of the Somers, chastened, solemn and subdued, gathered by the light of battle lanterns to read the last offices for the dead. They were on the booms and in the gangways and in the quarter-boat; gnarled hands of seamen pawed the flimsy pages of prayer-books and the voices of the young apprentices sing-songed "Amen." Even the prisoners in their chains whispered the responses. The lanterns, like flickering glow worms, lit up in auras of luminance a group of sun-tanned faces, a bit of deck, a triangle of wet canvas; while overhead, far, far above the towering tracery of rigging and dark sails, faint stars struggled through a rack of clouds.

The captain's voice read on: "We, therefore commend the souls of our brothers departed unto Almighty God and we commit their bodies to the deep—"

DULL splashes, louder than the slap of waves against the strakes, louder than the creak of cordage or the flap of canvas. Dull splashes, and the brig Somers sailed on.

The Somers arrived at Charlotte Amalie December 4, and stood into New York on December 14. She was isolated from shore; no visitors were allowed; eight more of the crew were arrested immediately upon arrival; Midshipman Perry proceeded at once to Washington with a report to the Secretary of the Navy, and Captain Mackenzie led the whole ship's company ashore to the nearest church.

It was not long before the story was out. James Fenimore Cooper wrote scathing castigations of Commander Mackenzie's conduct; Richard Henry Dana and Charles Sumner took up the cudgels in his behalf. Because of the prominence of Spencer's father, the case became something of a political issue; because of Mackenzie's excellent reputation as an officer and author, his actions found many supporters. There was a court of inquiry, followed by a court martial of Commander Mackenzie, on which some of the highest ranking officers in the navy sat in judgment. After a lengthy trial Mackenzie was acquitted, but not unanimously and the twelve of his crew he had arrested were released without the filing of charges.

Spencer's mother died of shock, believing her son innocent to the last; Cromwell's wife tried vainly to get retribution through the civil courts; Mackenzie, shaken by the blasts of criticism which followed him through life, died less than six years later, after distinguishing himself "in the land attack on Vera Cruz in the war with Mexico," and the brig Somers, scene of the most famous "mutiny" in the American Navy, foundered in a gale in 1846, carrying three midshipmen and thirty-seven of her crew with her.

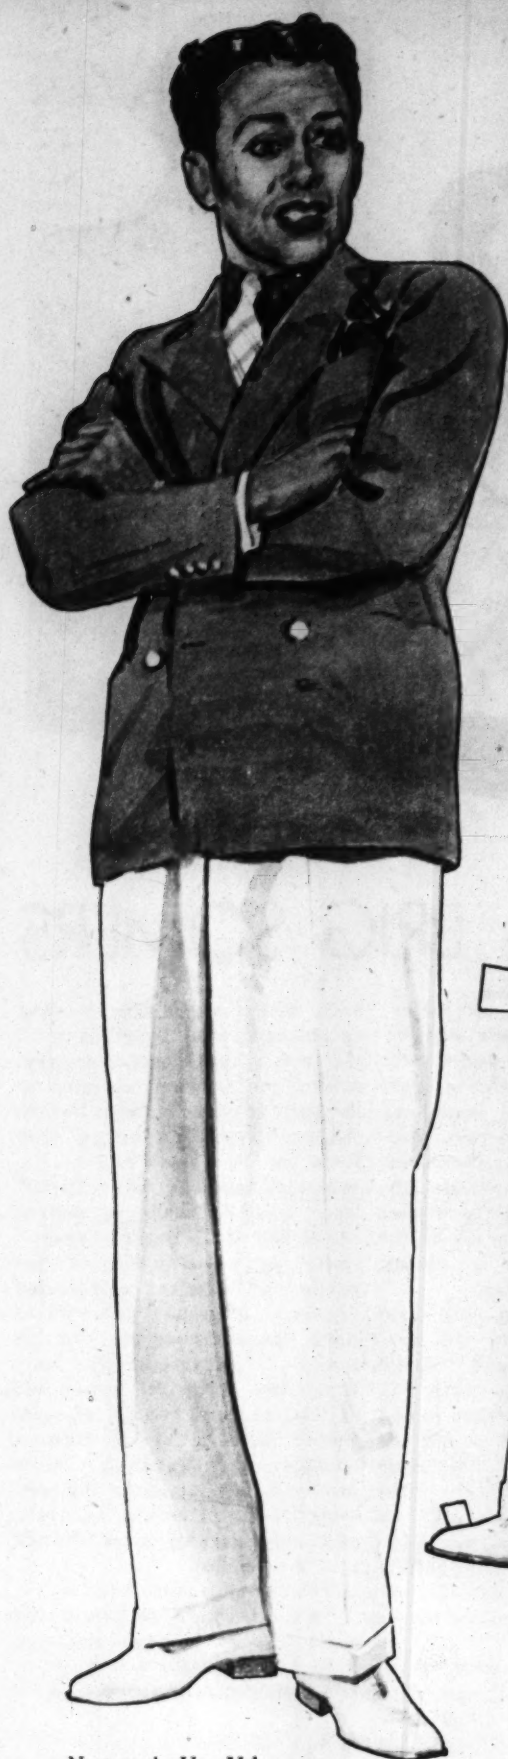

To posterity Mackenzie left his defense. "In the necessities of my position I found my law, and in them also I must trust to find my justification."

Bobby Jarvis

BOBBY JARVIS, today's selection from among the Municipal Opera players who will appear in this space during the Forest Park season, was born in Charlevoix, Michigan, had a trained dog act in vaudeville when 9 years old, attended The Principia in St. Louis, and started his career as a comedian with a stock company in Detroit. He has played in England and Australia as well as in many New York productions, including "The Desert Song," "Roberta" and "The Cat and the Fiddle." This is his first season in the Municipal Opera.

Accompanying Mr. Jarvis are three sets of costumes he wears in Municipal Opera shows. Cut out the player and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress him in his proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly. The three types of costumes shown here are worn by this actor in the following roles: 1—Benjamin Kidd in "The Desert Song," an operetta of the Riffian country; 2—Bobby Randall in "Good News," a collegiate comedy; 3—Ed Lovett in "Rio Rita," a romance of the Rio Grande.

Natives of Hickory Hollow.

Some time ago two queer little people from Mars were flying around the moon in an odd little flying machine. Their plane ran out of gas and landed on the moon's nose. The moon doesn't like anyone on his nose so he wiggled it and the flying machine tumbled off and glided down to Hickory Hollow. The queer little people got homesick. They didn't like the earth at all. So they made a wireless set and sent an S O S to Mars for gasoline. Mars got their message and sent a fast little rocket plane with the gas. We see this plane nearing the earth as

THE PLAY BEGINS

(The rocket plane sails over the treetops and a moment later lands at Hickory Hollow. Two queer little men get out and walk over to the stranded pair of Martians. One holds up a can of gasoline. The little man who sent the S O S bows low, while his wife smiles her appreciation. He empties the can into the tank of his own little flying machine, and in a few minutes they are all flying back to Mars. The queer little people wave their hands and shout. What they say means "Farewell, Hickory Hollow." The folks living in Hickory Hollow have been watching all this with great interest and when the planes become mere specks in the sky Prof. W. Wisdom watches them with his telescope.)

PROF. W. WISDOM—They are now flying around Mr. Moon, who doesn't seem to like them.

HARRY HOARDER—I'll bet he thinks they're going to land on his nose again.

O. HUM—Can you blame him for not liking it?

"I use MUM because it's QUICK"

THE busy woman's deodorant—that's what they're calling Mum, these days. For busy women have no time to waste, and they know they need waste none when they use Mum.

It takes just half a minute to use Mum. A quick fingertipful under this arm, under that, and you're safe for the whole day. As quick and simple as that!

Another thing busy women like about Mum—if you forget to use it before you dress, just use it afterwards. For it's harmless to clothing. It's soothing to the skin, too—so soothing you can shave your underarms and use Mum at once. Think of that!

Mum is sure and instant in effect. It prevents every trace of disagreeable body odor, without affecting the perspiration itself.

Quick, easy, sure and harmless! Is it any wonder busy women are so enthusiastic about the daily Mum habit? Have you formed this habit? Bristol-Myers, Inc., 75 West St., N. Y.

Most Bad Breath Begins with the Teeth!

WHY risk bad breath? When it is so easy to get at the most common cause—improperly cleaned teeth! Use Colgate Dental Cream! Its penetrating foam removes the decaying food deposits that lodge in the hidden crevices between your teeth—where ordinary cleaning methods fail to reach.

At the same time, a soft, grit-free ingredient gently, safely polishes the enamel—makes teeth sparkle. Get Colgate's today! And be sure that your teeth are always sparkling... that your breath is never offensive!

IF YOU PREFER POWDER... Colgate Dental Powder gives the same results, sells at the same low, money-saving prices, carries the same double-your-money-back guarantee.

NED BRANT By BOB ZUPPKE
DRAWN BY B. W. DEPEW

Baseball . . . By NED BRANT

THE SQUEEZE PLAY

EXECUTED properly, the squeeze play is almost certain to score a run. It is attempted when a run is needed badly and there are less than two out. Runner on third starts for the plate with the pitcher's windup. Batter must not fail to bunt the ball. At the unexpected bunt, the first baseman, third baseman and pitcher all race toward the plate. Second baseman hurries over to cover first. Shortstop would cover second if baserunner reached first safely and headed for second. The runner coming in from third has such a long start that a play on him at the plate is next to impossible.

NEXT WEEK Another Great Play

JANE ARDEN

by Monte Barrett and Russell E. Ross

KNOWING THAT SPARK DIDN'T FIND THE PLANS, JANE FEELS CERTAIN HE WILL RETURN TO SEARCH JOHNNY'S ROOM FOR THEM. SO SHE AND THE INSPECTOR—

JUNGLE JIM

BY ALEX RAYMOND

WHILE JIM AND JOAN SLEEP BY THEIR CAMPFIRE, A NATIVE STEALS THE MURDERED CRAIG ROMNEY'S DIARY, WHICH WAS TO AID JIM IN RESCUING PATRICIA ROMNEY AND HER BABY. A MILE DOWN THE RIVER AN UNHEMPT WHITE MAN AWAITS THE NATIVE.

ME GETTUM BOOK, MASSAH--ME HAVE HARD TIME, BUT ME--

SHUT UP AN' GIVE IT TO ME QUICK!

WHAT ARE YOU GOIN' TO DO? NO, NO, MASSAH! PLEASE!--

YOU'VE BEEN A GOOD SERVANT, NA-HI, BUT YOU KNOW TOO MUCH!

DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES!

I SAW YOU PUT THE DIARY IN YOUR KNAPSACK--DO YOU THINK IT WAS STOLEN?

IT LOOKS THAT WAY--WHOEVER STOLE IT MUST HAVE LEFT A TRAIL--LET'S SEE IF WE CAN LOCATE IT--

LOOK, JIM--SOMETHING STRETCHED OUT ON THE SAND--IT LOOKS LIKE A MAN!

THERE'S THE WHOLE STORY IN THE SAND--SCRAWLED WHILE HE WAS DYING!--I STOLE BOOK--GAVE IT TO HAWK BRUDER--HE SHOOT ME--

AT DAYBREAK--JIM AND JOAN BREAK CAMP PREPARATORY TO TAKING UP THE TRAIL OF THE RIVER. PIRATES AND THEIR CAPTIVES, PATRICIA ROMNEY AND HER BABY--

FLASH GORDON

By ALEXANDER RAYMOND

DRIVEN FROM AZURA'S PALACE, FLASH, DALE AND ZARKOV FLEE TO A SMALL HOVEL--A HERDSMAN ORDERS THEM AWAY.

DESPERATELY IN NEED OF SHELTER FROM THE SHARP EYES OF AZURA'S SCOUT PATROL, FLASH CLOSES IN ON THE PEASANT AND DROPS HIM WITH A SINGLE BLOW!

WE JUST GOT HERE IN TIME--THERE GOES A PATROL OF MAGIC MEN SEARCHING FOR US!

OH, FLASH, YOU COULD HAVE RULED SYH IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR ME!

I'D RATHER HAVE YOU THAN SIX KINGDOMS!

WHAT'LL WE EVER DO? ESCAPE FROM THIS WILD LAND IS IMPOSSIBLE--AND WE COULDN'T HOPE TO CONQUER AZURA UNAIDED.

IF I COULD ONLY FINISH MY MACHINE FOR BENDING AND DESTROYING LIGHT--

WHAT DO YOU NEED? I'LL RAID ONE OF AZURA'S SIGNAL STATIONS.

FLASH, WITH A LIST OF THE REQUIRED MACHINERY, MOUNTS THE PEASANT'S HORSE AND SETS OUT ON HIS PERILOUS MISSION.

AT DAWN--

OH, THANK HEAVEN, HE'S SAFE--I WAS SO WORRIED!--

HE MUST HAVE TAKEN ANOTHER HORSE AND A CART FROM THE GARRISON--THAT LAD IS SUPERB!

AFTER TWO DAYS AND NIGHTS OF FEVERISH WORK, FLASH AND ZARKOV COMPLETE THE LIGHT-MACHINE--FLASH TAKES HIS PLACE ON A PLATFORM--

NEXT WEEK "THE AVENGING SHADOW!"

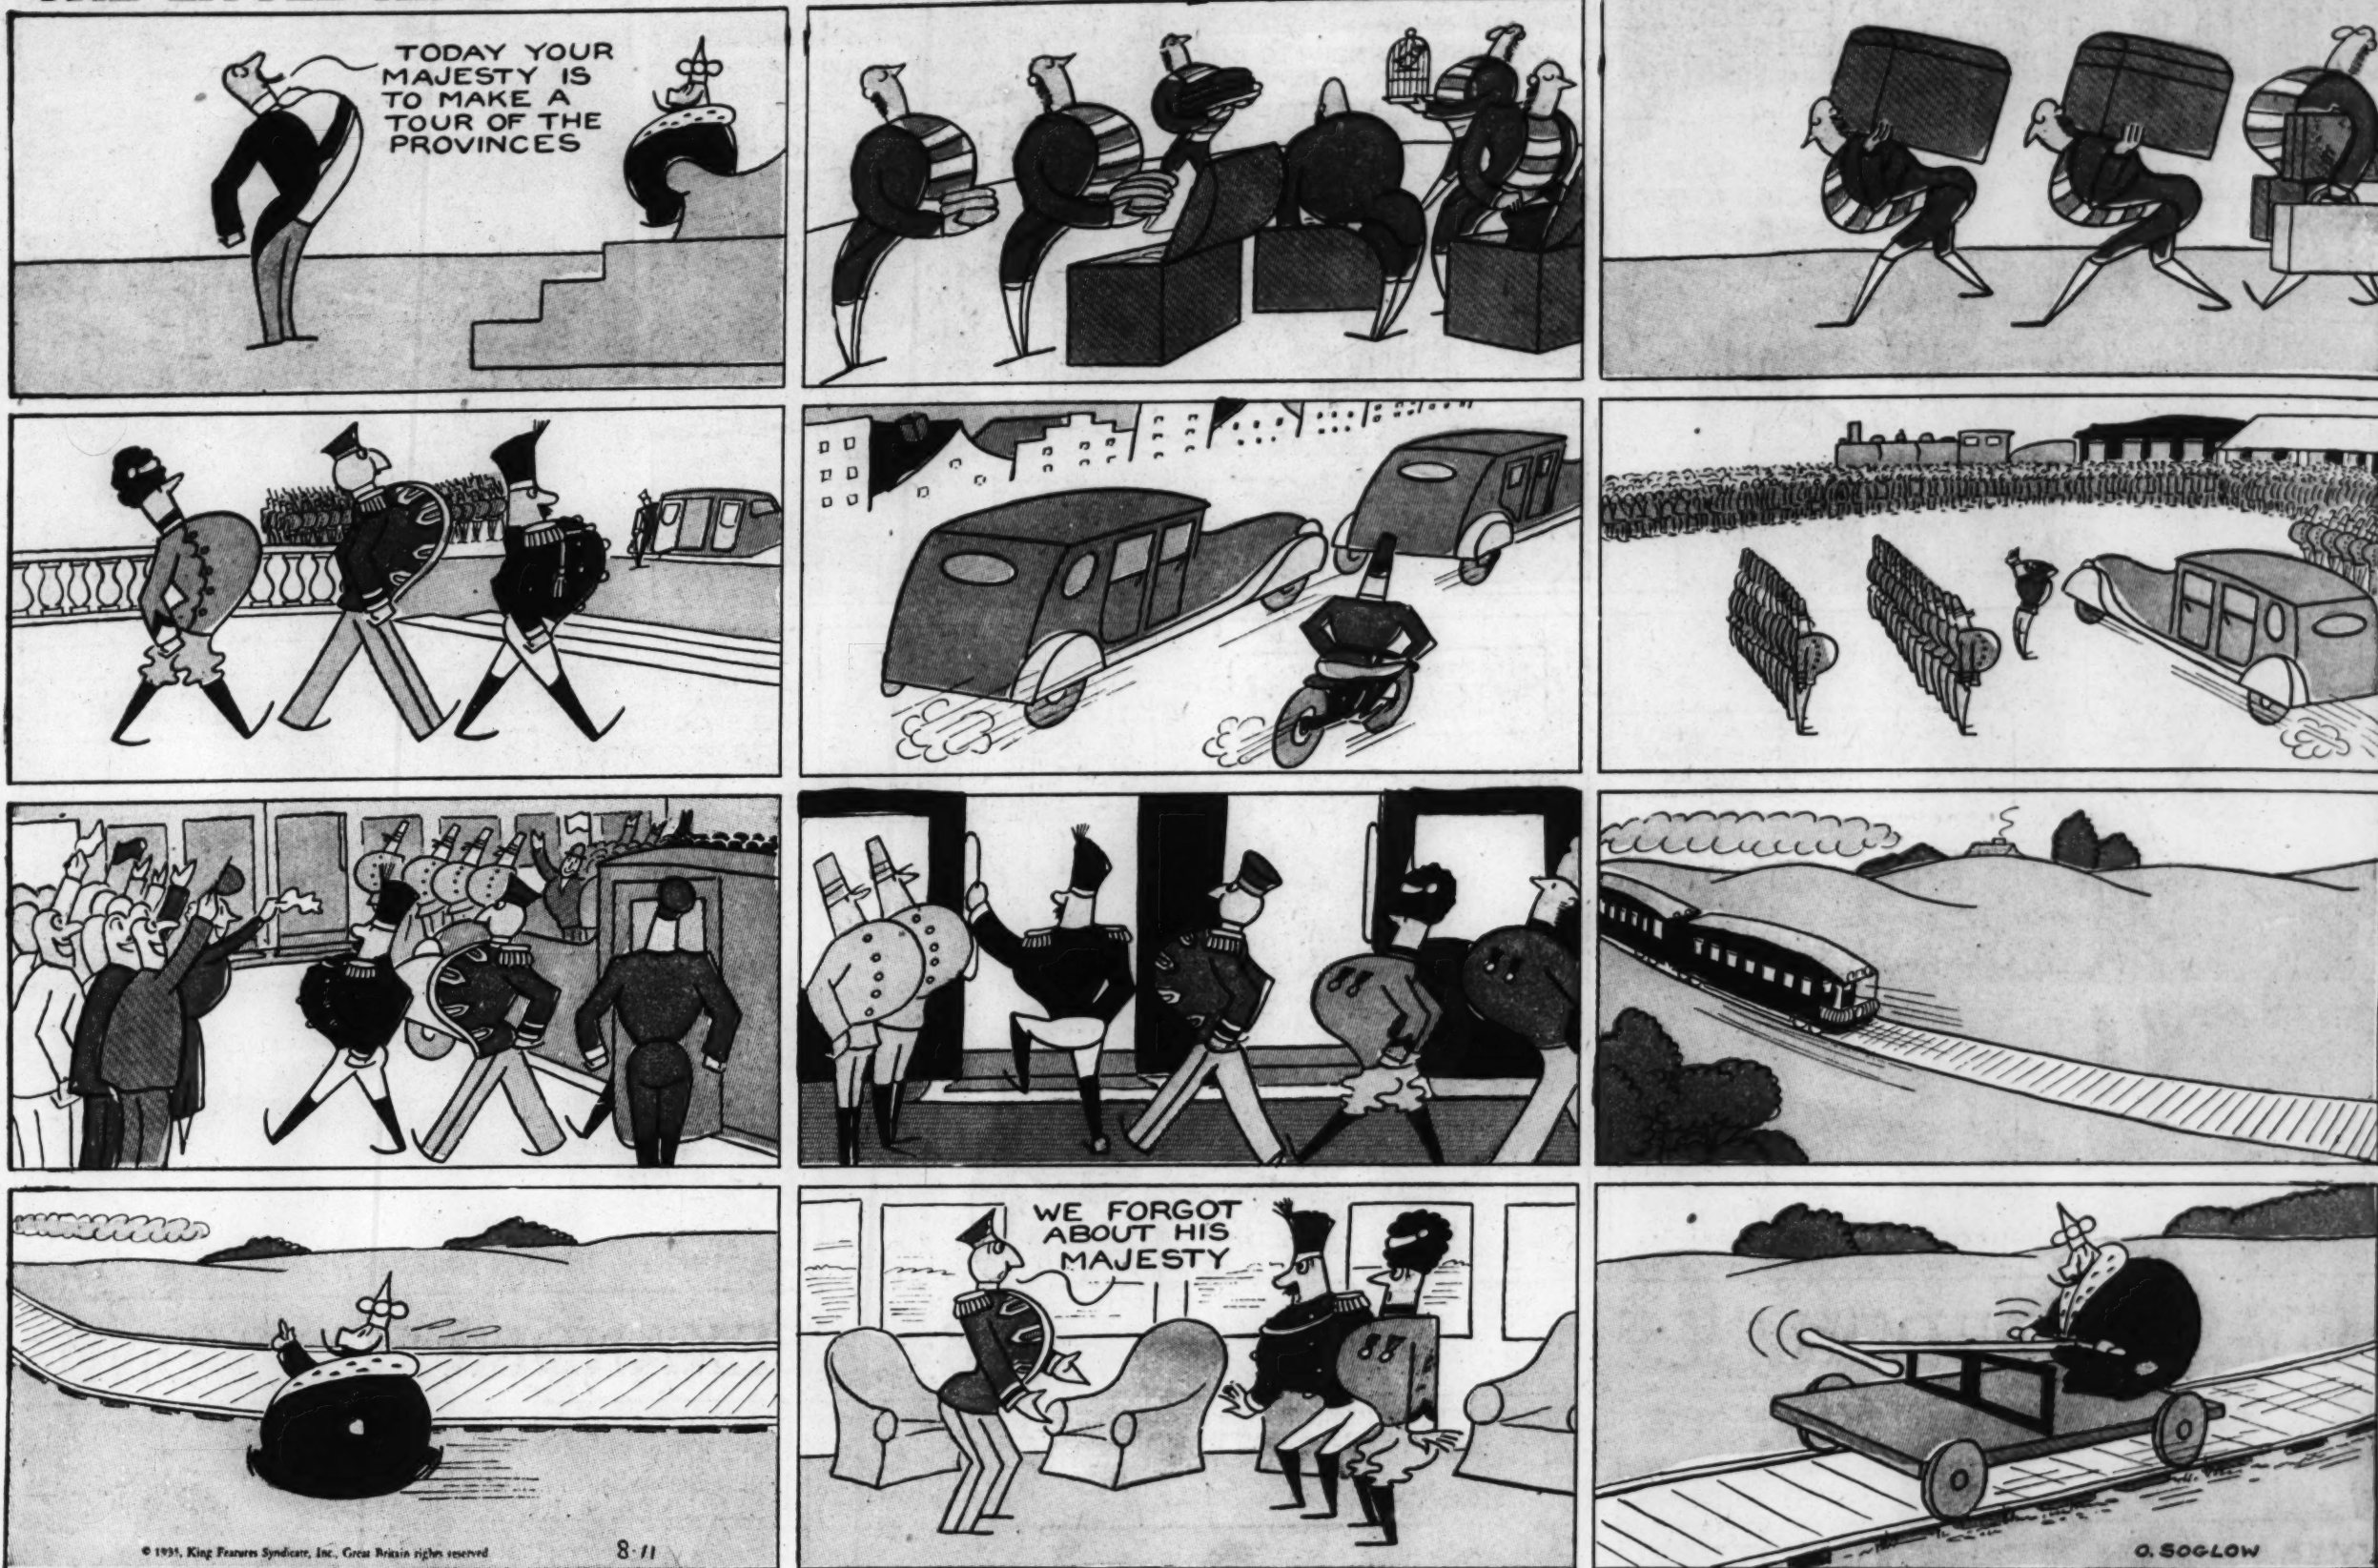

ZARKOV THROWS THE SWITCH--A HUGE BLUE SPARK LEAPS FROM THE ELECTRODES--FLASH SLOWLY DISAPPEARS FROM VIEW--ONLY HIS SHADOW REMAINS!
